ATEN MAKES STATEMENT

To The Voters Of Precinct Two of Dawson County: In making my statement I want to say it has been a pleasure to serve you. Everyone has been very nice and co-operative and I thank you for all the past favors. I have given the best possible service under the circumstances. The roads are built up where they will drain, and we have also kept the Johnson grass from going to seed along the roads. I am for getting every mile of Farm to Market roads possible in Dawson County and precinct 2 and I will continue to use my influence whenever and wherever for more paved roads.

I believe my experience is worth something in helping secure these roads. I also believe my experience is worth more than a new Commissioner would be in other problems. For that reason, I ask, why make a change at this time? Go to the polls and vote as you please, but please vote for G. C. ATEN

A STORY OF SMITHS AND JONES

The week end is usually a busy time in the Flats and the past one was no exception. Dep. The theft suspect was jailed and the latter case was tried for disturbing the peace.

HOP AND GEORGE TO SPEAK HERE SATURDAY

Saturday, both morning and afternoon, O'Donnell will be in the spotlight as far as the Congressional race is concerned. Hop Halsey, the bright and flaming hope of the Caprock counties, will arrive in O'Donnell promptly at 11:30 with his group of entertainers and will speak. The site will probably be in or near the bank corner. Again at 3:00 in the afternoon Congressman George H. Mahon will arrive to speak. George Mahon has been a friend to many of O'Donnell and his visit is eagerly awaited. Mr. Mahon has the reputation for never forgetting a name nor a face. Incidentally those of the Index family who have read George's weekly column in the Index feel they know him without meeting.

Hop Halsey's fame is spreading like wildfire over the Plains and a large group is to be expected to hear this colorful and brilliant speaker.

With peace in the balance thruout the world, every voter should hear BOTH of these candidates before deciding his choice. And after the speaking is over TALK to them. For democracy to work the people must tell the congressmen and not the other way around.

Much consideration is being given to having a band here this year but plans are still in the tentative stage.

TO CONGRESS- 19TH DISTRICT

Innocent Bystander:

The Cinemagicians: Fred MacMurray lights the fuse for a sure-fire-cracker christened "Smoky." The outdoor de luxe has Mother Nature as Fred's leading lady. . . . "The Searching Wind" went from footlights to klieg lights and remains a provocative humdinger. It digs beneath the surface of current issues and comes up with a dramatic gusher. Sylvia Sidney heads the trouper-dupers. . . . "Diary of a Chambermaid" is an adult boy-girl opus, highlighted by keen character studies and crisp dialogue that has plenty of spin on its phrases. Paulette Goddard keeps it twirling. . . . "The Hoodlum Saint" offers a sprightly meller gifted with Bill Powell's urbane pretending and Esther Williams' natural hypnotic gift.

The Press Box: Thomas B. Sherman in the St. Louis P-D spansks W. Lippmann and other tall-domed thinkers for using the annoying word combination "know-how." We don't like it either, know-how. . . . William S. Hart's passing received appropriate eulogies, one editorial concluding: "There will never be another Bill Hart. The background is faded and the type is dated, but the memory is still green and fresh."

Quotation Marksmanship: T. Fuller: If you'd have a hen lay, you must bear with her cackling. . . . Old Russian Adage: Wounds heal but harsh words stay in the heart and mind. . . . J. Baker: The guests were all having an uncorning good time. . . . J. Elinson: He's always coming a phrase. . . . Ida James: I hope the atom test isn't the Biking of the End. . . . J. Galt: The British seem to be more interested in getting the Grand Mufti to Palestine than The Hundred Grand who belong there. . . . J. Cannon: Louis is a credit to his race. The human race, of course. . . . E. Cuneo: I would gladly change the orchids I deserve for the scallions I don't. . . . G. J. Nathan: Men go to the theater to forget; women, to remember.

Jimmy Gardiner, the play-producer, told this at Leone's the other night. During the war he was visited by a wealthy neighbor from Texas an aging woman who had an overpowering yen for the perfect string of pearls. Gardiner recommended Cartier's. . . . There she was served by a young clerk who mistook her unpossessing appearance for poverty and showed her the lowest-priced strings. . . . She demanded better ones until the store's stock was exhausted and only the vault remained. She insisted on going into it. . . . The clerk pulled out their finest pearls and showed them to her. It was just what she was looking for. She asked how much. . . . "The price," said the clerk haughtily, "is $500,000." . . . "I'll take it," said the woman, opening her purse and extracting a half-million dollars in cash! . . . The clerk keeled over with a heart attack.

Norman Granz recently produced a jazz concert at Carnegie Hall. It sold out. . . . Norman was once engaged to a Southern society gal named Virginia. He was so in love with Virginia that he christened the theme song of the concert: "Love You Virginia Blues." . . . But, alas, Virginia, who never hung around back stage before, changed fellers—from Norman to a hot jazz man in the crew. . . . She returned his ring. . . . And now, sobelups, the curtain comes down on each concert an announcer introduces the newly titled theme song, to wit: "Drop Dead Virginia Blues."

Torrid temperatures turning the town into a stone and steel Sahara. . . . Flimsy gowns clinging to trim torsos—as though they loved them. . . . Weary salesmen scurrying into the foyers of Broadway's air-cooled movie places. . . . The silken rustle of luxury in swanky spots, where the ladies are chin-deep in ermine. . . . Sidewalk cafes in the Gramercy Park sector and in the 40s and 50s between 5th and the AoftheA. The most attractive is the one outside the St. Moritz Hotel. When the monster motors of the buses stop growling at 59th you can hear the tinkle of the Cafe de la Paix ice cubes.

The geyser of chatter and giggles in ice-cream places—the teenager's Stork Club. . . . The sweltering cabie who groans: "In this weather just breathing is hard work!" . . . Tenement youngsters using sea-biting docks as their personal diving boards.

Footlights and tuckers: There was a bib and tucker event in the hayloft circuit last week. Tallulah Bankhead zoomed into the Greenwich (Conn.) Playhouse with Noel Coward's "Private Lives." The play's romantic rough-housing is admirably suited to the star's cyclonic personality, and she kept the comedy pin-wheeling across the stage. Several Broadway aisle-perchers enjoyed her triumph—critic Vernon Rice ejaculating: "Tallulah, the magnificent; Tallulah, the wonderful!"

Few Legislators Authors Of Bills They Introduce

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

A bright young railroad executive who has his cum laude in law from a famed university was sitting with me in Burt's the other day.

Burt's is a sort of greenroom for radio folk and others who move and speak and have their being in what is euphemistically referred to as Washington's Radio center. Inspired (or infuriated) by the presence of so many of the few who say so much to so many, my friend launched forth into a tirade on the responsibility of the legislator.

"You can't play baseball according to football rules," he said, shaking a menacing fist at me, "and that is what Washington officials are doing. You studied political science 30 years ago. I studied it only 20 years ago. And you know perfectly well that the present generation is not following the rules laid down by our founding fathers. You ought to tell the public about it."

"Now maybe the principles of our government are wrong. I am not defending them. But I am saying that we are deserting them. Rule of the majority, a republican form of government operated by the representatives of the people, is a travesty, when legislation is jammed through by minorities. And I mean bureaucrats as well as lobbyists."

This happened when the senate was neck-deep in the final debate over the OPA and my friend claimed congress was revolting against what he called the high pressure methods of the administration. Since the congress was tearing the administration measure to shreds at that moment I pointed out that while it was true that congress was sore at Stabilizer Bowles for what they called propagandizing, the example was not a very good one. So he proceeded to develop his theme with specific references all too familiar to me and my colleagues of the microphone and typewriter.

Town Seethes With Lobbyists

You too, are familiar with the power of the "pressure boys" as my friend Kenneth Crawford called them in his revealing book by that name. Crawford estimated there were 6,000 active lobbyists in Washington when World War II started. There are many more now. Speaker Rayburn said the town was "seething" with them.

We all remember the seven-digit sum of money contributed to a campaign fund which came out of the members' dues of one great labor union. True, the head of the union later quarrelled with the president whom he had helped elect because the president refused to take his orders. Nevertheless, this example illustrates what "big money" attempts, and sometimes succeeds in doing.

We know, too, that when the entire economy of the country was locked to a dead center by strikes in two essential industries, coal and transportation, and that when the government itself gave orders, those orders were disobeyed. Minority rule was operating then. Minority groups nullified the wishes of the duly-elected representatives of the people.

My friend, with all his vehemence, with his allegiance to management, made no claim that the demands of the railroad men, the coal miners, were unjust. He merely said that in order to obtain what they considered justice, the powerful leaders of the organizations to which they belong were able to play baseball according to football rules—temporarily at least.

The theory that the creation of the laws of the land has been taken from the hands of the elected representatives of the people was put forth by Crawford in "The Pressure Boys" seven years ago when he said: "It is improbable that a single important law enacted in the last 10 years has been written by its congressional sponsor or its nominal author. Administration bills are prepared by New Deal experts in executive departments. Legislation independently inaugurated is almost invariably prepared in the office of a lobbyist. Congress maintains a legislative drafting service which writes bills for committees, but it seldom is called upon by individual legislators for assistance in writing any minor private bills."

LaFollette Bill Would Revamp

Thomas Mechlin, writing on this subject in the current Virginia Quarterly Review, touches on the subject of readymade legislation. He tells how a lobby "gets its own staff together and knocks out a bill which the front office would like to see made a law eventually. It then runs the draft over to a large law firm which has one of its members in congress. Although the congressman cannot personally represent the client, the method used in submitting the proposed legislation through the 'body' of the firm takes care of that. . . . If the lobby is well-organized, it will exploit high-powered publicity from then on out."

I am constrained to admit that much in all of these assertions is true. But I would like to mention three hopeful signs on the horizon, minuscule though they may be. Two were measures introduced but not acted upon in this session of congress. They will be presented again and have a good chance of passing.

One is the LaFollette measure for revamping congress, one provision of which increases the technical assistance available to members. The second is a bill introduced by Representative Sabbath of Illinois, which provides for an all-inclusive investigation of lobbies. Most congressmen don't like lobbyists and Sabbath's bill, as Mechlin admits, was a crystallization of this feeling.

The third indication was a resolution introduced during the OPA fight by Senator Taylor (D. of Idaho) authorizing the publication of a document on how each senator voted on every measure. He said that the people are becoming more aware of their political responsibilities, that politics is no longer solely in the hands of politicians, ward-healers and lobbyists.

Congress is sensitive to the need of a restoration of majority rule, but the only real hope lies within the majority itself. Unfortunately, the giant sleeps.

South Dakotans See Swearing-In

Two recent visitors to Washington, Mrs. Evelyn Baker and Mrs. James Magee of Custer and Belle Fourche, S. D., can tell their friends back home in the Black Hills region that while they were here they took in three events which might set the tone for all such future events.

The ladies, winners of a radio contest to honor women who did their bit during the war years, visited Washington during the week when three top-drawer government officials, all close friends of Harry Truman, were sworn into new jobs.

The swearing-in of a cabinet officer used to be a rather modest affair. The swearinee, his family, a few friends, and his office staff, a few of the press, usually gathered in his new office, and the whole affair was over in about the time it takes for bride and groom to say "I do."

True, Fred Vinson and Lewis Schwellenbach did travel to Capitol Hill for their inaugurations as treasury and labor secretaries respectively. But those events occasioned no such hoopla as did the ceremonies which made Monday—Tuesday—Wednesday Washington news one late week in June.

Mrs. Magee and Mrs. Baker and five thousand other spectators, plus the navy band, gathered on the White House lawn to watch Mr. Vinson take over his new office as chief justice of the United States; they saw John Snyder's big moment made bigger when President Truman strolled from the White House to the treasury portico to watch his St. Louis crosby take the oath as head of the treasury department; and they observed tall, young-looking John Steelman's swearing-in as reconversion director, a ceremony which took place in the rose gardens of the White House.

Having observed these impressive occasions, the Black Hills visitors could appreciate the under-estimated remark of Undersecretary of Navy John Sullivan. (Sullivan got his swearing-in done quietly and traditionally on June 18.) As Sullivan congratulated John Steelman after the rose garden ceremony, he asked, "Well, are you the last of the June brides?"

Recover Loot Of Hesse Gems; Couple Confess

Crown Jewels of Ancient House Stolen by Army Pair Are Regained.

CHICAGO. — A cardboard stationery box, crammed into a dime-in-the-slot locker in the Illinois Central station, yielded the last, about 60 per cent, of the $1,500,000 in Hessian crown jewels stolen from historic Kronberg castle by Col. Jack W. Durant and his bride, WAC Capt. Kathleen Nash Durant.

The other 40 per cent had been found earlier in the home of a sister of the WAC captain.

The army announced the arrest in Germany of Maj. David F. Watson of Burlingame, Calif.

With all the gems believed recovered, the war department declined to talk about this latest figure brought into the case.

Colonel Durant and his wife are held in military detention in Washington.

Major Watson is the third officer to be arrested because of the looting which is termed the greatest jewel robbery of modern times. He had been overseas for three years, stationed variously in Ireland and Germany. Last June General Eisenhower personally awarded him the bronze star medal for his work as supply officer.

The army says the treasure was turned over last November to the WAC captain, who was operating the Kronberg castle as an officers' rest home.

Officers said they believed the WAC had mailed some of the treasure to herself at an address in the United States, and that Colonel Durant brought the rest with him in his baggage when he was redeployed.

Colonel Durant courted the WAC when she was at Kronberg, and the romance culminated in marriage May 28—less than a week before their arrest while honeymooning in the La Salle hotel at Chicago.

Army intelligence entered the case only last Memorial Day, Colonel Miller related. The story had its beginnings, however, back in 1944, when the army air forces, to which Colonel Durant was assigned, were hammering Nazi Germany.

Meeting in the family castle at Kronberg, near Frankfurt - on - Main, the members of the royal house decided to bury their treasure.

WAC Captain Nash, a former executive of a Phoenix (Ariz.) resort hotel, became manager of the rest home the army installed in the castle in April, 1945, Colonel Miller related.

The thirst of American G.I.s led to discovery of the hidden wine and the soldiers, intrigued with the manner in which the wine had been hidden, decided to search further.

Willie's 'Hot Seat' Is in Working Order

LEESVILLE, LA.—Louisiana's portable electric chair worked efficiently.

It took the life of George Edwards Jr., 18, a murderer.

The last time it was used, a week earlier, it only "tickled" Willie Francis, 17. Willie received a 30-day reprieve and may have his death sentence commuted.

Petting Devil's Victim Mistake

But Best of Intentions Gets Herman the Boot.

LOS ANGELES. — Herman Hulander, 37-year-old janitor, convicted of disturbing a religious meeting by petting a pretty parishioner from whom the rest were rebuking the devil, said recently the congregation was not showing the love it should.

He said he didn't think it was very brotherly to use "unnecessary roughness" on the girl, or to throw him out of the meeting when he tried to comfort her, or to obtain his conviction on charges of disturbing the peace.

Hulander was ordered to appear for probation hearing and sentence. Mrs. Jessie Stark, pastor of the Pentecostal church, said Hulander threw the meeting into a turmoil when he caressed the face and shoulders of a girl who "came under a spell" during prayers and lay on the floor screaming and twitching.

Hulander said it certainly was a turmoil, especially after the rest of the congregation jumped on him.

"This lady I comforted jumped up and started shouting," he said. "Three other women were holding her down and rebuking the devil out of her. I thought they used unnecessary roughness."

"I laid my hand on her face and then Mrs. Stark told me to take my hand off, but I wasn't going to just because she said so."

"Three or four brothers" then jumped on him and threw him out, he said.

Mrs. Stark said he often smoked during services and sat uninvited on the platform.

"That congregation is so narrow-minded," Hulander said.

Japanese Leaders Seek To Dodge Allied Charges

TOKYO.—Japan's indicted wartime leaders sought to blot out many of the Allies' war crimes charges by contending that their nation did not surrender unconditionally.

The Allies' chief prosecutor contended just as strongly that the surrender was "utterly without condition."

JESUS AND TRUE WORSHIP
LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 8:18-14; Mark 12:28-34
MEMORY SELECTION—God is a Spirit and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth.—John 4:24

The one true God is worthy of the wholehearted worship of all men. The second commandment, which we studied last week, forbids all and every idolatry and thus requires exclusive worship of God.

It really means something in the life of a man to worship God in sincerity and truth. It makes life worthwhile both here and hereafter.

I. Worship Balances Life (Deut. 8:11-14).
Prosperity is usually thought to be a blessing. We fear depression and poverty. The Lord through Moses warned his people that prosperity was dangerous. It is ill, because material things have the power to so satisfy the natural desires of man as to make him forget his spiritual needs.

Is it not true that material prosperity usually brings with it a corresponding decrease in spirituality. Life values are weighed in gold, silver, wheat and iron instead of being viewed in the light of God's Word.

Worship of God will balance life for it will keep man from forgetting God and his laws. In the wilderness Israel had to call on God for daily bread. Now that they were to come into the promised land they would be apt to think they produced their own food.

II. Worship Protects Life (Deut. 8:18-20).
One of the most mischievous mistakes of life is the idea that man is the maker of his own money. Only God can give man the power of hand and heart, of muscle and mind, which brings forth wealth, and then he can only draw it out of God's resources in mine or field or sea.

This fallacy of man leads him astray, and he begins to worship the very powers he uses and finds pleasure in the gods of this world. That way leads only to eternal destruction, to spiritual death.

How is man to be delivered from this awful destructive force? By a right relationship to God, by worship of and devotion to the Lord.

Israel had a covenant with God, and in the keeping of it they would find deliverance from all which would pull down and destroy—yes, and from the judgment of God (Ex. 20).

We who are believers in Christ are under the new covenant of grace. If we have been born again we have the promise of God that we have eternal life. But let us be clear that it is possible for a Christian to so forget God and his covenant with the Lord as to lose his fellowship and joy, and to be less and fruitless.

III. Worship Strengthens Life (Isa. 40:31).
The Christian life is not an easy one to live. After all, who wants it easy? There is, however, full provision by God for the power needed to live a life as victorious and exultant as that of the soaring eagle. That power is for those who "wait upon the Lord" (v. 31).

It is taken for granted that those who are old may become weary and faint, but the fact is that even the youth have this disappointing experience.

BARBS . . . by Baukhage

There are 630 acres of forest land in the United States. Plenty of tall timber to take to when the prices start to rise.

The publicity man for the six stunning Goldwyn girls touring the country to boost the movie "The Kid from Brooklyn" expected the President's daughter to have them to tea. Miss Truman was out of town. I made the patriotic suggestion they go to Annapolis instead. If there had been time to arrange it, I would probably have a navy cross by now.

TREASURE OF THE SEA

By George E. Walsh W.N.U. Release

CHAPTER I.

Such a small thing as a shrimp save a man's life by putting his heart into him at a time when his digestive organs have ceased to function for lack of fuel. If the will to live or die is dependent upon a bunch of nerve cells and ganglions, the proper activity of the latter is dependent upon the regular carbonation of commonplace foods.

Dick Jordan had reached the point of semi-starvation and physical exhaustion when lethal forgetfulness seemed the greatest boon to man—drift off painlessly into a world of dreams and fancies that ends in death. He didn't want to live; he had lost the will to go on and suffer; he craved succor from the nature of wind and sun and waves and from thirst and hunger!

Clinging to his frail support that had been the toy of the waves for days and nights—he scarcely knew how many—he raised his head for one last look around his narrow unsheltered horizon before releasing his hold to slip down into the green waters clamoring to receive him. It was the last despairing look of a living man when the faculties flare up an instant, in full intelligence, before the final collapse.

Then, coming on the crest of a wave, sliding down its slope to meet him, a small island of seaweed thrust its tentacles of air-bladders and greenish fronds about his neck and shoulders, rustling and murmuring against the sides of his raft.

Known an instant by this unexpected break in the monotony of his storm the castaway stared at it in stupefied wonder. It was alive with crustaceans and molluscs, those tiny forms of life that cling to algae and make their homes in their branches—squids, snails, slugs, bivalves and arthropods.

A tiny crab floated on the surface. Dick made a grab for it, but missed it. His splash startled from their hiding place a school of shrimp. Catching one of these, he decapitated it and ate it raw. The taste awakened dormant impulses in him. He began fishing warily for the tiny creatures, driving them into the open with one hand and cupping them with the other, or coralling them into a dense mass of seaweed, he would fling them on his float with the algae and scramble for them before they could leap back into the sea.

It became an exciting game, with the food as the prize. Every time he caught one and swallowed it, his appetite craved more, and his sagging brain power rallied to his assistance, giving him the necessary mental alertness and skill for the work.

grim-lipped men, and weak-kneed passengers of both sexes who needed help to get them in the small boats.

Dick himself had helped women and children into the first boats, winning smiles of trust from the latter and glances of frightened approval from the former. There had been a few others of the passengers who actively arrayed themselves alongside the officers to maintain order and system.

One of them was Pettigrew—Hen Pettigrew—whose whole life and training made him immune to fear and excitement. He had distinguished himself in that melee, as he always did, and won the approval of the captain.

Early in the confusion they had separated—Hen Pettigrew and Dick Jordan—for the exigency of the moment severed all conventional bonds. Dick had been allowed to go his own way, free as any other passenger; but he knew, or felt, that the other's eyes were on him, watching that he didn't slip into one of the boats filled mostly with women and children. He had an unpleasant sensation that he was still being watched as a criminal. The vigilance of the law never relaxed—not even in the panic of a shipwreck.

In a couple of hours each boatload was a separate unit, dependent upon the skill and exertion of its own crew for safety, with no knowledge of what was happening to the others. The black pall of night descended upon them, obliterating the rest of the world, and circumscribing for them an existence bounded by the gunwales of the boat. In this narrow space they huddled, awed and terrified as much by the sense of isolation as by the roar of wind and waves.

Jordan was not greatly surprised when the accident he had been anticipating came; it seemed the inevitable climax to their adventure, and unavoidable. A giant wave lifted them clear out of the water and upset the frail craft, rolling it over and over before allowing it to descend into the trough to be trampled upon by the mountain of surging green brine.

After that it was every man for himself. There was no further opportunity for team work or mutual co-operation. Dick Jordan found himself clinging to a few boards that had been in the bottom of the boat. It made an excellent raft for one, but hardly of use for two. In his eagerness to take full possession of it, a fat man climbed upon it, overreaching himself by his greediness.

The slender raft sunk out of sight, and when it finally came to the surface again the fat man was gone. Jordan retrieved it, clung to it; clutched it with both hands, refusing to yield his hold; even when the waves rolled it over and over and buried him fathoms deep in the sea.

He had been three days on the raft before the will to live had finally cracked, and then, fortified by the raw food washed up to him by the mass of drifting seaweed, revived, and once more struggled to reassert itself over exhausted, tortured flesh.

It was a real sail that his red-rimmed eyes saw this time, but he refused to believe it for a long time, laughing at his own inconsistency in hoping and praying that it was not an optical illusion, and declaring in the same breath it could not be anything else. It was not only a real sail that he saw, but it was coming in his direction, bearing down upon him at a speed that quickly dispelled all doubts.

"No, not in the same boat," came the unexpected reply.

When all but two of the boats had been cast off, and the sea was full of them, bobbing around like cockle-shells, he and Hen had come face to face—the only two passengers left aboard. Hen had looked at him, and nodded pleasantly.

"You've done well, Jordan," were his words. "Which boat do you want to go in?"

Dick was surprised into stammering by the question. Until then there had been no choice. He still considered himself Pettigrew's man; he had not thought of making a break for liberty. Ever since he had left the South American port in Hen's custody he had been a model prisoner, and it seemed slightly dishonorable to take advantage of the disaster to escape.

"Fishermen," he concluded, speaking his thoughts aloud. "I can't be far from land."

A moment later, when the lugger acted as if about to change her course, he raised his free hand and shouted with all the strength he could muster. Even at that distance, it seemed almost miraculous that they heard or saw him; but keen eyes had been scanning the sea closely, looking for just such derelicts. It was L.C. business to pick up fotsam and jetsam of the ocean on the chance of finding a prize.

His cry brought several black faces to the port rail, and Jordan's former conclusion that the lugger was a native fishing craft seemed confirmed by the appearance of the crew. They were swarthy Caribs, an ancient type weakened and diluted by the blood of pure Negroes. A burly half-breed, with the white part of him showing in his straight hair and mottled complexion, seemed to be in command, for the order came from him to heave the lugger up in the wind and lower a boat.

Twenty minutes later Dick sat on the dirty, ill-smelling deck of the vessel, greedily eating and drinking food and liquid that under ordinary circumstances would have repelled him; but nature's cravings had to be satisfied, and it was no time to be critical. The crew formed a half circle around him, with Captain Tucu, the half-breed skipper, and Black Burley, the lugger's mate, in the immediate foreground. They were inspecting him with something more than curiosity—with greed and avariciousness, Dick thought, but he could not exactly translate it in words.

Captain Tucu had an evil, sinister face that in repose was hard and sullen, as if the white blood in him was silently protesting the injustice of the trick played in mingling negro with it; in action it lighted up with a fierceness of either joy or anger that had an element of the fanatic's.

Two-Masted Lugger Hoves in Sight

As the boat drew nearer, Dick made out its nondescript character from its sails. A two-masted lugger, quite common in the Caribbean for fishing and coasting, with humpish hull and mildewed canvas, spotted like the coat of a leopard, it sloped along in the rough seas as if unwillingly propelled by a power that it could not resist.

Long before any one aboard sighted Dick Jordan, he had studied the craft from stem to keel with greedy, anxious eyes, taking in everything from the clumsily bent top-sails to the ill-fitting jib that was forever shifting in the wind.

"Fishermen," he concluded, speaking his thoughts aloud. "I can't be far from land."

Pettigrew Wishes Dick Good Luck in Future

Jordan was more astonished than ever. Pettigrew was eyeing him as a man, and not as an officer of the law; he even placed a hand familiarly on one shoulder.

"We're just man to man now, Jordan," he added. "We're not going to leave this ship together—can't, you know—captain's orders. You go your way, and I go mine. If we meet again—on shore—I'll pinch you. It's my duty. But just now we're — Well," laughing quietly, "friends, I guess. I don't mind calling you that. I wish you good luck! If you reach shore and I don't I wish — wish —"

Dick never knew what he intended to wish, for at that moment the harsh, grating voice of the first mate interrupted, and Jordan tumbled into one boat and Hen Pettigrew into another.

Almost instantly they were separated in the blackness of the night. Dick was free, in truth, then—not on probation. He had the whole world to roam so long as he didn't run afoul of Hen Pettigrew. As they drifted through the darkness of the night, he smiled broadly, while the others sat and moaned or spoke in awed, frightened voices. Would they ever reach land? How far were they from the nearest shore? That was the burden of their conversation.

At first an effort was made to keep the boats together, but this was soon abandoned by the seamen. There was always the danger of

Woman's World Selection of Suitable Fabric Important in Tot's Garments

By Etta Haley

WHEN children are growing by leaps and bounds, it's sometimes a difficult job to keep up their wardrobes. If the mother is handy with the needle, the youngster is lucky because he or she can always be kept in suitable togery.

Just consider the position of the average family. Dad's shirts can always be converted into boy's shirts for junior, pinafores or dresses and blouses can also be used for dresses, blouses and skirts for the younger girls.

When making clothing for the younger members, particularly in using old material, suitability should be carefully considered. Some plaids and prints used for mother's dresses or dad's shirts may be perfectly stunning on the adult, but very poor for the young child.

If there is enough fabric only for a skirt, make that out of plain or print, with little straps if there is enough material, and let the child wear a blouse of contrasting material.

Sashed Slimness

A sashed waistline slims this full skirted sun-dress. Slit pockets are set in at the rounded neckline and the low-square neckline is held up by a wide halter. The jacket and top of the dress are made of red and "white coffee" striped balloon cloth.

blouses for her, consider them as separate garments. When you finish them, however, sew a tape around the waist of the skirt and place button holes all around it. Then sew buttons on the blouse so that the two can be attached together. In this way you prevent the blouse from gaping from underneath the skirt, and this is especially important if the girl likes active play.

Shirtwaist effects are popular in this age group and many tailored dresses can be concocted from shirts. If you have a blue or white shirt, part of this might be made into the bodice and the sleeves while another shirt in a print might be used for the skirt.

Buttons are used extensively on children's garments because they are easy for the youngster to manipulate. Furthermore, they are economical and add decoration even to the simple dress.

Because of the many washings which children's garments must take, always select a sturdy material that will not lose its color or firmness of weave. A chiffon dress may be available for remodeling and it might occur to you to make a youngster's dress out of it, but neither the material nor its lack of wearability is suitable for the active girls under the age of 10.

Classic Styles Popular For Girl's Dresses

Fortunately little girl's dresses vary little from year to year. You can buy several good basic patterns and use them again and again, with just slight variations. If you are good at alteration, you might even use these patterns for several years, simply taking them in when you first get them, and then letting them out after a few months or years as the girl grows.

Jumpers with several changes of blouses are very much acceptable for the girl under and slightly over 10. If you are using a heavy material such as corduroy, be sure that the lines of the garment follow the rule of strict simplicity.

Princess style dresses with buttons all the way down the front are very attractive on the immature figure. This type of dress may be made

If you have some old shirts...

In any type of material and may also have a variety of trimmings. You'll want contrasting color tape on some, brie-a-brac on others and perhaps embroidery on still others if you have the time and are so inclined.

Growing girls particularly need gored or full skirts, the basque type being very popular. It will particularly please them if the garment has some crown-up feature like a plain colored bodice with a matching print in the skirt.

If your youngster is old enough, let her work out some of the decorative details of the dress herself. She may be interested in sewing a feather-stitch around a full skirt, for example; or perhaps, she has learned some interesting weaving or braiding at school with which she might like to trim the collar, pockets or sleeves.

Speaking of pockets, these are a very handy feature in the youngster's dress. Children just adore them, and they can easily carry decorative detail that will make the dress unusually attractive and endearing to the little girl.

If you are making a dress out of old things of your own or out of dad's shirts, and find that you are short of material, you might try a band along the hem, around the sleeves and neck in a contrasting color. This will not only add length to the dress, but is a very smart feature in youngster's clothing.

If the girl is in the under 10 group and you are making skirts and

Summer Fashion Notes

Simplicity of line offers real beauty in summer styles; stress medium prints rather than too large designs.

Bathing suits are here to cater to each taste. There are very brief ones for sun-tanning; there are others that cover more of you if you want to be conservative, like the one-piece type, or the two-piece with bloomers, skirt and halter top.

Striped dresses are always cool and neat looking. Look for interesting buttons to relieve the tailored look.

Beach coats are popular, too, and a definite must for bathing activities, particularly if you change at home and want to walk to the beach. They're also protective when you don't want to expose yourself to too much sun.

BERNIE FRALIN

A Story of Two In Yankee Land

"What has the state of Texas got that Henry county and Illinois has n't got?"

This question propelled a proud Texan who visited in Geneseo recently, was the signal for a lot of good natured bantering. The Texan talked so well about the Lone Star state that he grew red in the face as he depicted the wonders of that Western state and he departed with a far away look in his eyes wondering when he could get back to the wide open spaces. The man was B. (Ben Bernie) Fralin druggist and politician from O'Donnell and a gentleman, sub. of the old South. Some of the vividness of the verbal pictures painted by Mr. Fralin is very striking and can be attested to by Eddie Boxman, nite clerk at the Geneseo Hotel, who heard the Texas man deliver such as the following: "5% Yankees have the wrong idea about our state," he said. "Why, if all the Texas steers were one STEER, he could stand with his front feet in the Gulf of Mexico and his hind feet in Canada, and with his horns punch holes in the moon, and with his tail brush the mists off the Northern lights."

"Take the million and a half tons of sulphur we mine in Texas each year, why if all that sulphur was in the hands of the devil, he would never have any fuel problems — besides we use a million pounds of sulphur a year keeping down chills and fever. And if all the cotton ginned in O'Donnell were baled and built into a stairway, it would reach to heaven. And it is so healthful in our state that over in Eastland, Texas a horned frog lived 30 years without food or water."

Bernie paused a minute to get his breath while his buddy, Lee Garner went out after a cup of coffee, an dthen resumed:

"For size, Texas shows the way. The United States without the state of Texas would look like a three legged Boston terrier. Our state is so big that the folks in O'Donnell call the people in Dallas 'Yankees' and mean it. Us people of Texas are so darn proud of O'Donnell and Texas that we can't sleep at nite — especially in political years when Hop Halsey has pronounced us a post office."

Bernie now grew ecstatic and stroked his heavy head of hair as he let loose with the following:

"It is not only that we have so many square miles of rich land; we have oil beneath the surface of the land according to Doc Beach; moreover we have Guadalupe mt. and other mountains up in the air. Many Texas ranches have two or three mountain ranges on them. All the people of the U. S. could move to Texas and it still would be no more densely populated than is Massachusetts. Why we have land enough to supply every man, woman and child in the nation with a tract 140 ft by 400 feet, and still have enough room for the U. S. Army, the British Army, the French Army, the Russian Army and the Italian army to march around five abreast."

"Yes, we raise hogs, too! If all the hogs of Texas were one hog, he could dig the Panama canal in 3 roots and one grant."

After that big lie, Bernie took time off and Mr. Fralin took up where he left off, and Mr. Fralin was reminded that the Texas steers have come to Illinois to put on weight; many of them right here in Henry County. We have yet to hear of a Texas steer wanting to go back to Texas. As for a Texas steer kicking holes in the moon, the steers are generally so weak that they are unable to kick one another.

Issofar as the high mountains are concerned, take Starved Rock in Illinois — it is so dangerous to climb that a tribe of reckless Indians scaled that peak one time and couldn't get down again and they starved to death — hence the name — Starved Rock.

Mr. Fralin said nothing about cows, why? Because in Texas a cow must be turned loose on a ranca which stretches as far as the eye can see — there's little if any grass and — the poor cow lives on hope — the hope of finding a green pasture over by the horizon; it walks and walks and at the end of the day is so exhausted and hungry that it cannot walk back and it stays away all nite; thus such critters must be branded so that the owner can claim same at roundup.

He speaks of cotton — that is the trouble — we have too much cotton. What we want and need is Mr. Fralin says little, if anything about something to eat being raised in his state — all he mentions is mountains, cotton, politicians, sulphur, and horned frogs.

But we do admire Mr. Fralin's loyalty to his home state — and we readily admit the sociability and remarkable hospitality of all Texas people. Our grandfather lived in that state for many years. Very glad to have known you. Come again, Bernie. — Reprint July 5th issue Geneseo "REPUBLICAN", Illinois.

Yes, we raise hogs, too! If all the hogs of Texas were one hog, he could dig the Panama canal in 3 roots and one grant.

After that big lie, Bernie took time off and Mr. Fralin took up where he left off, and Mr. Fralin was reminded that the Texas steers have come to Illinois to put on weight; many of them right here in Henry County. We have yet to hear of a Texas steer wanting to go back to Texas. As for a Texas steer

Upside Down Cake Is Tops

THE appeal of an upside down cake is its surprise attributes, for it may offer a different fruit flavor every time or a combination of flavors. Both pineapple and apricot are favorites, but have you tried sliced canned peaches? These add delicacy to the cake illustrated above.

Cooked dried fruits make excellent and inexpensive toppings, using one or two or a miscellany of apricots, prunes or figs, pears, nectarines and apple rings. A delicious combination is achieved by using halves of canned pears filled with halves of canned figs, filling the spaces between the pears with figs cut in a size to fit.

Most recipes for upside down cake stress a moderate or slow oven, which means either 350 or 300 degrees, the lower temperature naturally requiring a longer period. When a modern gas range does the baking, its heat control maintains such an accurate, even temperature that the cake bakes perfectly without watching or turning in the oven.

HAY FEVER AND WEEDS

Cincinnati is showing the rest of the country the only practical way to rid a large town and its environs of hay fever by waging an open war on ragweed, principal cause of this obnoxious, and sometimes fatal summer and autumn malady.

An active anti-weed committee is backing up Cincinnati's weed ordinance which requires that all weeds be kept to within a height of ten inches. The entire city is being told what ragweed looks like, how it causes hay fever, its most dangerous periods, and the best method of destroying it.

Because ragweed is an annual it can be destroyed by cutting before pollination or seeding, thus preventing the weed from coming up again the following season. The city not only demands that control be exercised by home owners with lawns and gardens within the city and by small farm owners in the city's perimeter, but it is also going all out after the weed in its parks and other amusement areas where there is vegetation.

The anti-weed committee and Cincinnati Park Commission are also encouraging the use of the new scientific chemical discovery, an ester of 2, 4-D (Dichlorophenoxyacetic acid) claiming it to be the most effective and cheapest way to kill weeds. It is sure death to ragweed, responsible for about 90 per cent of the nation's hay fever. The product was recently placed on the market by Sherwin Williams. According to these men, Weed-No-More is actually a plant hormone which kills by strangulation such obnoxious weeds as ragweeds, poa on ivy, plantain, dandelion, samar, horse nettle, Japanese honeysuckle, chickweed, bindweed and many others.

Research shows that about 8 per

Vital Economy

Hearing that it would not be necessary for anybody to pay any federal taxes for a period of 12 months would have been good news to a lot of people any year for two decades before World War II. It would have occupied acres of front-page space in metropolitan papers, utilized hours of radio time and consumed gallons of red ink. It might have started a buying boom.

The money people used to put out in federal taxes was staggering (then) although the amount seems small in contrast to what they have been paying lately and probably will keep paying for several years. Just the same, pre-war taxes were big money and, even now, would be worth saving. That's exactly the point I want to make in this department today: It can be saved.

Over Twice Enough

Civilian employees of the United States government today number approximately 2,800,000 when 1,250,000 would be plenty. Even this low figure is about twice what we had six months after World War I. In short, government has 1,550,000 unnecessary hirelings now—more people than live in The Bronx, in Los Angeles or in St. Louis plus all of its suburbs. It is humiliating to think about.

All of this enormous host of people are eating out of the public breadbasket. They are not to be thought about as if they had private wealth and had retired to pursue some impractical hobby. Such people as that do, at least, distribute wealth previously put away. The people I am talking about are dead-weight on the rest of us. They subsidize on federal tax revenue.

Five Million Grand

Since their average annual income is about $2,400 each, they are costing the taxpayers of the United States every year the staggering sum of $5,720,000,000 in salaries alone. Everybody who hires salaried people knows well that salaries are not all the expense they incur. They all have to be provided more or less space, lighted, heated and equipped.

Add to these items such matters as traveling expenses, telephone calls and incidentals and the grand annual expense, as a result of having these people employed, will swell to five billion dollars at least. If such people could be lifted off the public's neck the money could be saved and the public would surely feel the relief.

have sprung from an old, old Louisiana custom. In the old days you never purchased goods without expecting, and getting, something FREE. The kids got a stick of candy, a whistle, etc., Ma got a handkerchief, or Pa got a cut of Brown Mule. It is one of our early memories of life down in the swamps seeing the cracker barrel and the yard long hunk of dried sausage ready for any chance customer to help himself. Don't get us wrong, O'Donnell merchants, those Creoles were no fools. They didn't lose money, -- and it was also pleasant. We understand that now the custom is not prevalent except in the remote parishes.

AGAIN getting back to politics Ben Young, Mayor of Harmony, said Hop Halsey was a four to one favorite in his community and that most of the north end boys of Dawson county had George pegged at 3rd place. The Index believes Ben has gotten under Bernie's hypnotic spell. Now take the old line politicians here --- Jumbo, B. M. and J. Mac. --- they don't think Mahon will even get a good work-out. Again it is difference of opinion that makes a horse race. Shipping back to H. L. he recollects when he and Homer Rainey were fishing buddies back in Young County. As most folks know in a State race interest must be created in the race or all candidates would run indifferent races. The verbal scuffling of Rainey, Smith, Jester, etc reminds us of trial lawyers in a murder case. They rant and rave with each other and near come to blows but at court recess they go out to drink a coke together. Again take professional wrestlers. They grunt, groan, and moan when in reality they are mere putting each other. Showmanship is important in public affair and the Big Five in the Governor's race are merely giving Texas the show that the public expects. Individually we are favorable to either Rainey or Jester, but no one in O'Donnell can tell the difference a year from now regardless who is elected. Incidentally Rainey is no more communistic than your favorite bootblack down the street. That's just settler water to liven up the drink.

An Important Bill

Recent efforts by the Department of Justice to obtain court interpretation of the antitrust laws as prohibiting agreements among competing carriers in matters of rates and service, accentuate the need for prompt clarification of the in these matters. The Index-Press believes.

We believe that the present practices are in the public interest and are essential to the orderly conduct of transportation. We further believe that, with certain safeguards the agency by Congress over the past years for the express purpose of regulating rates and of interstate carriers can be relied upon to do this in the public interest, and that carriers complying with the orders of these agencies should be immune from application of the antitrust laws to the practices involved. Bills before the last Congress dealt only with conference rate-making. This rate-making system has been developed over a period of many years with the full knowledge and implied approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission which has and on occasion exercises the same veto power over rates proposed by conferences as over those initiated by individual companies subsequent to the hearings on these bills. However, the Department of Justice brought the civil action now pending against the Western railroads. This action covers not only conference rate-making but also agreements as to train schedules and many other services features, and it is evident that to clarify the situation with respect to these other important operating practices new legislation is needed applicable to them as well as to conference rate-making.

WATCH FOR RABID ANIMALS

With a sharp increase in the number of persons being bitten by rabid animals in Texas, and similar occurrences being reported often, Dr. Cox warned all Texans to be on the alert for symptoms of this disease when around domestic or wild animals. The 2,166 animal heads received for examination by the State Health Department during the past year have shown 687 positives including incidence among cats, dogs, horses, rabbits, rats, squirrels, skunks, guinea pigs, coyotes, gophers, raccoons, hogs, sheep and prairie dogs. Rabies is transmitted to man thru a bite or having a cut exposed to the saliva of a rabid animal. Bites thru clothing are not as dangerous as bites on exposed surfaces, because the saliva is wiped off as the tooth passes thru the cloth.

If a person is bitten, the offending animal should be penned, if possible, for a period of ten days observation. If the animal is normal at the end of that time, the case can be dismissed. If it is necessary to kill the animal, this should be done in such a manner that the brain is not destroyed, otherwise an examination to determine whether or not the animal had rabies will be impossible. If the head is sent to the State Health Department, care should be used in properly incising to prevent decomposition.

ART RETURNED . . . The above, Apostle in Despair Over the Passing of Mary, taken by the Germans from the Wit Stwosz altar of the Church of Our Lady, Cracow, Poland, has been returned to the Polish church by the United States forces in Europe.

HITLER'S SHAME

Historic Church Altar Stolen By Germans, Returned to Poles

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Pauline Frederick, WNU Foreign Correspondent, was the sole American correspondent to accompany the historic mission of returning the Wit Stwosz altar, the largest in Europe, to the Polish church from which the Germans, on Hitler's orders had stolen it. Here is her exclusive story.)

By PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Features

CRACOW, POLAND.—It was after midnight when a special train pulled out of the loading yards at Nuernberg, Germany, and headed east. There were two passenger coaches on it, one of them formerly the private car of Joachim von Ribbentrop. There were 22 freight cars, carefully sealed, bearing warnings in English, German and Polish that anyone trying to pilfer the train would be shot. Armed G.I.s stood on guard.

This was a train to bring shame to any German with a conscience. It was to bring tears of joy to the eyes of many Poles. For aboard was Poland's greatest art treasure, the Wit Stwosz altar, being returned to its home, the Church of Our Lady, in Cracow, from where the Germans had looted it.

This trip was the end of a mission begun in 1939. In August of that year the international situation had reached such a critical stage that Prof. Charles Estreicher of the fine arts department of the University of Cracow decided that steps should be taken to safeguard the altar from possible looting. Consequently, he supervised the packing of the sculptures in great wooden cases which were placed on barges and then floated down the Vistula to Sandmierz.

By mid-September, however, the Germans had found all the boxes. Hitler ordered them conveyed to the Reichshank in Berlin.

Hitler Orders It Set Up

Meantime, Burgomeister Leibelt of Nuernberg conceived the idea of establishing a Veit Stoss center in his city. Veit Stoss is the German spelling of Wit Stwosz. Both Germans and Poles claim the artist as one of their nationals. The fuhrer ordered that the altar should be set up in St. Lawrence's Lutheran church in Nuernberg.

That meant that the framework which had been left in the Church of Our Lady in Cracow had to be torn out and brought to Germany.

The pieces were unpacked in Nuernberg. Then it was found that the Germans had miscalculated again—the altar was too large for St. Lawrence's church.

It now became necessary to find a safe place in which to store the unpacked treasure. There was an ancient tunnel beneath Nuernberg castle. Silesian miners were brought in to lengthen the corridor which begins in an obscure little house near where Albrecht Durer lived and slopes downward until the passage cut through the solid rock is some 100 feet under ground.

The Polish underground kept track of the altar, reporting its whereabouts to Professor Estreicher who had gone to London. There came the all-out raid on Nuernberg and Poles waited anxiously to know whether the altar had been destroyed as the castle above it had been. The tunnel had been a safe place and the Wit Stwosz work was unharmed.

Last October, Lt. Frank Albright of the monuments and fine arts division of military government, and a former professor of archeology at Johns Hopkins, began supervising, with the help of Professor Estreicher, the long task of preparing the altar for shipment to Poland.

Carries Art Treasures.
On April 28, 1946, the train was ready to leave for Cracow with the altar, furniture and typewriters that had been stolen from the University of Cracow; 2,000 chalices and monstrances from which the gold had been looted; da Vinci's "Lady With Ermine," and Rembrandt's "Landscape," together with other treasures that had been taken from Poland by Nazi Governor-General Frank.

I had had nothing to do with bringing back the altar to Poland. But I wore an American uniform, and that was enough to include me in the little group on whom the Polish people lavished their gratitude. I was handed bouquets of flowers. The children clapped and cheered as I walked by. They sang. One handsome young blonde boy, about 14, reached his hand through the crowd and taking mine, said in English:

"You're a reporter. Please tell the American people how grateful we are."

Poles Grateful for Return of Altar

When our train reached Cracow there was a great welcoming ceremony. Then we were whisked to the Francuski hotel.

When the altar was unpacked, the center sculpture, the Passing of Mary, was set up for the dedicatory mass. That was on Sunday, May 5, with spring in full bloom. The great church was packed to the doors. Sun streamed in on the Mary surrounded by white hydrangeas and glowing candles. From high in the back the music of the mass flowed down across the worshippers to the priests before the altar.

Then the mass was finished. Suddenly from the organ, reverently and with all the power of its great pipes, came "The Star Spangled Banner." There was not a dry American eye in the church.

As we came out into the sunlight to go to our hotel, a great cry went up from the people. "Long live the Americans!"

Annual Farm Safety Week Is Set for July 21 to 27

By W. J. Dryden
WNU Farm Editor

Accidents—one crop we can do without! And that is the reason why July 21 to 27 has been set aside as "Farm Safety Week" to carry the annual warning message to those who work with tools, livestock and machinery. Accidental death marches through the farm and ranch lands every day.

The great outdoors, it seems, is not so healthy when you look at the figures. Farm work accidents alone killed 4,500 persons last year. These farm deaths were 28 per cent of the nation's occupational death total, more than in any of the other seven major industrial groups.

'Eliminate a Hazard a Day.'

That is the information which President Truman undoubtedly had when he issued a proclamation this year calling upon farm people of the nation "to observe National Farm Safety Week by resolving to eliminate at least one hazard a day until their farms are as safe as they can possibly make them."

They must be made to see also the peril of nails, ladders, machines. Because of truths like this the United States department of agriculture, the National Grange, the National Fire Protection association, the Farm Equipment Institute, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Farmers Union, the co-operatives and other leading agricultural organizations are taking an active part along with the National Safety Council in observing Farm Safety Week from July 21 to July 27 as a means of carrying safety education to the farmer.

Riddle of Ring Around Neck of Bear Is Solved

HEMLOCK, WASH. — Frequently a black bear with a white ring around its neck had appeared in this area. Some thought it was a tame bear with a gray collar of some kind. Others said it was a freak and actually had a white ring of fur around its neck.

Joe Szydio solved the riddle when he shot the bear. The white ring was paint. It is believed that the bear, in its raids on garbage and other piles, had got his head into a paint bucket, probably tipping it over on his head. The bear could wipe the paint off its face with its paws, but must not have been able to wash his neck.

Eight Tractors Plant Two Fields in One Day

TAYLOR, TEXAS. — Recently a tornado ruined crops west of Granger, destroying stands of corn and other crops, including those of Louis Hanzelka and Julius Cepcar.

Working almost as fast as the tornado, six neighbors with tractors volunteered to help Hanzelka and Cepcar replant the two farms. They showed up bright and early in the morning, and by night the fields had been plowed and planted.

The eight tractors were manned by Hanzelka and Cepcar and Paul Repa, Albert Repa, Adolph Naizer, Willie Pekar, Louis Hajda and Hubert Gourbec. After the fields were put in shape the ground was planted to cotton and feed.

That's what a little neighborly cooperation will do!

Miner Wants Army To Bomb Mountain

WHITE SANDS, N. M.—A gold prospector who owns a mountain near where the V-2 rocket tests are being made has petitioned Lt. Col. H. R. Turner, commanding officer of White Sands proving ground, to aim a rocket over his way and blow up the mountain. It would save him a lot of digging, he says. Colonel Turner has revealed that they will not be able to oblige the prospector.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

AIRPORT CHATTER

A new amphibian and seaplane base on the lake front in Wolfeboro, N. H., has been completed for service of planes which visit the New Hampshire lake region all year around. . . . James E. Wolfe, former army pilot, is now manager of the Hartsville, N. C., airport. . . . To vary life a bit, pilots of personal planes at the Fair Haven, Vt., airport have been practicing formation flying. . . . Grant Eldredge, former army pilot, has leased the Salmon, Idaho, airport. He used to fly the hump in India with the ATC, so the Idaho mountains won't bother him. . . . The Sportsmen's Pilot's association of Colorado will fly their planes to Estes Park for a convention August 22 to 24. . . . Traffic at the Chicago airport increased 49 per cent in May.

VETS AND AVIATION

Thousands of wartime dreams are certain to crash, many aviation writers predict. And yet we find veterans getting most of the new jobs in aviation, not only as pilots but also as maintenance men, clerks, and in traffic control. Many vets are creating jobs for themselves in aviation. But government estimates indicate that even 10 years from now the number of persons employed in the industry will not equal the number of men and women who, while in the services, were hopeful of making aviation a peacetime career.

HELICOPTER FALLS

Many people have asked: "If a helicopter's engine kinks out, can the craft be landed?" The question was answered recently at Dayton, Ohio, when an AAF helicopter dropped from 9,000 feet without damage to the craft or injury to the pilot. With its engine dead, autorotation, or free-wheeling of the rotor blades, allowed the pilot, Capt. Irvin C. Steiner of Wright Field, to land his helicopter safely in a cow pasture.

GOVERNOR WON'T FLY!

Col. Roscoe Turner, the air speed king, has a project in mind for this summer—to make Gov. John C. Vivian of Colorado get his feet off the ground!

"Once I can get his feet off the ground and demonstrate what a wonderful thing it is to travel by air, I think I can change his whole attitude," Turner promised. "He'll become so air-minded it will be a great thing for the state."

A survey of army and navy air forces showed around 1,000,000 were interested in postwar occupations related to flying. Present direct employment in aviation is around 300,000, of whom 185,000 work for aircraft manufacturers, 55,000 for the scheduled airlines, 10,000 for the federal government, 20,000 for airports, and the rest in a variety of jobs.

Quote of the Week

Urges Utah Airport

The Parowan (Utah) Times received a telegram from Lt. Simon Benson who is in Berlin, Germany, urging his home town to build an airport. Benson expects to return to Parowan soon.

Lyle Nelson, witness in a trial at Jordan, Mont., involving alleged illegal branding, testified he spotted misbranded animals from his plane while flying 10 to 15 feet over the cattle at a speed of only 35 to 45 miles an hour.

Chart Your Vegetable Canning Course

Yes, that canning season has come around again. Gardens all over the country are bursting and blooming with their bounty of peas, corn, green beans, beets, carrots and greens. It's time to stop being the proverbial grasshopper and become the busy ant who wisely laid in provisions for the winter.

Well-laden shelves give a wonderful feeling of plenty when the earth becomes bare and unproductive. You can simply go down to your canning cellar and select the vegetables that go best with the meal. There's particular joy in this if you've raised them yourself and watched them grow by degrees, but even if you haven't done your own gardening, you'll enjoy those hand-picked foods.

What Is Processing?

When we speak of canning vegetables, we often use the word processing. This simply means that you can the food, placing it in sterile jars and apply a high enough temperature to kill the micro-organisms and then seal the jars so no more can get in.

If you're new at this canning business, remember these two important points: get produce as fresh as possible (this is where having a garden of your own helps so much) and trying to observe to the letter the rule of getting the vegetables from garden to can in two hours.

Rule No. 2 is to have all your equipment ready so that there will be no time lost once you start the vegetables on their way to the jars.

Essential Equipment.

You will need these pieces of equipment to make your canning program run as smoothly as possible: clean jars with caps, tongs with which to remove the jars from the canner; towels; newspapers, a large kettle for pre-cooking the vegetables, spoons, small paring knife, pot holders, and of course the canner, preferably a pressure cooker. You may also find a funnel essential, and it's nice to have a teakettle with a spout so that you can pour hot water into the jars after they are filled.

The day before you actually decide to do your canning check over the above equipment list and see that everything is laid out and ready. The jars should be checked for nicks and cracks by running a finger over the top edge, and then washed in hot soapy suds and rinsed in clear hot water.

Pressure Cooker Desirable.

Although the time table at the top of the column gives time for processing in the hot water bath, it should be remembered that the pressure cooker is the only method accepted by most authorities including the department of agriculture.

Why is this, you ask? First of all, there is danger of botulism in foods that are not properly processed. This particular type of poisoning comes from the soil, and when present in the food and not destroyed by processing, they produce a toxin which is a deadly poison. A pressure canner is regarded as the only means of providing temperatures high enough to kill the botulinus bacteria.

You may also ask why the pressure canner is recommended for vegetables and not considered essential (though it is desirable) for tomatoes and fruits. The answer is that vegetables, and also meats and fish belong to the non-acid group. In acid foods, the bacteria can be killed in a reasonably short length of time by boiling-water bath temperature, but in non-acid foods, much higher temperatures, as you get in the pressure cooker, are necessary.

Use of Pressure Cooker.

Prepare the raw vegetable as directed on the chart given at the top of this column. Pre-cook vegetable to shrink it somewhat and make a more attractive pack. Save the cooking liquid to fill the jars. Allow head space of about 1/4 inch at the top of each jar except in the case of corn, peas and shell beans which need 1 inch because they swell more during cooking. Also add salt if desired, about 1 teaspoon to each quart.

Pour boiling water into canner to a level of about 2 inches, or follow manufacturer's directions. Seal or partially seal the covers on the jars, then place them on rack in pressure canner.

Adjust cover of canner and fasten tightly with clamps. Leave the petcock open until a jet of steam comes from it for 7 minutes. Check to see that no steam escapes from anywhere else except the petcock. Then close the petcock and allow the pressure to rise to designated temperature. Then, and only then, begin to count your processing time, checking often to see that the temperature does not fluctuate. When processing is finished, turn off the heat and let the pressure gauge come down to zero. Open petcock gradually, remove lid away from you and set jars on several thicknesses of cloth towels or newspapers, away from a draft.

Never taste home canned vegetables which you think may be spoiled. Your sense of smell is the best guide in telling you if the vegetables are good or not.

If you are still using the hot-water bath for processing, follow the cooking times as directed, and always boil the vegetables in an open sauce pan for 10 minutes before tasting or using when ready to serve.
