A Letter to Our Good Friends and Customers:—

You have certainly done a lot for us. That's why we're writing to thank you. We don't know your name, "but", we told ourselves proudly. A letter to our good friends and customers will surely reach those who, probably without even realizing it, has helped us.

This is our letter—thank you! Thank you because your good advice, your good support, has been a great assistance to us in trying to be at your service.

Sincerely yours,

Fourteenth Installment

I followed the direction of her glance. The dresser was bare, save for toilet articles.

Maryella looked at me, panic-stricken. "Why, where are they? Will you look in the drawers?"

I did. They were not to be found.

"Possibly Mrs. Littlelove picked them up," I consoled. "I'll ask her."

When Mrs. Littlelove was summoned she disclaimed having seen the jewels at all the previous evening.

"That thief must have taken them, then!" decided Maryella firmly.

I recollected that in order to get to the door Julius had been forced to pass the dresser on which the pearls lay. It was perfectly possible for him to have picked them up unobserved as he went by.

"What shall I do? I can never look Mrs. Hemmingway in the face again if I have lost them! They were very valuable. What shall I do? What shall I do?"

"I'll get them back," I declared heroically, not knowing into what depths my statement might lead me.

"Oh, will you, Tom?" Maryella exclaimed, dragged from the slough of despond by my confidence. "If you do, you can ask anything of me you want!"

My heart thrilled at the promise in her voice. With such a reward in sight I would have entered upon the labors of Hercules without a doubt in my own mind of accomplishing them.

I didn't know exactly what she meant, but I thought I would take a chance even though Jim Cooper had said they were engaged.

There was no time to be lost. Leaving Maryella to dress, I went down stairs to organize a posse to go in pursuit. My announcement that I was going to lead another party to recapture the escaped convicts met with scant enthusiasm on the part of the old soldiers. One and all they politely declined. Even the sheriff did not respond to the idea with any zest.

"How can we catch them?" he objected. "We've got to follow on foot and they've got my horse."

"From what I've seen of your horse," I replied, "I don't think we will have much trouble in beating him in a race."

"He is a good horse," the sheriff argued truculently, "and he is only nineteen years old, come next May."

"Well, let's go," I urged. "Even if you and I have to go alone."

The sheriff looked at his watch. "They are clear in town by this time," he observed, "and they'll be taking the 9:36 train out. We haven't got a chance. We'd have to get there in twenty minutes, and that ain't possible."

I groaned. It was only eight miles. There was no way of making the distance except by an aeroplane or—

There was an alternative. The iceboat!

I ran to the window. It was still on the lake where I had seen the boys rig it the day before.

I told the sheriff my plan. He was doubtful.

"I wouldn't trust myself on one of the dog-gone things. Terra cotta is good enough for me any time."

"Won't you go?" I asked. "I need some one to help me sail it."

"No sir-ree! Not for a thousand dollars."

I turned to the rest of the men. "Who will go with me on the iceboat to intercept our escape prisoners before they can catch the 9:36 train?"

My proposal was received with absolute silence.

"I will," said a voice from the stairs. There stood Maryella, vivid with restored health.

"You're on!" I said. "Hustle. We've only got eighteen minutes now."

At my suggestion Maryella put on a pair of trousers over her other clothing and borrowed a mans coat and overcoat.

Thus equipped and accompanied by the protests of our companions, we hastened down the hill. It was snowing again, but there was a gale of wind back of it.

It took me probably a minute to get the sails hoisted. At any rate, we had less than ten minutes in which to make town. Fortunately the wind was on the quarter and I knew what an iceboat was capable of when crowded to its utmost. Maryella had sailed a regular water craft before, so she knew how to handle a jib without instruction.

I shoved off. She started very slowly. At first I feared that possibly she was too heavy for the sail expanse.

As soon as we got out in the lake however, away from the protection of a wooded point of land that projected from the bank near the institution, a heavier gale of wind struck us and with a leap like a frightened horse the ice-boat jumped it.

For the most part the ice was black and clear. Occasionally there was a small drift. When we struck them the rigging would rattle and we would slow up. But we went through every time, and out in the middle we struck a clear space, smooth, unbroken and hard.

A sudden squall of snow came with the wind, obscuring everything; but I knew how to steer from the wind. As long as I held her where she was we would reach Fair Oaks on one tack. The cold was stinging and the snow beat upon our exposed faces. My fingers were numb from holding the tiller, and so were Maryella's where she grasped the jib sheet.

But the exhilaration made the blood pump faster. The terrific, staggering speed, the hiss of the runners, the whine of the wind in the rigging and the occasional flap of the mainsail when I pointed up too high were music for my ears. We seemed not to be touching the ice at all, and indeed there was moments when we were running on only two runners. Maryella's weight was not sufficient to hold the windward shoe on the ice, and often it would jump a foot or more from the surface.

I looked at her inquiringly the first time it happened to see if she was frightened. She read the question of my glance.

"It's all right," she shouted. "I'll take a chance!"

And so we did. I held the iceboat with all sail set at the point where she went fastest.

Suddenly out of the white flurry loomed a black shape. It was one of the fishing shanties that dotted the lake. I tried to avert and miss it, but it was too late.

Crash! The front end of the main beam went through it, breaking our forward stay and the jib hal-yard. The jib itself released, fluttered down. The ice-boat staggered and almost stopped.

Then, slowly she recovered head way, the wind filled the mainsail, and by holding a little harder on the tiller I discovered that I could still keep on the course.

Fortunately the mainmast was strong and even without the forward stay it held. I doubted seriously whether we could come about and go on the other tack, but as long as we kept in the direction we were going there seemed every reason to suppose that we would last to the end of the trip if nothing further occurred.

A sudden cessation of snow flurries revealed the town to us—and with it the train approaching the station on the other side of the lake.

Maryella looked back to see if I had observed. I nodded and held her up a little higher.

Neck and neck we approached the station. I prayed for more wind, and when it wouldn't come I swore under my breath.

The train was nearly at the station.

Then came a squall. The ice-boat leaped forward once more with creaking mast. Our speed doubled. As the train pulled in I swung the ice-boat around sharply and abreast of the station.

As she came about the mast went over with a crash. Fortunately Maryella leaped clear of the rigging; and without any further parley we raced up the bank. We got there while they were still unloading baggage.

On the platform, smoking a huge cigar in obvious contentment, was Julius. He had not seen us, and when I laid a heavy hand on his shoulder he looked up startled.

"I've got you," I exclaimed.

He made no reply to my obvious statement.

"See if he has got the pearls," panted Maryella.

It was a good suggestion. I hastily went through his pockets much to the amusement of the loafers at the station. He had nothing in them but some money and a knife.

"Where are the pearls?" I demanded.

"I ain't got any pearls," he replied.

"Yes you have," I insisted. You stole them from the dresser in that room where you hid!"

A crafty look came to Julius's eyes. He pondered a moment.

The train whistled.

"All aboard!" yelled the conductor.

"Will you let me go free if I tell you where the pearls are?" Julius asked.

I debated.

"Say yes, Tom," urged Maryella. "I must get them back at any cost. Yes, I'll let you go."

Julius moved toward the platform of the car, which was getting under way.

"I'll tell you as soon as I am on the train."

Not quite understanding, I never the less ran on beside him and allowed him to mount the first step.

"Now where are they?" I demanded.

The train was moving faster. I could not keep up much longer.

"They are on this train," said Julius, and then seeing the questioning look on my face he added, "I sent them to myself by parcel post. They are in the mail-car."

I dropped back, and the train pulled away. Julius waved at me from the car steps.

CHAPTER XIV
On The Mail-Car

I gazed stupidly at the departing platform.

"Where are the pearls?" asked

Maryella, joining me.

"On that train," I explained. He put 'em in the mail and sent them to himself, parcel post."

"And you let the train go off without you!" she reproached.

"He didn't tell me until it was too late for me to get aboard." I defended my action, or rather inaction as best I could.

While we looked at the receding train it came to a gradual stop. I looked for the cause and noticed a water tank beside the track.

"Good-by," I said, with hastily formed resolution, as I left Maryella and sprinted down the track.

I caught it. No need to go into details of the red spots before my eyes and the dry throat that burned me as I ran. As I pulled out I swung on to the rear platform.

I went into the car and went to the forward end where I could look into the coach ahead.

Yes, Julius was there, finishing up his cigar all unconscious of my presence. I decided it would be just as well not to make a scene on the train, but to follow him to his destination and get the pearls when he claimed them at the post office.

So I sat where I could see the platform and note when he got off. After all I was redeeming myself for my blunders I had made in the past.

"Tickets," said a voice.

The conductor had entered the door just in front of me.

I had no ticket, and explained it to the official.

He looked at me suspiciously. My clothing was a trifle nondescript.

"I had only just time enough to catch the train without stopping at the station," I offered.

My short winded condition bore out my statement.

"Alright, I don't care," he replied. "You'll have to pay a little extra, that's all, in advance with me on a cash basis."

"Want to take my ticket where I wanted to go I reached in my pocket for some money.

I found nothing but a hole. Up to that moment I had forgotten that I was wearing Comrade Dreyenfarth's "other" pants.

It's a terrible thing to be without money among strangers. I know of no sensation akin to it.

"I left it in my other clothes," I said weakly.

"Is that so?" said the conductor scornfully eyeing me with a practiced gaze. "Don't try to kid me. You haven't any other clothes."

I was indignant, but what was the use?

"Cough up some money," said the conductor crossly, "or get off." He reached up suggestively for the bell cord which signals to the engineer.

Texas Yo-Yo Mad

Just why it is no one seems to know; just how long it will last no one will venture a guess, but that Texas has gone stark mad over Yo-Yo spinning, or throwing, or whatever it is, is admitted by every one. Even the most enthusiastic golfists are turning from golf to Yo-Yo. And society women are giving Yo-Yo parties instead of playing bridge. Busy bankers stop commending interest to twirl the little balls and barefoot boys have quit their games of marbles. The fad extends from the centers of the largest cities to the most rural communities. Some are considering supplying each worshipper with a Yo-Yo top as an inducement to church attendance so that all may Yo-Yo through the service. The free advertising that Yo-Yo is getting must make Henry Ford turn green with envy.

WANTED: A BRAVE MAN

If one touches a toad, one will get warts. So persons have believed for a very long time. Why? The scientific books on disease of the skin recognizes the fact that the cause of warts is unknown. The wart, it is known, represents a thickening of certain layers of the skin with projection upward. This process is initiated by an irritation which may be due to poison, to bacteria, to mechanical action or possibly to nerve disturbances. Says Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association: "There is one excellent way, however, of proving promptly that touching a toad will not produce warts—that is to get a toad and touch it. It is safe bet that the warts will not appear in the vast majority of cases when this experiment is tried." This sounds very convincing. We are modern, progressive, and far from superstitious. Yet—we would rather someone else made the test.

ENJOYING THE OUTDOORS

From The Corsicana Sun: Life becomes more rosy for every bee as column after column in the newspapers announce a camp for a group, an outing for that group, picnic for store employees, an excursion for plant workmen—all in the name of healthful outdoor recreation. Being to the open has become a national custom. And it is not all sentiment. Foremen and employers have learned the psychology of turning their workers loose on the picnic grounds even for a half a day's outing. Clerks are inspired by the very announcement of such pleasure and anticipation of the event keeps them on their toes while at work. Even after the great day ends and the prospect of the work day dawns there is a new kind of enthusiasm for the job at hand.

The misfortune of America is that this highly desirable break away from the job occurs only during summer. Other seasons of the year make such interruptions in the work just as desirable. The Saturday half holiday runs thru the year in many establishments. If Americans should spend more time in the open, they would be the better for it. They are spending much more than they once did, but they can spend still more without indulging in excesses.

MARION TALLEY'S MODEL FARM HOUSE

Not only has Marion Talley, famed opera star who announced she was giving up her career to enter agricultural activities, actually bought a farm, but she has decided to build a farm house to serve as a model for wives in the Kansas wheat belt.

Miss Talley's 360 acres near Colby, Kansas, are level, treeless, unbroken, with rich black dirt everywhere. It is ideal land for wheat.

In the immediate vicinity of her farm, Charles M. Talley, her father met and wooed her mother, Mrs. Talley.

Soon Miss Talley will begin to build her house on the ground she has purchased, and it will be equipped with all modern conveniences, especially in the kitchen.

Miss Talley hopes she can prove to Kansas farmers that their wives might just as well have the comforts and labor-saving devices of their city sisters. She plans to visit among them, encouraging the comforts and conveniences of new housekeeping methods.

We want to wish Miss Talley great personal success in the operation of her farm. And express our admiration for her spirit of helpfulness in desiring to make her house a model for others.

THE BOON OF SLEEP.
266 STATISTICS.
WONDERFUL LANDS.
EIGHT "BIG MEN"

If you have sound sleep, don't envy any man his millions.

An American, very rich, knighted by King George because of the American money he spent in London, was taken to a hospital suffering from insomnia.

In the morning he was found dead, clutching a piece of paper on which he had written that, as sleep was impossible, he could endure life no longer. He had poisoned himself.

A majority of us go through life, not appreciating our greatest blessings, especially the "Sleep that knits up the ravel'd sleeve of care." The death of each day's life, "sore labour's bath," Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, Chief nourisher in life's feast."

Until sleep goes, you do not know life's greatest physical misfortune.

Every year two thousand million American eggs are confined to hens and incubators. Every year 800,000,000 of them don't hatch.

Much lost possible wealth, at least $200,000,000, at 25 cents per chick.

The Department of Agriculture owns one hen, laying eggs of which 90 per cent hatch, and she transmits her qualities to daughters and granddaughters.

This interests millions of women in the United States.

The Government has thrown open to settlement government lands formerly covered by the Mississippi River. Wonderful lands these are, low level, deep heavy black loam.

As the "wind bloweth where it listeth," so the Mississippi flows where it listeth, covering up and uncovering land, washing millions upon millions of cubic yards of fertile soil into the Gulf of Mexico.

When will man's intelligence control "Old Man River" and make him an obedient part of the national machine?

President Hoover, whose business is engineering, will attend to that, was "cut out" for that job.

The President seeks eight "big men" to put on the Farm Board.

The big eight and the Secretary of the Treasury will administer funds for farm relief, spending the people's money as intelligently as they know how.

How can you tell "a big man" when you see him, and how can you be sure that your big man understands farm problems?

It would be interesting to put the eight big men, after they are chosen, in charge of some typical American farm to see what they could make of it.

The President signs the Boulder Dam proclamation, thus making operative the Boulder Canyon Dam bill.

And now, perhaps, the able engineer elected President, will be able to do what he wants to do some able engineering.

Aiding Merchants Advances Town

You should buy from Post merchants because it pays you, as we have convinced you in the foregoing articles of the series. It means money in your pocket.

And it means money out of your pocket if you don't. If you made a practice of shopping at the city stores or if you order your goods shipped in by mail, you have only to figure up what these goods have cost you, and compare the total with what the small bill of goods would have cost at home.

For instance, the railroad fare or auto trip, your hotel bill, the time you waste, the goods you buy that you don't need, the higher prices you pay on account of the stupendous overhead at the city store—all these things must be paid out of your pocket in addition to the value of the goods themselves, plus a reasonable profit.

Every dollar that goes over the counter of the local merchant pays tribute to the entire community.

It roams back to you in fullest measure. The merchant has the interests of the home town at heart. If from nothing more than a selfish standpoint, he is the best booster the hometown has, because the greater the well-being of its citizens, the better the pay they receive for their labor, the more comfortable their homes are and the better the streets are kept, the more efficient the schools, the better the fire and police protection, the more attractive does the community prove for others seeking homes, and therefore the greater is the number of its possible customers.

Buy of the home-town merchant and you assure Post of a permanent booster. He does not plan to stay here for a certain length of time, and then to move to some other place; he is here to stay, for it is his home, and the home of his children.

To maintain this leadership our home-town merchants must be supported. They set the pace and rally the forces of good citizenship. Go over a list of your merchants and convince yourself that this is so. The dry goods and grocery stores, your men in your general stores, in your hardware and implement dealers, your druggists, your harness shop, your shoe merchant, your tin-shop, your garage men, your elevator men, and your produce dealers, your lumber merchants and dealers in building supplies, the men running your dairies and creameries, mills and factories, as well as other employers of labor, and others in various affiliated lines.

Their leadership deserves the support of every good citizen in town. In fact, every man, woman and child in the community has a moral responsibility in the matter. These men work for the good of the home town, and everybody who has the welfare of the community at heart is duty bound to work with them and keep them in the things they are trying to accomplish.

Trade at home and save money.

NOW THE CORNCOB IS IN DIPLOMACY

Washington, D. C., July 9—While Ambassador Dawes has been introducing his famous underslung pipe into diplomatic circles in London, Joseph P. Cotton, the Under Secretary of State, has been introducing his corncob pipe into the department.

Thus far, he has always remembered to lay his corncob aside when called to the office of Secretary Stimson.

THE COTTON KING'S RECORD

Palestine, Texas, July 9—John W. McFarland is the "cotton king" of east Texas.

Two bales to the acre is his average yield. His 40 acres yielded 80 bales last year. He credits his success to improved methods of farming, including the intelligent use of commercial fertilizer.

Weeds are kept down and proper soil mulch was maintained by cultivation.

Lost—black suit case, and two suit boxes, with Young & Young, stamped on boxes, containing ladies children's and man's wearing apparel, lost on highway between Post and Snyder. Return to this office for reward.

It's Here For The Asking

The stores and business houses in Post do not confine themselves to simply selling merchandise. They also offer special services to you, which make it easier to do your trading now than it ever has been.

Many of the salespeople have made a study of their particular lines. They are able to make intelligent comments upon their merchandise, and the suggestions they make are apt and practical.

The Dispatch is offering the same type of service to the merchants thru its advertising department. The people in that department understand not only the fine points of advertising copy, but the manner in which it should be set up.

When you read an advertisement in the Dispatch you may be sure that it has had the interesting supervision of our advertising department.

We are offering to our advertisers the knowledge and skill of people who have studied advertising. Mr. Warren and his assistants are always ready to help you in any way. Just call 111.

Graham Chapel Demonstration Club Meets

The Graham Chapel Home Demonstration club met at 2:30 p. m., July 5th, at the school house.

Sixteen members were present and three visitors, Mrs. L. G. Thutt, Miss Ida Montgomery and Mrs. Bailey Black. We were glad to have these visitors with us and want them to come again.

Mrs. Clarabelle Johnson was a visitor at our meeting of June 27, and through unthoughtfulness it was not mentioned, but we want her to come back and be one of us.

The motion was made and carried that we elect a reporter, so our secretary wouldn't have all the work to do. Mrs. Mary Crowdry was elected.

Mrs. Dorothy Cowdrey, Mrs. Lola Gossett and Mrs. Mary Crowdry were appointed as a committee to work up a stunt for the encampment, but we were too blank so we called for help from Mrs. Frost Maxey, Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Reba Turner.

The subject for the afternoon was "Yeast Bread." Mrs. Hoover made an interesting talk on "The Different Kinds of Yeast and the Advantage of Each." Mrs. Moody Davis told us about, "The kind of flour to use in making yeast bread."

Miss Maxwell made several kinds of rolls which were certainly delicious, and let me say that all of you ladies living in this community who are not members of this club just simply don't know what you are missing, because Miss Maxwell teaches us something new at every meeting.

All the ladies are looking forward to the encampment which is to be held at Two Draw Lake, July 10 and 11. We would love to see our club represented 100 per cent.

We will continue our meetings at the school house until school opens, so every one come and have a good time and learn with us.

Our next meeting will be July 19th with Mrs. Mary Crowdry as hostess.

Miss Maxwell won't be with us at this meeting, but we have capable leaders, so be there 100 per cent.

SPUR GIRLS SCOUTS PLANS FOR CAMP

Spur, July 8—The Girl Scouts of Spur are making preparations to go to camp in the near future. A play was given Friday evening to assist in defraying expenses in putting their Scout home in first class condition.

The girls have recently been enjoying their new tennis court, and two sets of croquet have been purchased.

Sam T. Davis, J. T. Trigg, J. L. Daw, Rev. W. R. White and Dr. V. V. Clark were among the Lubbock Rotarians who visited the scout camp Tuesday night.

Miss Rosa Milano, 18, was barred from high school at Wilmington, Del., because of her insistence on coming to school without stockings.

BAPTIST HOSPITAL OPENS CAFETERIA

Cafeteria service for nurses and visitors will be opened at the West Texas Baptist sanitarium today, L. A. Sanders, superintendent, announced Saturday.

The cafeteria room, adjoining the nurses' dining room, is finished in white throughout and is equipped with electric steam tables. The new arrangement was made in order that nurses, eating at different hours, might have warm meals at all times, Mr. Sanders said.

An average of 210 meals is now being served daily at the sanitarium, under the direction of Mrs. L. A. Sanders, dietitian, and the cafeteria is expected to make for economy, efficiency and lighter work.

Dining rooms of the hospital are being redecorated. Walls of the nurses' room are being tinted pink and ceiling ivory and a similar harmony, with blue wainscoting, is being employed in the staff dining room. Furnishings are also being redecorated to correspond to the interiors.

Garlynn 4-H Club

The Garlynn 4-H club met Tuesday, July nine.

The president called the house to order and we repeated our club motto, club pledge, and prayer.

The secretary called the roll, all members being present except one. Miss Maxwell explained when and where the Girls Encampment was going to be and what they were going to do. Which aroused every ones enthusiasm.

The yell leader took charge and we sang club songs and gave a few club yells.

Miss Maxwell then took charge and gave an interesting talk on "Bedroom Improvements."

We then adjourned to meet again July twenty-third, after which will be a month's vacation. Reporter

Weed Killing Demonstration Postponed

Due to an urgent call for help in combating cotton leaf and boll worms in South Texas the men who were to put on the two weed killing demonstrations in Garza Co., Wednesday were not able to be present at that time and the demonstrations were postponed until a future date which will be announced through the paper.

These demonstrations were to be demonstrations in the use of Calcium Chlorate as a weed killer and the following reprint from the Journal of the American Society of Agronomy may be of interest to the farmers of the county. Calcium chlorate has been proven as effective against other forms of noxious weeds as it is against field bindweed and in our demonstration in this county it was to be used on blue weeds and Mesquite weeds. Watch for the date of these demonstrations later and plan to attend them.

Magnesium and Calcium Chlorate as Substitutes for Sodium Chlorate for killing field bindweed.

The Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station has been using sodium chlorate to kill field bindweed with considerable success, as reported in the Journal of Agricultural Research for October 15, 1927 and in Kan. Agr. Exp. Sta. Cir. No. 136, published in 1928. The first experiments with this chemical were begun in 1925.

It has been observed in experiments in progress at this station that magnesium chlorate and calcium chlorate may be used as substitutes for sodium chlorate in the control of field bindweed. Experiments conducted during the past year suggested that these chemicals are as effective as sodium chlorate and that they have certain advantages.

In the first place, they do not form a combustible mixture with organic material since magnesium chlorate normally carries six and calcium chlorate two molecules of water of crystallization while sodium chlorate forms an anhydrous salt. Hence, with the former there is no fire hazards as with sodium chlorate. Another important advantage is that they are very hygroscopic and remain moist on the leaves a much longer time when applied in solution than does sodium chlorate. In a dry atmosphere the latter forms crystals in a short time and in that condition is less destructive to plant tissue.

While experimental evidence is meager, these facts suggest that magnesium and calcium chlorate will be effective within a wider range of weather conditions than sodium chlorate, and that they may be particularly adapted to semi-arid conditions where sodium chlorate, because of its tendency to crystallize from solution, is not entirely satisfactory.

Magnesium and calcium chlorate have been chemical curiosities and until recently have not been on the market even in sufficient quantities for experimental purposes. They are now available in commercial scale by the Dow Chemical Company, Midland, Michigan, and calcium chlorate may be obtained in dry or liquid form from the Chipman Chemical Engineering Company, Bound Brook, New Jersey, and is sold under the trade name of Atlas Non-poisonous Weed Killer W. L. Latashaw and J. W. Zahnley, Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station, Manhattan, Kansas.

Glen Harris of Brownfield stopped in Post a short time Tuesday before returning to his home after attending the Rotary presidents meeting in Sweetwater.

Mrs. T. L. Jones, who is in the Scott and White sanitarium at Temple, was operated on Saturday and at the time of this writing is much improved.

Don't overlook the price we have on ice for Saturday.

Mrs. Sam T. Davis and daughter, Molly were visiting in Post Tuesday night.

Amarillo Contractor Relates His Experience

"Orgatone Has Helped Me To Get Over The Flu and I Feel Fine Now," Says Cantrell

"Remarkable indeed," was the statement made recently, by B. A. Cantrell, of 317 N. Rusk, Amarillo, Texas, while at home, talking with the Orgatone representative.

"I was tired and run-down all the time," he continues, "and never had any pep or energy at all. I suffered with a very chronic case of constipation and never found anything that would do me any good, and I was forced to take strong laxatives, all the time. I was nervous and restless, and would have dizzy spells at times. I was in a very run down condition and knew that I needed something to build me up.

"And in this condition I took the 'flu,' and every one was talking about Orgatone and I read so much about it, I decided to take a bottle and see how it worked in my case. It will certainly do what they say it will, for me. Before taking Orgatone, I hated to get up of a morning because I was just as tired and worn out as when I went to bed, but now I wake up feeling refreshed and ready for a good day's work. My constipation is a thing of the past now, and I am gaining and getting stronger every day. It has helped me to get on my feet, and to get rid of the 'flu' effects. Orgatone has certainly toned up my system. I think it is a fine medicine and I shall always speak a good word for it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Post by the Warren Bros. Drug who are direct laboratory agents.
