Lang of Northwest Texas Hi-Jackers Arrested in Crowell Monday Morning

OUR CONFESS ROBBERIES IN THIS SECTION

Identity of hi-jackers who are robbing station operators and passengers at Crowell, Chillicothe, and Childress in recent days was solved here Monday afternoon when Attorney Ed Gossett of Fort Worth arrested a party from four of six men arrested about 10:30 Monday morning by Sheriff R. J. Thomas. One of the men, Sergio J. St. Angelo of New York City, Guy Edwards of Quannah and Bill Scarborough of Miami, Florida, signed confessions at Crowell, Chillicothe and Childress. Don Ed. Edwards of Bowie, cousin of Guy, confessed to taking part with the three in the hi-jacking of a bus station Sunday night. A. Fox of Crowell, O. L. Boswell of Chillicothe, C. H. Nowlin and Howard Hackler of Childress, victims of the hi-jacking, were in Crowell Monday morning and identified the men who had robbed and kidnapped them. Victims of Northwest Texas hi-jacking on the look-out for a marooned 1935 Pontiac coach used in hi-jackings. While talking to L. W. Lilly Monday morning Sheriff Thomas' attention was attracted to a car answering the description as being headed east of Crowell. He and Mr. Lilly proceeded to the machine and succeeded in stopping it near the Martin turn-off at the east edge of Crowell. Six occupants were returned to the county jail. Four pistols, including an Oklahoma license (418-479) used in some of the hi-jackings, were found in the car at the time of the arrest. The car had a Florida license, 5484. After reaching Foard County Sunday night a cracked engine motor caused the car to stop near Bowie, and it was towed by the machine to a few miles to the Jake station and tourist camp 12 west of Crowell, where the car was left. The next morning Mr. Stepp used his car to tow the engine trouble was corrected. Self Motor Co. and the machine and its six occupants had been there when discovered by Sheriff Thomas. System Grocery. Work of remodeling the store and placing of stock has taken place during the past ten days. J. W. Before opening his own store at Tulia four years ago, Mr. Kelllogg was manager of Woolworth's store at Wichita Falls for eight years. WILDCATS IN SECOND WEEK OF PRACTICE

The Crowell Wildcats are now in their second week of practice for the 1935 football season. Last week the names of 37 boys who had reported for practice were listed. Since then seven more have been added to the list as follows: John Lee Orr, Garland Rasberry, Ike Wilson, James Erwin, Garrett Middlebrook, William Simmons and Bernice Fitzgerald. While it is too early to accurately judge the possibilities of most of the gridsters, indications are that Crowell's regular team and the "B" squad are going to provide mighty tough competition for the teams they play this fall. With ten letter men and promising new material the Wildcats again have possibilities of making a fine showing in the district, however, interest of local fans will not be centered upon the regulars alone this year, for the "B" squad is going to have a dandy team of its own and much interest is being taken in the race for positions on it. Two games each have already been matched with the "B" squads of Vernon and Quannah for the local "B" squad and other games will be secured. Gilbert Lankford has been named manager of the Wildcat gridsters. His duties in assisting the coaches, Grady Graves and Walker Todd, in looking after uniforms, equipment and various other details, will prove very valuable during the season.

Former Resident's Honeymoon Ends In Tragedy in Arizona

Death Tuesday tragically ended the honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hunter of Abilene when the bride died of a wound received when she was shot accidentally by her husband. They were on the way to Grand Canyon. Mr. Hunter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hunter, who live five miles north of Crowell, and spent most of his life in this community before going to Abilene several years ago, where he had since been associated with the Hilton Hotel of that city. At the time of the tragic accident, the wedding couple was being accompanied in another car by Mrs. Hunter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Manly of Crown King, Arizona. Mr. Manly advised his son-in-law to unload a gun he was carrying, a requirement upon entering the park. Mr. Hunter stepped on the running board to get the gun and as he raised the hammer to turn the cylinder and poke out the cartridge, it discharged, the bullet passing through his bride's abdomen. A short time later she died in Mercy Hospital at Flagstaff. Max Miller, justice of the peace, said no inquest would be held as evidence showed the shooting was accidental. The marriage of Ralph Hunter to Miss Allie Manly took place at Abilene Aug. 8. A card from the couple to Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hunter this week indicated that they planned to reach Crowell today before returning to Abilene. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hunter and Mrs. G. H. Hannah of Electra, aunt of Mrs. Hunter, left this morning for Sweetwater to meet the train returning Mrs. Ralph Hunter's body to Abilene, where funeral services will be held Friday afternoon.

Proper Care of Teeth Vital to Good Health

Austin, Texas, Sept. 5.—About nine out of every ten persons in the United States have something wrong with their teeth. At least eight of each ten have caries, or dental decay. A long list of other maladies, including the famous "pyothia," is to be discovered in even a casual examination of the teeth in any community. Why do so many people suffer the misery of bad teeth? Dental research in recent years has revealed that the real trouble is the diet and other health habits of civilized folk, and not civilization itself. We may be both civilized and have good teeth. The teeth are living organs, and must be nourished, like any other part of the body. They are composed principally of calcium, a mineral found in great abundance in milk. Hence the insistence of dental scientists on the use of greater amounts of milk in the diet. It is also important to preserve the general bodily health, for dental decay often begins during periods of general ill health. Teeth of mothers are also particularly liable to decay during pregnancy, hence at this time particular attention should be paid to the diet, after consultation with a physician. Another important time for teeth health is in infancy and early childhood. Children should have plenty of milk, should receive some Vitamin D, food, and should be permitted to play in the sunlight as often as possible. For dental decay is not a simple disease; it has many causes, and its treatment does not depend on the dentist alone, but on every person who wants to improve the health of his teeth.

WHEN OIL GIVES OUT

For several years the great problem of the oil industry has been to keep down production resulting from the discovery of rich new fields, especially in Texas.

This condition may not long exist, however, according to estimates by Dr. L. C. Snider, an eminent geologist, and Dr. B. T. Brooks, a consulting chemical engineer, who believe a shortage may be expected in eight years or less.

They place the probable oil reserves of the United States at between 10 and 12 billion barrels, or between 10 and 14 years' supply at the present rate of consumption.

Similar warnings have been heard frequently in the past, but so far it has always happened that when one oil field played out other and larger ones were discovered.

Substitute fuels from oil-shale, hydrogenated coal fuel, and alcohol fuel can be produced at present, but their cost precludes their general use so long as crude oil is plentiful.

LAWYERS EYE NEW DEAL

Now that Congress has adjourned to give the country four months' respite until it reassembles next January, national interest is centered largely on what fate much New Deal legislation will meet at the hands of the United States Supreme Court.

Frankly hostile to much of this legislation, the American Liberty League, composed of both Democrats and Republicans, is having a study of these laws made by a committee of 56 outstanding lawyers, who will give their views as to their constitutionality.

Among the 56 are John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President in 1924; James M. Beck, former Republican Congressman and for four years solicitor-general of the United States; Joseph B. Ely, former Democratic governor of Massachusetts; David A. Reed, former Republican Senator, and others of high prominence in the legal profession.

This committee of lawyers will divide themselves into subcommittees, each presumably to study a particular law, or certain provisions of it, and the opinions reached by them are to be published, probably monthly. These opinions, of course, will have no official significance, but they will doubtless be used as bases for attacks to be made on the constitutionality of several of the measures to be examined.

THE PUBLIC FORGOT

For business men who appear to think the public does not need to be constantly reminded of who they are, where they are, and what they have to sell, the well-known story of what happened to a product called Pyle's Pearlina will bear repeating.

In the early years of this century, Pearlina, a cleaning material, was used by most of the housewives of the country. In 1904 the company spent $500,000 in advertising. Then the advertising was greatly curtailed and about 1907 it was discontinued altogether, as the company thought the product was so well known that no further advertising was necessary.

Sales fell off rapidly, but the company's owners persisted in their non-advertising policy until 1915, when the whole concern was sold for $12,000. Pearlina was dead.

Many other products whose names were household words a few years ago are no longer sold because the manufacturers failed to keep up their advertising, and consequently the public forgot them.

Business men should remember that new generations of potential customers are coming along all the time, and that these new buyers must be sold on a product or a store, as their fathers and mothers were before them.

The only time it is safe to stop advertising is when one is ready to go out of business.

THE CHARTER OAK

The recent issue of a memorial 3-cent postage stamp bearing a picture of Connecticut's famous Charter Oak recalls the historic preservation of the colony's charter and commemorates the founding of the first permanent settlement 300 years ago.

While the tercentennial is being celebrated this year, a trading post was established at the present site of Hartford by the Dutch from New Amsterdam (New York) in 1633. This was shortly sold to the English colonists, who settled at Wethersfield in 1634, and at Windsor and Hartford in 1635. The three towns adopted the first written Constitution in the New World in 1639.

A liberal charter for the colony was granted by Charles II in 1662. In 1687, James II sought to take away the charter, and sent Sir Edmund Andros to Hartford as the royal governor, but the assembly refused to surrender the charter, hiding the document in the hollow of the historic tree henceforth known as the Charter Oak.

When James II was dethroned and fled to France in 1689, the charter was brought from hiding and the Connecticut colony resumed government under its provisions, which had been suspended by Andros for about a year and a half.

Such is the tradition of the hiding of the charter in its trunk exerts, and the story rests upon doubtful authority. There was a large oak in Hartford to which the incident was ascribed, however, and it stood there, an object of veneration, until 1856.

ZERO IN ACCURACY

Describing a celebration held at the close of the Spanish-American War, a recent writer in a Philadelphia newspaper said:

"Among those who caused the crowds to go wild were Lieutenant Richmond P. Hobson, who bottled up the Spanish warships in Havana harbor by sinking the Merrimac, of Civil War fame, there."

The facts are that Hobson did not bottle up the Spanish fleet; the incident referred to occurred in Santiago harbor, the Havana harbor and the Merrimac was not the ship of that name which fought the Monitor during the Civil War.

Thus the Philadelphia writer, in the sentence quoted, attained absolute zero in accuracy.

In June, 1893, the main Spanish fleet, commanded by Admiral Cervera, lay in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba, blockaded by the American fleet under Admiral Sampson. Lieutenant Hobson (now a retired admiral) obtained permission to attempt to close the mouth of the harbor by sinking an old navy collier, the Merrimac, at the entrance.

The attempt was made on June 3 in the face of the Spanish shore batteries, and the Merrimac was sunk, but the ship drifted too far to one side of the channel, and the brave exploit was not a success. Hobson and his crew of seven swam ashore and were held prisoners until exchanged about a month later.

The Spanish fleet came out of the harbor on the morning of July 3 in a desperate effort to escape, and every ship was sunk by the American fleet.

Although Hobson failed to accomplish his purpose, he does not in the least detract from the heroism displayed by him and his little crew, and they deserved all the plaudits bestowed upon them by the nation.

METHODIST UNITY

At a joint conference of three principal branches of the Methodist Church, held recently in Evanston, Ill., another plan for bringing all three into a single reunited body was proposed, and is believed to have good prospects for success.

The three branches concerned are the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern branch), the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church. Their union would bring into the United Methodist Church, the name suggested for the new body, about eight million communications, 20 million constituents, and property valued at about one billion dollars. It would be the largest Protestant denomination in the United States.

There would be more than 35,000 churches, with 29,000 ordained ministers and about 19,500 local preachers. It is estimated that the operating budget of the United Methodist Church would be about 100 million dollars annually.

Efforts to bring about such a union have been made for many years without success, but the 45 commissioners who participated in the latest joint conference are optimistic over the present outlook. The new plan would require ratification by the general conferences of the three branches concerned before it could be put into effect.

CROWELL CLUB WINS 4-2 OVER TRUSCOTT NINE

Crowell eliminated Truscott by the score of 4 to 2 in one of the Cotton Belt Shaughnessy play-off games here Sunday afternoon. The game was one of the most thrilling played before a large crowd.

Jake Myers of Truscott and Wm. Bell of Crowell hooked up in a pitchers' duel, each allowing only seven hits. Bell was at his best when Truscott had runners on bases, striking out 8 men.

Two home runs by Jimmy LaRue and Charlie Ashford played a big part in Crowell's victory.

Dennis Eubanks played a sensational game in center field for Truscott and helped Myers to hold down the Crowell score. Besides pitching a good game, Myers connected for two doubles, one triple and scored both of the Truscott runs.

While both teams fielded sensationally, the Crowell infield clicked beautifully. A fast double play, Sloan to Ashford to Graves, resulted in the first inning to retire the side.

Bell pitched one of his best games in the year and his work improved as the game progressed. In the ninth inning he struck out the last two batters to wind up the game.

Express Thanks for Vote on Commitment of Insane in Texas

To the Readers of The News: Those of us who have the direct responsibility of the care of the mentally ill take this method of expressing to you our appreciation of the overwhelming majority of votes you gave last Saturday to the constitutional amendment providing for temporary commitment without trial.

Texas has until very recent years been several generations behind the rest of the world in the care of mentally ill, and hardly attempted treatment until the past decade. But this magnificent vote for progress and the sane and scientific care and treatment of those who are so unfortunate as to become mentally ill encourages us to think that the citizenship of our state is now awake to the possibilities for curing this type of disease and anxious for any reform that is scientific or logical.

Being thus encouraged we are going to come to you again at the next regular session of the legislature or perhaps one of the special sessions and ask you to vote for and support another reform along this line and assure you that it will not be some one's foolish idea, but a step toward progress that has been in use in other parts of this and other countries for many years for which those of us who understand the problem have been working and fighting for a long time.

Methods to Control Cotton Leaf Worm Offered by C. Agent

In many sections of the county considerable damage is resulting from the cotton leaf worm, according to reports reaching the office of the county agent, Fred Renfels. The following advice in controlling the leaf worm is furnished by the county agent.

Calcium arsenate is the best method for controlling the leaf worm. It may be used either as a spray or by dusting. Due to the fact that there is not generally a sufficient amount of dew to make the dust stick to the cotton, spraying is preferred.

In spraying, calcium arsenate should be mixed with water at the rate of two pounds to fifty gallons. This should be applied with any spray equipment capable of atomizing a fine spray coating to the leaf. As calcium arsenate tends to settle out, the mixture should be kept well agitated while being applied.

There seems to be at this time an acute shortage of calcium arsenate. In the event it is impossible to secure calcium arsenate, a formula is given below which has been used with success by some farmers, however, due to the fact that it sometimes burns the plant, it is not recommended when calcium arsenate can be obtained. The formula follows:

Boil one pound of white arsenic with one pound of sal soda in one gallon of water. Soft water is preferred. The arsenic is dissolved, which usually requires about fifteen minutes. Some water will be lost by boiling through evaporation; more should be added to make one gallon exactly.

Three pints of the above stock solution should be used to fifty gallons of water.

Large drops of this mixture will burn the leaves, consequently the spray should be used that breaks the liquid up into a very fine mist.

It should be kept in mind that white arsenic is very poisonous and should be kept away from children and livestock.

Demonstration of Case Tractors Next Week Near Lockett

A tractor demonstration, using five tractors with a different implement on each tractor will take place Thursday and Friday, Sept. 12-13, on the Carl Haseloff farm on the Lockett road, six miles southwest of Vernon. The demonstration is sponsored by the Claude Barry Implement Co. of Vernon, dealer for Case tractors and implements.

Mr. Barry and Claude Moyers, who are with the business at Vernon, were in Crowell Wednesday in company with C. W. Jones of Dallas, assistant branch manager for the J. L. Case Company. While here they made arrangements to publicize the demonstration in this area.

They stated that one feature of the demonstration would be the operation for the first time in this section of a Case pick-up hay baler, a machine that picks up hay from windrows, putting it right into bales.

Who Pays for ADVERTISING?

Contrary to public opinion, it is not the advertiser himself, because if he did so the incentive for extensive advertising would be lost.

Does the consumer pay the cost? Certainly not. If he could buy more economically from the non-advertiser he would do so. Most people prefer and demand advertised products, and buy locally from consistent advertisers.

The Non-Advertiser Pays for Advertising!

Seemingly a paradox, the statement is nevertheless true. Advertising is paid for in increased volume and the volume comes from business taken away from competitors.

The cost of investment in advertising is not added to the cost of the product because the advertiser increases his sales, and sells at a corresponding saving because he enjoys quantity buying, quick turn-over, and actually makes more money on a smaller margin of profit due to the increased volume.

"I might do some help here," Bart still protested. Marm Pierce spoke to Saladi- "Set down, you," she bade him. "I can rub that ankle of yours. And then, over her shoulder, to Bart still protesting. "Well then, go out in the hen pen and get me some feathers." "Feathers?" he echoed. "I'll burn 'em under her nose. Might make her gasp and gag and start breathing. Don't stand there arguing. Go along with you!"

So Bart went out through the shed, and Saladi- said gravely: "Ma'am, this ankle of mine can wait, if you can be doing anything for her." "There's nought to do for Huldy Ferrin now," she told him in slow tones, and tossed her head. "And I dunno as I'd do it if there was! But I'll have to wait till the pot boils, anyhow. Might as well be doing this as setting here."

He suggested: "You sent Carey to get some feathers. If there's no chance, why..." She retorted: "I got fidgety with him hanging around." And after a silent moment she looked toward the dining room, as though her thoughts turned that way.

Saladi- asked: "How do you reckon Mis' Merrin come to fall?" "I want to know," said old Marm Pierce, and Jim stirred in quick attention. The phrase was usual enough, as an expression of surprise and interest and wonder; yet Saladi- thought her accent and her intonation had not been usual.

There was a step in the shed, and Bart returned. She looked over her shoulder, saw him empty-handed. "Where's them feathers?" she demanded. Bart seemed faintly to hesitate. "I couldn't find a dry one anywhere," he declared. "The rain has wet them all!"

She protested irritably: "Land sakes, I sh'd think you could find a dry one somewhere! You come along with me!" And she said to Jim, pointing toward the stove: "Let that boil up good, and then set it to cool. I'll be back in a minute to try it on her."

THE FOARD COUNTY NEWS

I'm opening the door," she called, and waited a moment and then made good her word. So they came into the dining room, and learned that Huldy was dead; and when Jenny said there was some one in the Win-side of the house, Saladi- remembered that sound of a falling chair; and there seemed to him something hideous in the thought that any one should prow through those moldering and empty rooms while a woman here was dying. But Bart said reassuringly:

"That's likely Win, Granny. He stayed at my place last night. He set out to go to Liberty this morning, but he might stop by here!" The old woman assented scornfully: "He would if he was drunk enough! You go along, Bart, and fetch Will, and don't waste no more time."

So Bart at last departed; but Saladi- paid no particular attention to his going. He was watching Jenny, puzzled by something in her eyes he could not read. He had seen in her a while ago deep terror, unmistakable; yet now it was gone. She had put on composure, and a steady courage; and he wondered, and wished to read her mind.

There was nothing to keep Saladi- here; yet he stayed, and with a sense of waiting, an acute expectancy. He thought more and more of Jenny, remembering her terror at the sight of death, and the shadow in her eyes. Life for her must in the end center about some man. Bart Carey, perhaps? Bart stood straight, and his eye was bold and strong. It was suddenly strange to Saladi- that Bart and Jenny were not married long ago. They were neighbors, of a like age, both comely with the splendor of youth, their interests akin. Between them no obstacle appeared.

Unless old Marm Pierce were an obstacle? Yet Saladi- thought she had met Bart kindly today, treated him with courtesy. This might be guile; she might, while appearing to approve, nevertheless check in every possible way the tendency of these two lives to flow together. Inconsequently, Saladi- recalled the heavy rostock of the water lily, which Jenny had fetched that morning from the brook. Some shadow of a forgotten memory stirred in him, and was gone without recognition; yet this memory would recur. It was one of the intangibles which made the whole of this day like a disordered dream.

The root itself was tangible enough; yet there were implications in it, just as there were implications in that peg leg Will Ferrin wore, and the cowboy hat so pauntily set a-top the growed and humble head of Zeke Dace, and the boot prints on the fisherman's trail beside the brook, which had somehow ended without Saladi-'s remarking where they turned aside.

But most of all he thought of Huldy, and wondered how she came to fall to her death this day. Then suddenly the dining room door opened, and Jenny came out into the kitchen, the old woman following her. "I'd best go myself," Jenny insisted; and Saladi- saw a sort of stubborn haste in her eyes.

Marm Pierce protested: "Like enough Will and Bart will remember to bring something." "Not Will," Jenny retorted. Her voice was gentle as she spoke the name. "A man wouldn't think of it. And it isn't for men to do, anyway. Rummaging through her things." She took down a heavy oilskin coat from behind the kitchen door. "I'll go myself," she said. "If I meet Will, I'll have him come on here, case you need anything. I'll get what's wanted and fetch it."

Saladi- asked: "Anything I can do?" But Jenny said: "I'm going after some clothes for her. The ones she's got on are all wet. I could dress her in something of mine, but she wouldn't want that. She'd want her own things. You stay here with Granny," she requested, and he nodded.

Then she was gone. CHAPTER VIII When Jenny, thus departing, left Saladi- and Marm Pierce alone, the old woman seemed for a moment almost embarrassed. She looked at Jim with her small bright eyes.

"I'll boil up a cup of tea," she declared. "It's past dinner time, and I'm hungry. 'Lov you could eat a bit your own self." She filled the kettle at the pump in the sink and clapped it on the stove. Bread from the pantry, jam, butter from the cellar, and a bit of salt pork and some cold boiled potatoes to slice and fry in the sweet fat.

"Jenny's a fine girl," Saladi- suggested presently. "It's a wonder she ain't married." Marm Pierce looked at him with eyes suddenly shrewd. "You said Huldy Ferrin showed you the path down to the brook," she remembered. "Go back to the house when you left her, did she?"

"I don't know," he replied. "I looked up, from down below, and saw her still there." "Jenny told me," she said, "that you claimed somebody had fished down brook ahead of you."

"I saw tracks in the trail," he assented. Rain began to drive against the windows, against the glass panel in the door. She said: "Well, everything's ready. You can set down!"

He perceived in her the pent garrulity of a lonely old woman who too seldom has an audience; and while she ate, he encouraged her, skillfully, to speech. Marm Pierce, at first guardedly and then warming to her theme, told him about Jenny and Will. Once she was well started, he listened without interruption, finding in what she said the explanation of much that he had seen today.

"She didn't know the meaning of it, first off," the old woman concluded. "Didn't know what was happening to her. She wa'n't but a girl then." And added: "But Jenny's grown to be a woman now." She broke off, seemed to listen; and he asked softly: "Hear something?" "Nothing, likely," she said after a moment. "Seemed like I heard some one in the barn. Like as not it was that no-good brother of mine."

think of her?" "She was a queer one," Saladi- ne confessed. Bart leaned forward with a deep intentness. "Saladi-," he said. "How would she come to fall?" "Got dizzy, maybe? Or tripped over something?"

"She wa'n't the sort to get dizzy," Bart protested. "And—the ledge is all smooth, and it's good footing there." "You mean to say she jumped?" Bart grinned almost in derision. "She look to you like one that would kill herself, did she? He demanded. Those deep scratches on his cheek where a branch had raked his wet black against the brown of his skin.

"No," Saladi- admitted. "No, she didn't." "Then put a name on it," Bart whispered. "If she didn't fall, and didn't jump..." But Saladi- was always inclined to think twice before he spoke, and there was matter enough for thought here today. He shook his head, silently.

Bart—though they were quite alone—whispered: "There ain't a soul around here would blame Will!" But Saladi- stared silently at the stove, and Bart did not repeat his sinister suggestion; and a little after, Marm Pierce came briskly in.

"Well, you've let the fire go out, between you," she said sharply. "This was almost true. She whisked off a lid of the stove and thrust a billet in, scolding them impartially. She hung up her coat and hat. "Wet to the knees, I am. Got to go change."

She left them, departing through the dining room; and Bart's glance flicked after her through the open door, as though his eyes were drawn irresistibly that way. Then the two men sat alone a while, till Saladi- heard a familiar sound, remotely, coming near. He rose and moved to the door, Bart at his shoulder.

"It's Will Ferrin," Saladi- remarked. "And Jenny. In my car." And Bart said in a low, surprised tone: "So 'tis! I didn't know but Will would've got out of the country by now!"

Saladi-, to avoid reply, opened the door and stepped out on the porch. Then Will and Jenny, Will with an old suitcase in his hand, alighted from the car and came toward them here.

When Huldy, with that black accusation on her lips, died, Jenny was at first left desperate; till quick loyalty brought her strength again, and resolution to Marm Pierce, seeing without understanding the girl's deep distress, as soon as they were alone asked gently: "Jenny, you all right? I'm troubled about you."

"Seeing her die upset me," Jenny whispered. "That was all, Granny." Marm Pierce, only half convinced, yet forebore to question further. "Well, she's dead," she said. She touched Jenny's arm reassuringly. "Child, she's dead; and Will, he'll be coming soon. Nought now to keep him away from you..."

Jenny's pulse failed and the blood drained from her lips. "Don't, Granny," she protested softly. "With her laying there. Not now." And she urged: "We'd ought to dress her in dry clothes. Will, he hadn't ought to see her so."

Marm Pierce nodded. Jenny's thoughts were plunging now. There was in her a blind desperate hunger to see Will, to comfort

Even when she proposed this errand, Marm Pierce at first demurred; but longing to be with Will, Jenny would not be restrained. In a sort of breathless rush, she overbore her grandmother's remonstrances, and so was away.

Columbian Club's Initial Meeting Was Held Wednesday

The Columbian Club met in the initial meeting of the club year on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Marion Hughton as hostess.

Mrs. H. Schindler presided and the incoming president, Mrs. B. W. Self, gave a splendid address with greetings to the members and plans for the year's work. The program for the afternoon was a travelogue which was given by Mrs. J. R. Beverly, who has recently returned from a trip to the Hawaiian Islands. Preceding her talk, several Hawaiian songs were rendered by a quartet composed of Misses Mary Elizabeth Hughton, Geraldine Carter, Doris Oswald and Peggy Cooper, accompanied by Mrs. A. L. Rucker. They wana Hawaiian leis. Then, little Paula Plunkett, attired in the regular Hawaiian costume, sang "Hawaiian Sunshine" and played her own accompaniment on the ukelele.

Mrs. Beverly also wore leis. The lei means "aloha" as a welcome and as a farewell and is symbolic of friendship and hospitality, at all times. Mrs. Beverly gave a vivid, intensely interesting account of her trip, beginning with the boat trip from Los Angeles to Honolulu and giving historical facts and outstanding features of interest concerning the places she visited. She emphasized the beauty of the scenery, the wonderful climate and the cordial hospitality of the people. She had numbers of pictures, illustrative of her talk, as well as articles typical of the country.

A large number of members was present and the following guests: Misses J. P. Plunkett, Rob Cooper, T. S. Haney, W. D. Howell, T. M. Beverly, Paul Shirley, John Roberts and Misses Peggy Cooper, Doris Oswald, Geraldine Carter and Mary Elizabeth Hughton and Paula Plunkett.

A delicious ice course, in the club colors, was served.

HONOR MR. AND MRS. CLARY

As a compliment to Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Clary and sons of Dalhart a covered dish dinner was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Hollingsworth last Friday night.

Following the dinner, games and conversation were enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Clary and family formerly resided here, Mr. Clary being in the employ of the West Texas Utilities Company.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE

Mrs. G. M. Canup and Mrs. J. L. Farrar were hostesses to a lovely miscellaneous shower given last Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. L. Farrar, in the Foard City community, honoring Mrs. David Scott, formerly Miss Gertrude Connell.

On entering, the guests registered in the bride's book, and were served to punch by Miss Hazel Canup. Mrs. Fred Dennis gave a toast to the bride after which the program was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Barker and Mrs. Clarence Barker.

Following the program a large number of beautiful and useful gifts were presented to the bride. The guests were again served to punch before leaving.

MRS. ADAMS HONORED

Mrs. M. O'Connell and Mrs. O. O. Hollingsworth were hostesses at the home of Mrs. Hollingsworth last Friday night at a bridge party in honor of Mrs. Claude Adams of Austin.

In the games of bridge, Mrs. I. T. Graves was high scorer. The honor guest was given as a guest prize a set of coffee cups.

At the conclusion of the games, the hostesses served an ice course to the following guests: Mesdames Adams, John Roberts, I. T. Graves, Leo Spencer, Hub Speck and H. Schindler.

Foard's first real snow in three years will start falling Dec. 31.

Maybe Trades Day features didn't go off as scheduled, but the non-scheduled event—a good rain and the capture of the hi-jackers—seemed to provide plenty of excitement and satisfaction for Foard folks.

Anyone who has resided in Foard County any length of time has no doubt seen the county's name mis-spelled "Ford" many times. At last we have seen the situation reversed. Recently the Wichita Times in its list of new motor vehicle registrations informed the public that a certain man had purchased a "Foard" coupe.

Another paper on our exchange printed a slight correction last week. In a wedding write-up of the previous week it seems that the name of the bride's sister, or maybe it was a cousin, got into print instead of the bride's actual name.

Transportation Needed

Several football candidates for the CHS team have had to walk as far as 7 miles to reach their homes following grid practice during the past week.

Coming to school by bus, these boys have no assurance of rides home after practice and all too often they are not lucky enough to catch a ride after a strenuous workout.

For that reason the "Transportation Club" which was effective last season in providing rides for several grid-sters, is again ready to start functioning, since its services have been requested.

All you have to do to become a member is to provide transportation facilities following one workout. Directors of the club are Hid Haney, Tom Beverly, Gordon Bell and Ragsdale Lanier.

They are now mapping out plans that will not work a hardship on anyone. If you are interested in helping this worthy cause, then inform a director or a school official of this fact and have your transportation data recorded.

Chelsea Crouch, outstanding star of the Plano team that met Crowell in the regional battle last year, will enter S. M. U. Stanley Thomas, Plano coach last year, will be on the coaching staff of some Dallas high school this year. L. N. Crabtree from the State Home School at Corsicana succeeds him.

We hear that "Rat" Ramsey, outstanding Chillicothe star of past years, will be at Altus Junior College this season, along with Red Ratigan of Chillicothe and other brilliant high school stars of Texas and Oklahoma.

WICHITA TOURNAMENT

Three Crowell golfers, Gordon Bell, Grady Magee and Guy Crews, took part in the Wichita Falls Country Club invitation tournament Saturday and Sunday.

Bell qualified for the championship flight with a 78, which was among the lowest qualifying scores of the tournament. He was eliminated in the first round by Bill Fitzgerald. Crews won two matches in the second flight before voluntary retirement from the tournament. Magee qualified for the fourth flight, but did not compete.

Morris Norton became the tournament champion Tuesday for the third time, defeating Rufus King in the final match, 8 and 7.

FIRE AT HANEY HOME

Damage of several hundred dollars resulted from a fire Saturday night that practically destroyed a 20x25-foot frame structure at the T. S. Haney home which was used as a garage, servant and storage house. The fire was discovered at about 9:30 o'clock.

Indications are that the blaze started in the room used as negro quarters, probably from a lighted cigarette left on a mattress. Quick action on the part of the fire department prevented complete loss of the structure.

A considerable amount of household items were stored in one room. A small amount of insurance was carried.

As Robert F. Wennel of Pittsburg was leaving the registry office after his marriage, a woman stepped up and slapped his face and ran away.

Senator Oneal Will Run for Congress

Senator Ben G. Oneal of Wichita Falls confirmed reports today that he will be a candidate for Congress from the (Wichita Falls) district at the formal announcement of his candidacy and platform will be made later.

Senator Oneal is now serving his second term in the upper house of the Texas Legislature.

A new safe installed in the home of Joseph Harris of Chickasha carried away by burglars and the trace of it has been found.

William Sarrott of Chickasha, directed in his will that his debts be paid and the remainder of his $17,000 estate be divided among his four dogs.
