SCOUTS TO POST

The Boy Scouts of Troop 85 attnded an over night camp at the area Boy Scout camp grounds at Doctor Post last week end; troops from Sillman towns were also there. An especially impressive feature of the gather ing was the council fire held that night. An over the cliff hike was carried out Sunday morning several of the canyons were explor-ed. The youths found a nice collectof bones taken from the banks of cliffs below a layer of hard shale. This discovery proved of interest to the boys and they often inquired of the scoutmaster as to the age, etc of the fossils and bones; also a few mineralized rocks were found. ### THE GEORGIA MESS

WASHINGTON .- It was carefully hushed up at the time, but the political mess in Georgia might have been avoided if the justice department had gone ahead with a secret probe it conducted of the Talmadge election.

Last fall, the justice department had FBI men making a thorough check of Talmadge intimidation and racial discrimination at the polls. This, under recent supreme court rulings, now is the direct concern of the federal government and can be prosecuted as a criminal offense.

The FBI investigation showed that Talmadge had sent instructions to the Georgia primary polls aimed at preventing Ne groes from voting. Although the evidence was conclusive, the justice department finally got cold feet. The case was dropped.

One obstacle the justice department ran up against was the fact that Eugene Talmadge was sick and they couldn't get to him for interrogation. Also son Herman Talmadge outbluffed the justice boys and refused to answer questions unless a stenographer was present.

Final factor, however, was the fear that federal government intervention in Georgia would boomerang, hurting the very same liberal forces the justice department wanted to help.

MARSHALL'S WAR LEAK

One of the most significant things to watch regarding the state department under General Marshall will be whether he continues Jimmie Byrnes' policy of open diplomacy.

No secretary of state since Charles Evans Hughes has been as frank with the press as Byrnes. Hughes handled all press conferences himself, was a master at giving important background information, was generally frank and forthright. Byrnes, while not handling many conferences himself, went further than Hughes in making sure that a competent state department official gave newsmen a general picture of what was happening inside diplomatic negotiations.

Byrnes also didn't object to most news leaks; felt the American people had the right to know about foreign policy.

However, some of those allegedly close to General Marshall say he may tighten up on the Byrnes policy and crack down on news leaks. This. of course, may be unfair to the new secretary of state: for, based on his own past record. Marshall has been quite a "leaker" himself. In fact. one cable seized from the files of the German foreign office now reveals that General Marshall was woefully indiscreet in the early stages of the European war and inadvertently let out important secrets to the enemy.

AIDS TAX EVADERS

Some of the nation's biggest black-marketeers and on-themake war contractors are getting away with income tax evasion, thanks to a snarled-up situation inside the justice department

Around 300 criminal income tax cases are awaiting prosecution, with little chance of rapid action. Behind them is another 1,200 income tax fraud cases in the treasury, soon ready for transmittal to the bottlenecked justice department. Meanwhile. the black-marketeers and certain war contractors have been getting away with murder.

CHURCH AND LABOR

It hasn't been announced officially, but prominent church leaders are beginning an important behind-thescenes study in connection with the government's efforts to maintain industrial peace. There have been several private meetings recently at which both Protestant and Catholic clergymen sat down and traded ideas with industrial and labor spokesmen on the question of labor relations.

While the churchmen deny that they are endeavoring to make religion a "bargaining factor" in the settlement of labor disputes, they feel that the church should play a definite part in improving work and pay standards. They also believe it is the duty of the church to inject a "greater sense of moral responsibility and understanding" in bargaining between employers and employees.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Washington's poorest guesser is the Pentagon official who transferred General Marshall from a plush suite of offices at the Pentagon to a small, two-desk room just four days before the general was named secretary of state. . . . Henry Wallace has jacked the New Republic's circulation up from 40,000 to 100,000 weekly in one month. . Harold Smith, former director of the budget, may replace Jack Hutson as assistant secretary general of the United Nations.

Add Gay, Fresh Dashes of Color By Fashioning Own Lampshades

By Ertta Haley

If you've had your heat on just long enough to notice the permanent film of soot that has gathered over many of your furnishings, then it's time to freshen up the house. Some special offenders frequently are the lampshades.

No homemaker, whether she is fastidious or just plain neat, ever will permit a soiled lampshade in her Naturally there are some simply will not respond to cleaning after a certain stage has been reached, or they have become so faded and weary that nothing short of drastic means will solve

Making lampshades at home is really a simple problem. You have the frame, and the rest is just a matter of choosing the right fabric for your room, and fitting it. Now, don't let this last be your stumbling block, because it's really easier than fitting a dress. You can pick up the lampshade and just go at it easily, using your pins generously to tack the new lampshade on, and then stitching it on.

And, of course, you always can use paper or fabric and paste this on over the lampshade you now have or on the frame, and it's as easy as doing up paper dolls. The main requisite is keeping the work mathematically precise in measurements, and then using your neatest technique in pasting or sewing after fit-

Wrapping or Wallpaper May Be Used for Covering

We have all at one time or another run into wrapping papers or wallpapers which we thought would be the perfect choice for a lampshade, but somehow we never were quite able to figure out how to put them to use. Here's a foolproof plan for making these shades fit.

To make a pattern for the shade, lay some large pieces of brown wrapping paper or newspaper on the floor. Paint the edges of the lamp newspaper. Make certain that you turn the shade evenly, particularly if the shade is not round. The wet paint leaves a mark on the paper that can be used as a guide for cutting either paper or material lampshade.

Cut the pattern as soon as the paint dries, leaving enough at the edge so that the shade cover can be joined properly. The paper shade then may be attached to the frame and held with paper clips while you stitch the top and the bottom by overcasting or by sewing on a braid-

Never throw away the top or bottom rings from old shades as these can be used to make fabric shades. If you want to make a pleated paper shade, this will have to be cut in a circular shape before pleating. Fitting properly in this case is of the utmost importance. Here again, use the pattern trick described above and make sure the pattern fits before you actually cut the shade

By making your own lampshades.

Fabric-Lined Shades Require Different Technique

Fabric shades should be stretched tight on the frame you use for them, but before you actually place the fabric on the frame, you must

Flannel Dress

This dress and jacket costume by a New York designer uses pink flannel for the dress with a simply styled high neck and short sleeves and a stitched yoke effect on the bodice. It is belted in the same pink and black wool used for the jacket printed with Peruvian charms.

vind seam binding or a bias of the same fabric as the shade around the wires of the frame.

Another decision you must make before actually covering with fabric and cutting the shade is whether or not you want the edges finished with a double fold, decorative rib-bon, fringe or braid. This will make a' difference in the size of the shade itself, and you may not have fabric to waste in trimming off later.

Always assemble everything before you start to work, as the job requires concentration, and you cannot stop and look for something when you are trying to do a good job of Fabric shades may be lined or unlined depending upon the kind of material used. If you stretch the fabric to the shade, it must always be lined. Select the lining fabric carefully as this is right next to the light, which will give any fabric a rosy glow.

As you stretch the fabric over the shade pin it carefully to both top and bottom. Make certain the fabric really stretches and use a bias frame white, and while the paint is cut. Pin and re-pin the shade sevstill wet, roll the frame across the eral times until you are certain that the fabric lays smooth as silk on the frame. Then overcast the fabric to the frame as you would with a paper shade and trim as desired.

For lampshades with petticoat ruffles, use any of the dainty organdies or various printed fabrics. in many cases may be unlined, but it's a good idea to test the fabric against the light so you will know what to expect when you have the shade made.

The ruffle which you are using must be cut three times as large as the circumference around the shade. Pleat or gather this and join the Heavier fabrics such as drapery and slipcover material also may be used for lampshades, but these are best made like the paper shades, more tailored and trim. Do not at-tempt to put ruffles on them.

Trim Your Fabrics

If you're doing some trimming about the household, you'd be surprised how easy it is when you have the know-how. In making pompons for hats or dresses or other purposes, use embroidery twist (thread), novelty knitting thread or yarn. Cut two circles on cardboard with a hole in the center of each. Thread needle and pass around the holes and around cardboard until a thick layer is formed all the way around. The thicker the layer, the fluffier the pompom. Cut the thread between the two cardboards, remove them, holding threads firmly in the center and tie a thread to secure them at that point. Clip edges of thread.

To make fringe, buy it by the yard or ravel threads from the material you are using. Cover the top of the fringe with tiny braiding or overcast it. Then comb to make it straight.

Fashion Flashes

You may have your gloves long or ! short depending upon your prefer-Gauntlets with wide cuffs are especially smart for suits.

Gay little shorties as well as all lengths of the longer gloves are used for formal wear. Some of them a bustle. If you're dramatic and may even be the fingerless mitts very smart, choose a simpler gown which haven't been seen since ladies in a stunning color that gives you used fans exclusively.

Sandals of transparent plastic look especially lovely with a gracefully draped lame gown.

If you're very feminine, wreath yourself in white silk marquisette with a modified hoopskirt and even long, flowing lines.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

DIE'S marriage took place in the first months of the war, and has gone on the rocks. It isn't her fault, unless indeed it was a fault to marry a man she had known only a few

However, she was not the only girl to do that in 1942, and she and Russ had some happy months together, before he was ordered away to the South Seas. Edie settled down in her old home with her mother to wait for the baby; she did not see Russ again for almost four years. In the second of those years, her old chum Nancy came to board with her, and all three women adored and spoiled little Sonia. Edie and Nancy had good jobs; everyone was

Then Russ came home, to find that, first, he'd earn less money than Edie, for a while at least; sec ond, that his lovely little daughter didn't like him, and third, that he was more lonely at home than he had ever been abroad. Adjustments were difficult, and by the time they began to smooth out, Edie discovered to her consternation that Russ and Nancy were falling in love.

"I had never suspected it, I had never dreamed it," says Edie's heartbroken letter. "Russ and I had been talking of finding a little place for ourselves, but there was so little choice of places, his prospects were so uncertain, and my job still and little Sonia and me this time of reunion seemed heavenly. Then suddenly it all broke, and Nancy confessed that she and my husband were not only deeply in love, but that the baby she was expecting was his child. She was covered with shame and remorse but that was the situation, and what were we all

Nancy Manages Household. "A complication is that my mother has not been well, and Nancy, who is very capable, has been managing things at home and taking care of her, too. Mother has always been devoted to Nancy, and is shattered by this terrible revelation. Russ is sullen and silent. Nancy goes on about household duties with her face like a mask, and I feel frantic with despair. What on earth is the way out? If they have fallen in love, seeing each other every day as they have, living under the same roof, are they to blame? Am I to blame for going on with my $75 a week job, which with my mother's thousand a year is all we have? Surely it was not wrong to offer my friend a haven in my home, when she was widowed and heartbroken? I am an ordinarily nice-looking woman of 28, always neat and smartly-dressed, but not glamorous. Nancy is 24, tiny, very pretty, appealing. Please send advice for us all; they know I am writing you."

My dear Edie, I wrote her in reply, this is no one's fault; it is one more result of the supreme folly of war. That Nancy should be widowed so young was a direct result of war. That you and Russ should have been separated in the first important married years is another. That Sonia should not have known her father in her babyhood, that

EVERYONE HURT

A letter to Miss Norris reveals one of the unhappy aftermaths of war. Edie married a man whom she had known only for a few months. He was away in service for four years. During his absence, a baby was born. Edie lived with her mother, who cared for the little girl while Edie worked at a well-paying war job. Then Edie's old chum Nancy came to board with ber. When Edie's busband Russ was discharged, he had to come into the bouse with the three women and the baby. He turned to Nancy for companionship, rather than his wife. Before they realized it, they were in love.

Finally Nancy had to confess to Edie that she was going to have a baby and that its father was Russ. Edie does not know what to do under these painful circumstances.

you should now be the curiouslyassorted family's chief bread-winner, and that the war hero should be humbly hunting a job-all this is wrong. The doubled-up family works an injustice on you all. Things have become pretty hopelessly complicated, and only infinite patience and time can work them out.

And over and above all these unnatural difficulties, surely the rights so absorbing that there seemed to of Nancy's child deserve first conbe no hurry about it. To mother sideration; whatever happens, this unfortunate baby enters life heavily handicapped. To divorce Russ, to have him rush into marriage with Nancy, would only be to mix things up further.

She Knew the Risk.

So my advice is, first, that Nancy get out. She was no ignorant innocent child when she surrendered to the delights of a flirtation with Russ. She knew that Russ was, and is still, the husband of her best friend, the husband of the woman who stretched out a hand to her in her loneliness and need. Exactly how she betrayed that generosity is something that the months to come are going to bring home to this unscrupulous little woman. If Russ goes away with her, as he well may, Edie is no worse off than before. It will give her time to breathe and to think everything over.

But Russ may not go with her. Russ is comfortable now in the old home, with his wife and child. Nancy is the outlaw, and Nancy will have to go to some city hospital, get a job in the kitchen or linen room, as women in her distressed circumstances often do, and give her baby out for adoption; any conscientious foster-parent will give it a better break than she can, and may she come back a wiser woman. And an honester one.

Love does indeed take a man and a woman unawares, sometimes. But not in this case. If Russ, still war-bewildered, uncertain, embarrassed by his joblessness and impecuniosity, was weak in being flattered and companioned by this pretty little housemate, Nancy wasn't. She had no such excuse. She considered neither the rights of Russ, Edie, Sonia or the unborn baby. She thought of exactly one person-herself. That is always an expensive proceeding in these questions of a triangle.

INVISIBLE FLAME

Campers next summer will be able to cook hamburgers and coffee over an "invisible flameless" flame. At least, that is how Du Pont describes its new tablet fuel made from trioxane, a form of formaldehyde. The fuel, produced for the first time on a commercial scale, ignites instantly with a nonluminous flame not easily blown out by wind. It was used during the war experimentally in the search for a fuel to heat field rations without disclosing positions of troops to the enemy.

Soldier Come Home

BETTY ZANE WATSON

Johnny Davis returns to the Daily Clarion, newspaper owned by his fa-ther, J. D. Davis, after three years in service. He gets acquainted with the new office staff, including Kit Willett, a lovely young reporter. He learns from her that his grandmother, Jennifer Martin, has not relented in her re-fusal to grant some of her land for the building of a park and swimming pool for the town's children. She had promised the land through her daughter's persuasion, aithough she had always refused to meet J. D., who she had not considered her social equal. When her daughter died, however, at Johnny's birth, she reneged on her promise and clung to her bitter memories.

"Kit? Say, there's a real girl, Don't know what I'd have, done without her this spring when three of us had the flu. She just about ran the place singlehanded. Great kid!"

She seemed to know all about the 'Park,' too." "Almost everyone does, son." His lips took on a tight, hard line. "I mean how we tried to get it finished. You tell her, Dad?" It was a ticklish subject with them both. They had never discussed their attempts with outsiders before.

"I may have told her some things and then, of course, she may have heard it from Henry or that excuse he calls a son." The last was with disgust.

"Why should they tell her?" Johnny asked-more than just cordially interested.

Why? She's engaged to the goodfor-nothing, that's why!"
"You mean Basil?" Johnny asked unbelievingly. "The same!" was his curt reply. The subject of his cousin, Basil

Martin, incited in Johnny the bitterest of thoughts. He remembered the only time Basil had spoken directly to him was the night at the station on his last furlough before going to France. He had just said goodbye to J. D. when Basil came by in his new convertible. He stopped at the curb and rolled down his window. Johnny turned and smiled-after all might be his last chance and time to forget past hurts. Basil's thin lips curled around the words he flung at John-

"So long, sucker! Bring back a couple of medals. I'll buy one from But his car was halfway down the block before Johnny reached the curb. And now Basil was engaged to the only girl he had ever seen that he wanted.

Johnny rubbed his chin with the back of his hand, and in the case of Sergeant Davis, anyone of his buddies could have vouched that this meant business. It was a simple idiocyncrasy, but big things had

When he walked out of the office, Kit was typing and did not look up until he stopped before her desk, although he sensed she was aware

You know. Miss Willett, I think you had something there-about not giving up too soon." He smiled

She said nothing-only answered his smile.

He might have added there were several things he wanted and did not intend giving up until he had both of them.

When Johnny came out of the drug store late that afternoon, he saw the familiar convertible swing around the corner up Third Street. He had only caught a fleeting glimpse of Basil, his cousin, which worried him not in the least. What did worry him proved itself when he turned the corner and came in sight of the Clarion office.

Basil's car was parked at the curb and Kit Willett was hurrying down the steps toward it. Johnny was still a few hundred feet from them when Kit reached the car. She paused, looking directly at Johnny and waved her hand, then climbed in beside the dark young man sit-ting behind the wheel.

Johnny's Cousin Shows Resentment

Johnny returned the greeting without over-enthusiasm and hurried on toward the office. The car drove away quickly and was out of sight before he came to the steps. He stood looking in the direction they had gone for a few minutes as if by so doing he might decide what to do next.

The thing was pretty much onesided, he thought. Basil was already engaged to Kit Willett. He had money-plenty of it-a nice car, and from what he'd heard Basil threw a mean line. Well, stacked up against no money, Moses, the old jalopy that belonged to the Clarion, and not much time during the past three years to practice a line, the score was already added up. He shrugged his shoulders and walked on into the office. Oh, he wasn't giving up yet, but things weren't quite as rosy as they looked this morning.

Inside the speeding car racing down Third Street, Kit knew immediately there was something on Basil's mind. His greeting, cordial enough, nevertheless announced one of his moods.

Well. how's our 'Tillie-the-toiler' this evening?" he asked sarcas-

'Couldn't be better. I had the most exciting assignment today I think I've ever had. Willie Garbrant is home after five years overseas you know, and J. D .-

"Couldn't we skip it, Kit? I get a little tired hearing you rave on about Davis, knowing what he is and all!" He looked ahead at the road determinedly. Kit, feeling she had offended him on the score of talking about a returned soldier when Basil had been rejected on a heart ailment, which strangely enough had never bothered him until time for his induction, regretted bringing up the subject.

"Sorry, Baz. I wasn't raving on about J. D., though." She hesitated and then summoning up enough courage she continued, "You aren't fair, though, about the whole thing, you know. All you know about J. D. is what your grandmother has told you, and even you'll have to admit she's prejudiced. Why-your father doesn't even really know him, Baz. It's all that old lady-"

"No, I'm afraid I can't understand anyone liking work!" He looked at her seriously.

"Kathryn!" It was a command. "I forbid you to speak that way of my grandmother!"

"Well! We learn something every day, don't we?" She turned to face him squarely, her eyes darkened with anger. "I believe it was ened with anger. "I believe it was you who first told me what a devil your dear grandmother was-or am

Basil's face was a mask of anger and determination. Then quite sud-denly he shrugged his shoulders and his attitude changed to one of indifference. They were outside town now and driving through the countryside. He slowed the car as if on sudden impulse and brought it to a complete stop. Turning to Kit he put his arm about her and pulled her closer to him. "Look, Beautiful-when are we going to stop this bickering and get married so we can fight legallyonly then we won't have anything to fight about." His slow smile caught at the corner of his mouth. Basil was only twenty-one but he had the mature handsomeness of a man in his thirties. "And you mean by that . . . ?"

Kit started to ask. "That you won't be working for Davis or anybody. That's the reason for everything that goes wrong between us. Admit it?" He tilted her chin up for his kiss but Kit pulled away. "And if I do admit it? After all, Basil, I like the work. Do you un-derstand that?"

"No-I'm afraid I can't understand anyone liking work!" He looked at her seriously. "How much longer is it going to be, Kit?"

Kit Sets Her Wedding Date

She knew the time had come. Basil wasn't asking her to name the date now as he had done so many times before. This time he was demanding it. Of course, she could refuse or even break her engagement entirely but—for what? She tried to estimate quickly just what she really felt for this man who was to be her husband. He did not compare favorably with the childhood illusion she had held for her lover. He was certainly not brave. He was even boastful about not being inducted into the service during the war. But she defended him to herself; this was merely a front to hide his legitimate reason of a heart condition from the public. Perhaps he was braver than people gave him credit for. When she had met him shortly after coming to Lexington, she had enjoyed his company and the many places he invited her. There were few young men in the community, stripped by the needs of war, and she considered herself lucky to have such a handsome companion. Basil meant security, something she had never known in her life, since her r' this evening?" he asked sarcasically.

Kit, refusing to recognize it as meant money. Not that Kit was such, answered good-humoredly, | mercenary, but she and her mother had lived in poverty as well as insecurity and she had long since decided that while money does not make happiness, happiness needs money. "Well . . . I guess the end of November-Thanksgiving would be all right." Unconsciously she counted Unconsciously she counted in her mind. Today was September 4th. September, October and . . November. Three months. Strange that the time counted for only one thing. Three months in which to know J. D.'s son. As if the thought provoked her conscience she reached over for Basil's hand. "Let's make it Thanksgiving, shall we, darling?"

It had taken Johnny some time to erase from his mind the actual reality of seeing Kit Willett with his cousin Basil. But once inside the Clarion office he managed to keep busy rewriting copy for the next day's edition. It was as if he could not give himself completely to his old work until he had settled his mind about the Park affair. Finally he pushed away the notes on which he had been working and with his head resting between his hands he planned what he should do next.

At exactly five twenty-three, he pushed back his chair, shoved his hands into his pockets and walked out of the office of the Clarion, letting the door slam behind him.

For the past two hours, sitting at his old desk on the second floor of the building, he had at last thoroughly thought things out, reaching the conclusion that there was only one way to cope with Jennifer Martin. If that failed he would have to think of another way-he and J. D. together. But he had a feeling that if he could stand face to face with his grandmother and reason with her-it would not fail! He had been taken to Martindale over twenty years ago and his grandmother had refused to see him. But things were different now. Perhaps she had even changed her own mind by this time, or at least would give him a chance to show her his side of it.

As he walked along Third Street, hurrying toward Martindale, he decided it would not take long to find In twenty minutes he would be there!

The road to Martindale was unusually short to Johnny, who with each step decided upon a different approach to his grandmother, Jennifer Martin. A grandmother he had never seen.

Was she really as heartless as everyone said, or was she merely an old lady who thought that money could buy anything and also take anything away from those she want-

Walking up the flagstone drive, he noticed the low-slung imported car starting away from the house, but did not recognize who was in it until it reached him.

As Henry the car that stopped beside him, Johnny was instantly reminded of the still vivid picture in his mind of Basil's last words to him at the sta-

"You are quite aware that this is a private drive, are you not?" His small beady eyes were on Johnny with target-like directness.

"Yes, sir, I am." He hesitated only long enough for his quick reply and walked on up the drive, leaving Henry and his chauffeur staring after him. Not looking back, Johnny finally heard the motor start and the car continue down the drive.

When he reached the massive doorway, he had a mad desire to turn and leave before he had been refused entrance. The plan that he had mapped out so carefully down in the office of the Clarion seemed foolish and much too simple for such a difficult problem.

A Call on Jennifer Martin

When his hand reached for the iron knocker, he saw that it was trembling. Was this Sgt. John Davis that had been called a fool for danger? Johnny managed a little smile as he wondered what his lieutenant would think of him now.

A tall, impressive English manservant answered his knock. The words, reluctant at first, finally managed to be heard.

"I'd like to see Mrs. Jennifer Martin."

"I'm sorry, sir. Mrs. Martin does not see strangers." He stepped

"Just a minute, there. This is important, and I intend to see her. After all, I may be a stranger, but am her grandson." This was Sgt. Davis again. There was no longer any doubt in his mind. This was important, not only to him, but to hundreds of kids-kids that he had fought for, and he didn't intend to lose the fight now.

Evidently surprised at the character confronting him, he nodded his head. "Would you care to wait in the hall for the reply?'

Johnny stepped into the long hallway and watched the butler disappear into a room at the right. He watched him until he had closed a door between them. Finally he heard voices, and knowing almost instantly just what reply he would get, he decided boldly to follow the servant's route and at least receive the reply in person from his grand-

Kathleen Norris Says:

The Governess Wife

Bell Syndicate.-WNU Features.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

ON'T marry a man with the idea that it will be easy to change him. It never works; they don't change. They may develop qualities and tastes that surprise you - you may find the man you thought a stay-at-home likes to go out every night, or that the man you thought a night club favorite never wants to leave his own fireside. Such surprises as that are the very commonplaces of morriage.

But not changes. The jealous sweetheart will continue to be jealous, the lazy man who is always changing jobs will go on shifting, the lad who drinks too much and gambles away his money will go right on drinking and gambling.

The other day I had a talk with a bride-to-be. It struck me as extremely ominous, and I've been wondering ever since if the promised husband has any idea of the training in store for him. All the conditions of their marriage seem to be ideal, good social standing, old family friendships, comfortable income and a most attractive apartment ready and waiting. But the bride's attitude is not so promising.

She was buying gloves, with one of her bridesmaids as companion, and chattered quite freely of her

Tom, it seems, has to make business trips to New York now and then and likes to make them by plane, but Sharon has stopped that. 'I'm deathly afraid of planes," she explained, "and I put my foot

'Don't Let Precedents Start.'

It also appeared that she had been quite frank about Tom's mother. Tom wanted to stop off at Santa Barbara and see his mother, on his honeymoon trip to Mexico; Sharon said no. "Once you start that sort of thing it establishes a precedent,' she told me. Duck shooting was mentioned: Tom is a famous shot. "I think that young man's duck hunting days are over," Sharon murmured confidently, eyeing a beautiful glove on her beautiful hand.

"He's going to be the best-trained husband in town," she said happily. "His friends won't know him. I asked to see his checkbook the other day, and the young man had to explain quite a few details to me. Don't you think," she appealed to me, "that the time to train them is in the very beginning?"

I was too stunned to reply. If she had been talking of an airdale puppy it might have been intelligible, but Tom is six feet of husky, vital, assertive human being, with a fine mind, a fine education and a fine war record. She paid for her gloves and went her happy way, and I went mine with a feeling of intense pity for Tom.

There are ways, of course, in which wives can exert influence; the little ways of neatness and consideration and promptness and thrift. But those occasions when suggestions are in order come only now and then, and should be handled naturally, with affection and tact. Men change, and women do too, in a happy marriage, but they change without knowing it, the miracle of growing trust and companionship and improvement is never visible. and certainly never cut-and-dried before ever the marriage takes

So I have great fears for the marriage of Sharon and Tom, and feel reasonably sure that he will grow

MAKING HIM OVER

Women have tried many, many times to reform their bushands, to "make them over," but it has rarely been successful. Men cling stubbornly to their ways, resistant to appeals and pressures. This is especially true in regards to personal babits, likes and dislikes. Sometimes, where a man realizes in his heart that he is at fault, he will, with his wife's aid, struggle to change bis ways. When he is convinced that be is right, however, be will seldom yield, at least not permanently.

Miss Norris in today's article tells about a bride who is starting off wrong and is beading for trouble. She is quite attractive and intelligent, but she is not keen enough to realize that trying to make over a big, successful, well-educated young man is fatal to bappy married life.

She doesn't want him to travel by air, or go bunting, or visit bis mother in California, and that's just a start; she intends to "train" bim in ber ways of thinking and acting. Sooner or later Tom is going to rebel and be is going to tell Sharon bluntly that be intends to have his own way in bersonal matters. Sharon may bristle up and the quarrel that leads to the divorce court will have begun. If she has learned anything of buman nature by that time, however, she will give up trying to change her bushand.

restless under this organized control, and break away from her. No girl should marry a man unless she likes him as he is. Sharon apparently likes Tom only for certain possibilities she sees in him, and if Tom ever suspects that he has married a governess and trainer rather than a wife, he will be in-

Tactful Handling.

Sometimes after years of marriage this sense of smug superiority breaks out in a wife. "Why not have that gray paper in the halls?' the husband suggests. "Because it would be perfectly ridiculous, dear," says the wife. "Why would it be ridiculous? Wasn't our old room at home that way?" old room was simply hideous," the wife returned smoothly, "and everyone knows you have no taste. darling.

One wife I know merely smiles and listens when her husband holds forth at breakfast about something he likes or doesn't like in domestic matters. She smiles, listens with faintly raised eyebrows, and very slightly shakes her head, for the benefit of her daughters.

"Just as soon as he goes," her expression tells them, "we'll fix it all our way.'

Very few men, no matter how abrupt or absent-minded or absorbed, treat their wives to this sort of arrogant rudeness. Instead there appears to be a general impression that Mommy does know best about things. So some of them alienate their own families, give up old friends and comfortable habits, pay uncomplainingly for furniture and wallpaper they don't really like, for long years and years. But there comes a breaking point, and wives might as well be on the watch not to reach it. To try to change a man is usually to lose him entirely. Lamp Sterilizes Milk

An ultra violet ray lamp capable of killing airborne bacteria has been produced by the Westinghouse Electric Corp. for use in dairy barns. The new device, known as sterilamp, can reduce the amount of such bacteria by 90 per cent, Al-len Desault, lamp allocation engineer for the company said. "Milk in healthy cows is uncontaminated, but as soon as it leaves the cow it is on its own," he said. 'Few foods provide such an excellent medium for bacterial growth."

thinking of the prowler he had seen there, but seeing no one now he walked on toward a little hollow at the north of the field. Whe he reached it, he sat down on one of the huge rocks that were so common in that section of the country. The familiar sight of these old surroundings brought a feeling of nostalgia to him. Memories were marching down upon him with full force when he noticed the figure approaching. Pulling his thoughts together immediately he looked more closely at the visitor who seemed about to share his privacy. His first thought was that this was the same prowler he had seen before, but as the figure came closer he noticed it was a woman coming toward him. When she was within a few feet of him he recognized her.

"Kit!" He stepped toward her. She jumped back in surprise, then quickly recognizing him regained her senses.

the tension that had hung between "Well, I'm not in the habit of following strange young men to their hideouts, I'll admit."

The moon touched her hair with almost magic deftness. She looked up at Johnny and he suddenly saw her full beauty. She had seemed lovely to him before in the office but now in this quiet setting and the him. He had evidently been hired for intrusions such as this, as well moon throwing a bright spotlight on her fine features he knew how truly lovely she was.

He stood looking at her without saving a word until the silence grew loud in his ears and he felt that conversation was necessary.

"Did you discover this place by accident or are you old friends with my grove?" he finally asked.
"Oh, so I have a joint ownership here and I thought I owned full title. Well, I must say I couldn't have chosen a more desirable partner." She moved over on the rock and made a place for him to sit beside

"Thanks. But I have the edge on you. You forget I've lived here for knoll. It had grown so dark that twenty-three years and claim this spot for about eighteen of those was distinguishable. And yet he sensed from the figure's shady acyears. Why, this place has been everything from a Siberian fortress to a desert oasis to me. Match that." He sat down beside her, their shoulders almost touching one another.

A Kiss That Is Prelude to Love

"Guess you have priority at that. The most and only thing it's been for me is a sort of communion spot. It's about the only place I have found in town where I can think ute at the Clarion getting back things out when they get too mud-into harness again, but the evenings dled."

"That's good enough. We'll share equal rights." He turned to her and laughed and suddenly his hand found hers. She looked over at him and wondered how this simple conversation and the warm protection of his hand could mean so much to her. It was a conversation that Basil would have termed silly and childish. But somehow sitting here beside Johnny Davis made her feel that everything was right in the world. That she was very young again and could have been sitting on her back porch with the high school football captain. It made her feel that there were more important things in the world than money and security. At this last thought she stopped and quickly withdrew her hand from Johnny's. park. The half-finished buildings and playground looked almost eerie in the half light. He glanced sev-There was nothing more important proven that theory and it was one not to be forgotten.

"What's wrong, Kit? Are you afraid?" He looked at her questioningly. "Afraid? Afraid of what?" she answered defiantly.

"Perhaps of-yourself?"
"No, Johnny. I'm not afraid of myself or what I might be thinking. You see, I'm engaged to Basil . . and it's important to me. Very important, Johnny!" She stood beside him. "You really think you're in love wih him, Kit?" He looked deep into her eyes, wanting to find the real answer. "Yes," she answered him as directly as he had asked her. "I'm quite sure I'm in love with Basil. You don't really know him, Johnny. He's kind and generous and . well, I love him." She held her head a little higher and took a few steps from him. "All right, Kit. You're a good kid and I just don't want to see you get any wooden nickels. Dad thinks the world of you and, well, so do I, He put his hand on her shoulder and turned her around to face him again.

"So you both feel sort of respon sible for me-is that it?" She looked at him smiling.

He looked at her for a minute before answering, searching her face for his reply; finally he said, "Yes, guess that's about it.

"Well, J. D. is an old dear and so are you for worrying about me, but you can stop because Basil will take awfully good care of me, he promises.

They started to walk together in the direction of the town then. The moon was still riding fast through a bank of clouds and Johnny looking back saw the mansion of Martindale above them silhouetted against the bright moonlight sky.

He turned her, touching her shoulder so that she might see it too, and as she looked at it she leaned against him for a second. But the second was too long for both of them felt the current that passed between them.

She turned and looked up at him and knew instantly that the moment was charmed. She knew too that Johnny was going to kiss her and knowing she did not stop him. It was useless to stop something that was stronger than both of them.

It was Johnny that finally let her go, determination and will-power in his quick action and as he did she ran from him across the moonlit fields. He watched her until she disappeared into the dark streets of the town.

Johnny was at the office early next morning. Lexington was celebrating its centennial this year and there was much to do. He was assuming full responsibility in J. De's

He arrived at the Clarion before Kit came in and therefore did not see her at her desk. All morning the happenings of the night before recalled themselves to his mind. Not having seen Kit he did not know just what her reaction would be to last evening. He knew that he was in love with Kit and deeply so. But as yet it would be foolish to tell J. D. or even Kit.

He buried himself in work until he could satisfy himself at the noon hour when he left the office just what Kit's reception would be to him. He was deep inside the many different histories of the town writing copy when J. D. burst into the office.

Johnny Reveals His Visit to Martindale

"Good boy, Johnny! See you're filling the old man's shoes all right." He threw his hat to the wall hook and missed as usual. "Remind me to have that hook changed. Too darned high."

"I'm glad you're back, Dad. Frankly, I don't know how twentysix people could all have been the first family in Lexington." He threw down the papers and laughed.

"You keep right on. Take the first one you come to. The other twentyfive might just as well throw you out of town as me." He pulled his chair up to the desk facing John-

The sudden realization that he must tell his father about his visit to Martindale came to Johnny's mind and he hesitated for a moment, not knowing how best to tell him.

"Dad-" He looked across at

"Yes, son?" J. D. always knew when there was something important coming from Johnny as he always addressed him as "Dad" rather than the familiar "J. D."

"While you were gone I got the brilliant idea of going out to Mar-tindale." He rubbed his chin with his hand. "And so-" It was hard going, knowing how interested J. D. was in what he was saying. He con-tinued as best he could. "I went. I finally got in, Dad, and I even saw -her, but only for a second until the servant closed the door between He still rubbed his chin with his hand nervously.

"But you did get in, son?" He looked at Johnny and a questioning light came over his face. "You were in the front living room?"

Scrambled Figures

Plain-logic and clear-thinking are two delegates who should always register at all management and labor conventions. They should be ever present in all councils of patriotic groups. Neither our business nor our labor leaders must be re-sponsible for a lock-out of truth and of the dignity belonging to facts and figures. Inasmuch as plain Americans can reason, just so will they see any inadequacies of thought demonstrated by any leaders.

Most of American labor was pleased, I believe, when the CIO adopted a resolution recently condemning Communist influence in its ranks. I suspect the rank and file back home gave this action a round of genuine applause. And aside from the intra-union politics which prompted the resolution, regardless of the doubtful political tinge of the the men who drafted it, my belief ons are taking a step in the right direction. It remains to be seen what shall follow in future councils.

In The Record

At any rate, these unions have put down on the record their resentment and rejection of efforts of the Communists and "other political parties" to interfere with their affairs. Communists, they seem to imply, are just another political party, but let us not forget what ideology is followed by the Communist line, whether in a party by that name or in other parties. There's nothing American about their ideology nor their long-range aims.

It would seem the time has come for our two major political parties to do more than merely disown the Communists who have infiltrated their own ranks and the ranks of labor. Moreover, it might be a good time for the two major parties and for our leaders of labor to say that political action groups have no business interfering with the affairs of political parties.

Greater Threat

The extent to which Communist ideology has penetrated gradually the councils of labor is no doubt much greater than labor itself is aware. A prominent labor personality recently set down the profits of industry for 1946 as $15,000,000,000, after taxes, and added that this represents a greater threat to the nation than does Communism.

Whatever industry's earnings will be for 1946, the figures will not be high enough. The poor showing in the first nine months of the year, as seen in the stalled output of the automobile industry and in the failure of many industries to make any profit at all, will not make large sums available for higher wages. The Profit Motive

Poor industrial earnings will not permit management to set aside funds for expansion and for badly needed working capital. Neither will lagging production bring a prosperity level that will help pay our tremendous war debt. No production brings no profits and no wages.

Americans dislike to see any groups discredit the profit motive We like each man's prerogative to make a profit, whether he belongs on the side of management and ownership, or whether he is a wage earner. It is elementary economics that wage earners do not experience increased wages under conditions where there is no production. Surely the rank and file of Americans know this. We cannot believe that any loyal Americans would like for industry to be constantly in the red. But we know that the Communists would.

Gala Texas Fete Revives Colorful Days on Frontier

BROWNSVILLE, TEX .- Fired by the passion of hot Spanish blood and tempered by subdued Anglo-Saxon influence, the Charro Days Fiesta, Carnival of Nations, major winter celebration of Texas, crowds three centuries of life along America's first and last frontier into four days and nights of frolicsome gaiety.

Along the border of the United States and Mexico, where the blood of Americans and Latins once clashed but now blends, 300,000 persons from both sides of the Rio Grande will cavort on February 13, 14, 15 and 16, in an hilarious pageant of pre-Lenten fantasy unparalleled in America.

Charro Days hearkens back to the colorful days when titled Spanish landowners and virile soldiers brought the sword and the cross of Old World civilization to a wild American frontier.

To make the celebration as authentic as possible, residents of the semi-tropical Rio Grande valley of Texas and their neighbors from northern Mexico dress in typical costumes of the early day Spanish colonial and his lady.

The men become charros, symbolic of that Spanish cavalier, horseman and gentleman for whom the fiesta is named. A charro was a young man of vitality, usually of noble descent, who rode the plains of Mexico in quest of adventure and trousers, embroidered with bright braid, a jacket of dark hue with silver buttons, a gay sombrero and silver spurs. His beard was trimmed neatly, pointedly.

His feminine counterpart was the lovely lady he addressed as humanity-massed streets. One of 'China," a name derived from the holiday costume she wore-the china poblana. It consisted of a full length, light spreading skirt spangled with uncounted bright sequins and a blouse of rainbow hues. She wore white gardenia or scarlet hibiscus blossoms in her hair in stallion to serenade her at the Spanish hacienda.

that pervades the four days and nights of the Charro Days Fiesta in Brownsville.

At night there is dancing under the royal palms, lovers speak soft words in the shadows of citrus groves along ancient trails, while nationally famous Latin orchestras beat out tropical rhythm, Strolling bands of troubadours wander through the century-old streets, singing love songs for a smile or a pretty

'CHIAPANECA' COSTUME . . . Shadows of the past cling to Miss Juanita Fernandez of Brownsville, Texas, descendant of early Spanish conquistadores. She wears a typical Charro Days costume, the 'chiapaneca," the state costume of Chiapa, Mexico.

During the daylight hours, there are colorful, romantic parades, extending for more than miles along the most impressive spectacles is the annual children's parade, in which upwards of 10,000 school hildren, aged 4 to 12, from both the United States and Mexico march to the rhythm of mariachi bands, singing the folk songs of Old Mexico.

Climax of the entire fiesta, though, anticipation of the love tryst with is the annual grand parade of Charthe charro, who rode up on his black ro Days. This year the grand parade will, more than ever before, cement the warm bonds of friendship between the peoples of Latin America and the United States.

Then there are experts on safety like Mrs. James C. Carmack of Providence, R. I. She went to make a speech on the subject; hobbled into the auditorium on crutcheshad a little accident en route.

Still on the subject of speeches, there's the San Francisco authority on happy home life. He asked a court to postpone hie wife's divorce case so he could keep a date to lecture. His subject: "How To Be Happy Though Married." An expert on wills was the late

Dr. Barnett Mindlin, Chicago dentist, did an expert job of repairing a set of false teeth - in fact, it was worth $50, the dentist claimed. But the patient, 70-year-old John Langhout, objected and insisted he wouldn't pay. Dr. Mindlin reached into Langhout's mouth for the teeth. They were good teeth, too, expertly repaired, for the mouth clamped shut on Mindlin's fingers. In court, Dr. Mindlin exhibited a swollen finger; Langhout was held on a disorderly conduct charge.

STUDENTS AT NEW COLLEGE WILL READ '100 BEST BOOKS'

PITTSFIELD, MASS. - Coninuing the daring educational innovation based on "the 100 best books of ancient and modern thought," a new non-denominational college for 300 students will be opened here next September by Liberal Arts,

Dr. Stringfellow Barr, who largely is credited with this new approach to liberal education, will head the new institution, which will be established on a 700-acre estate fronting for nearly a mile on Stockbridge

It was Dr. Barr who introduced the organized reading of 100 volumes of the best from Homer to the present day at St. John's college in Annapolis, Md., in 1937. He has resigned as president of that institution to found the offshoot here.

Endowed with $4,500,000 by Paul W. Mellon, son of the late Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, the new liberal arts college will be situated on the old Dan R. Hanna estate, about a mile and a half from Tanglewood, the home of Serge Koussevitzky's Berkshire festival. The property already includes about 30 buildings, including an inn and dormitories, where the late John New York E. Parsons, yer, maintained a home for fresh air children.

A college for men, the new school will have a maximum enrollment of 300, with a faculty of about 30. The entire college course will be devoted to the study of prescribed books, with no conventional college departments.

Helpful Thieves Dig Auto Out of Snow. Return After Use

BAYFIELD, WIS. - Thieves proved helpful to Douglas Knight when his car became stalled, but Knight also proved helpful to the thieves by unwittingly lending his car for their depredations.

Missing a turn on the way home one night recently, Knight dropped the front wheels of his sedan into a snow-filled ditch. He continued on foot, intending to get towed out the next morning.

The energetic thieves, however, came along later, found the key still in the car, and dug, shoveled and pushed until they got it out.

The next morning Knight found everything intact except that his unknown helpers had used up all the gasoline in the tank and, apparently driving at high speed, had boiled out all the anti-freeze. They had returned the car to the same place in the same ditch.

DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION

'There's nothing like altitude to get away from cares and tired That's the prescription of Dr. B. I. Pippin, flying doctor of Richland Center, Wis.

"Besides," he adds, "it's dangerous to drive a car." Dr. Pippin estimates that traveling by air has saved him almost six months' time in the last 24 years. The surgeon, who has been flying since 1922 and making professional air trips since 1926, regularly flies from Richland Center to Reedsburg Municipal hospital. He also uses his plane for short routine hops and has flown to almost every major city to attend medical conventions.

In Marengo, Iowa, high school youngsters get off to a flying start. In fact, three of them already are licensed to fly planes. Youngest of the trio is Peggy Olson, 16, who earned money for her flying lessons by working in a drugstore and by detasseling corn. Their instructor is Dale Griffith, veteran of the Pacific war.

Despite the large quantities of surplus craft available and adequate production of new models, a sizable number of prewar type used airplanes still are in demand, it is revealed in price ratings released in the spring 1947 edition of Air Market Values.

Bringing the highest comparative prices are five-place Beech, Howard, Spartan, Stinson and Wacos, which have no 1946 counterparts. Also high in current market favor are executive corporation transports, such as Lockheed 10s and 12s, Beech 18s and Grumman amphibians. Hardest hit in the current market are small two-place light planes.

HORSES HOP ATLANTIC . . "Peaclaw," one of six race horses flown from London aboard a Skymaster to race in California, is led from the plane by a trainer.

PEAK FREIGHT YEAR

Member lines of Independent Airfreight Association, Inc., will carry 220 million ton miles of freight in 1947, more than 12 times the amount transported in 1946, the first year of operation, company officials predict. The five IAA lines include the Flying Tiger line, which has an army transport command contract calling for two flights daily to both Tokyo and Hickam field, Hawaii; Slick Airways, Inc., U. S. Airlines, Inc., Willis Air Service, Inc., and Flamingo Air Service, Inc.

Land of Vikings

Norway is one of the delightful little countries of Europe. About the size of two of our average states, her population is only three million -half that of New York City. A parliament is elected by direct vote of the people every four years, and it constitutes the real authority of the nation. They have a King, who reigns but does not rule. Next to the King, the speaker of the parliament is the highest official in the country. The fairhaired Norwegians are a strong, sturdy people, whose chief quality is individualism.

Communism invaded Norway at the end of World War I. A "labor" party was created by the Communists, but eventually most of its members went over to the "Socialist Democrats," now the leading party controlling more than half the 150 seats in parliament. The extent to which Marxian philosophies have been made into harmful practice is evident when one examines the present state of Norwegian industry. It is enparent that the early Communist influence did not just disappear in an assimilation into the leading labor party, but remains like a hungry dog, strayed from Russia, and is now eyeing the prosperous merchant fleet of Norway.

Equalization The greatest private industry Norway has ever developed is her merchant marine that sails the seven seas, all out of proportion to the size of the country. This shipping industry has been the chief source of revenue for balancing the national budget and for obtaining essential foreign credit. It remains the backbone of Norwegian finance. Present policies of the Socialist government, in an attempt to equalize everything for everybody, are seriously threatening this important industry. This is the pattern: It took 4,600,000 government dollars to subsidize the distribution of milk last year, therefore to meet the cost of this subsidy a 4,600,000 dollar tax was placed on the shipping industry because it had experienced a good year and appeared able to pay.

WOMEN'S WORLD

Monopolism Norway has little governmentmanaged industry, as such. The only things wholly owned and operated by the government are the post office telephone and telegraph, electric power, and railroads. There seems to be no agitation for extension of government ownership and management. In fact, some leaders feel the trend is in the other direction and that the government has shown no ability to provide efficient serv-

However, cooperatives are numerous in Norway. Entirely different from government management, they nevertheless control the buying and selling of almost everything and are monopolistic in nature. The effective organizations of the co-ops, while individually owned, have been used in some instances for extension of government control. Subsidies have been offered to framers' cooperatives in an effort to please everybody: the producers with higher prices and the purchasers with

Wait 'Til You're Old

The completeness of the cooperative monopoly may be seen in the association of drug store operators, to which all operators belong. To open a new drug store a man would first have to become member of the association and get its approval, after which he would appeal to the government for a license. The government could never grant a license unless the applicant were admitted to the association. Drug store operators admit no new members except at their own pleasure, and then seldom except to replace a member who has died. was told that an aspirant to the drug industry can seldom be admitted to the association and obtain permis-

Plenty of Frontiers
A successful business man in Oslo, who was a prominent leader of the resistance during the war, is in charge of an old firm with an excellent reputation. Said he: "The regulations have come to interfere with everything. I am no longer really doing business. I just sit here and do what they tell me I can do. In my opinion, the controls are a failure. They make production more expensive and prices higher."

Under the right kind of economic climate, the Norwegian people could raise their standard of living. And this right climate Communism can never provide. Norway does not lack for frontiers. Their farms produce as many bushels of grain per acre as our farms. The fishing waters of Norway are not surpassed. Possibilities for electric power are the best in the world. Manufacturing and lumbering offer only the or-dinary difficulties. The country is not over populated. Yet their standard of living is not more than half as high as that in America.

There Is a Way Out When forward looking Norwegians try to modernize an industry, they are met squarely with the deadening hand of monopoly, either private or public. If one fishing company manages to find a way to sell its products at a good price, while another company exports its fish to Europe for a lower price, the former company pays a tax which goes to the second company for the sake of equalization.

This policy invariably discourages excellence and tends to mediocrity. A premium is thus placed on inefficiency and on failure to make money. But a realistic incentive system, based upon honest competition throughout, could soon make little Norway one of the most prosperous small nations in the world.

Soaring Winter Accident Toll Sparks Plea for Safe Driving

CHICAGO.—When pelting snow and treacherous ice clog the highways, "don't get upset." That is the plea of National Safety council in its campaign to reduce the hazards of winter

On an average, two-thirds of the cold weather mishaps last winter occurred on snowy or icy roads, it is revealed in a special study of winter traffic accidents recently completed by four typical snow-belt states in co-operation with the safety States making the special

Mishaps Increase.

Inadequate traction and poor visi-bility are the special hazards which send winter accident rates soaring, according to Prof. Ralph A. Moyer of Iowa State college, chairman of the council's committee on winter driving hazards.

Moyer recommends that vehicles which must be operated under se- ter driving tests on frozen Michigan vere snow and ice conditions be equipped with tire chains and devices to aid visibility, such as windshield wipers, defrosters or frost shields and good lighting equipment.

"Modern methods of distribution, vital to our economy, require that commercial vehicles and many passenger cars operate in all kinds of weather," he said, "and the amount of such traffic is increasing. The greater the number of vehicles on the road the more need there is for improved winter road maintenance, safety equipment for the vehicles, and extra care on the part of drivrules, which are based on actual win-

"cyclecade"-ostensibly a wheeled outing, actually a sugar-coated lesson in safety. Parades, races and stunts, like the free-for-all pictured above, were held in the city stadium, but the events were interspersed with graphic demonstrations of the dangers in riding bikes. Wilmington police and safety leaders planned the cyclecade as part of a long-range program to slash increasing bike-auto accidents.

Unique Club In 'Big House' Helps Needy

ATLANTA, GA .- Ranking as one of the nation's most unique welfare organizations is the Atlanta Welfare club, operated by prisoners at the federal penitentiary here.

The club collects nearly $150 a month from inmates of the prison, distributing it to needy cases on the "outside." Nearly 1,000 individuals have been helped since the club was formed. The amount of aid varies, one case requiring as little as $2.50; another, $50 outright and additional help over several months.

An inmate's desire to help a destitute mother whose son had been killed overseas led to formation of the unique club. The mother was devoid of money until the insurance policy was settled. When the prisoner asked Warden Joseph W. Sanford for permission to send $10 to the mother, the story soon spread through the big institution and the prisoners determined to form the club as a means of aiding other worthy cases.

Eugene Goodwyn, chief parole officer, was selected by the prisoners to handle the accounting and other business matters. Miss Martha Dennison, home service supervisor of the Atlanta Red Cross chapter, was delegated to find the needy cases.

From the small pay they receive in prison industries, the inmates have collected more than $5,000 in a little more than three years.

Thief Sends $100 Easing Conscience Before Marriage

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.-Because he wanted to get married, a restless former soldier sent $100 to three Clarksburg residents to clear his conscience of a $40 theft committed here last September. The burglary of a local restaurant had remained unsolved until the letters were received from the soldier, who insisted on remaining anonymous.

In nearly identical penciled notes the soldier sent $60 to Frank H. Johnson, restaurant manager (the extra $20 was "interest"), $20 to W. C. Robertson, cashier of the restaurant, who was struck on the head during the robbery, "to pay your bill," and another $20 to Robert F. Hickman, city editor of the Clarksburg Exponent, "to pay for borrowing your car."

Explaining his actions, the writer said: "A returned soldier became restless, awful restless. He needed excitement, to hear bullets and shells whistle. . . . He realized his mistake and he settled down. But his conscience bothered him.

"Mister, I'm trying to correct that before I marry. I can't get married and have that hanging over my

FEEDING THE FIVE THOUSAND

LESSON TEXT-John 6:25-35, 56-58. MEMORY SELECTION-I am that bread

Bread! The cry of the hungry peoples of the world for bread has reminded us anew that it is the simple and elemental things of life which are of most importance. Bread, water, light-such things man cannot do without. How significant then that our Lord declared himself to be the bread of life (John 6:35), the satisfying water (John 4:14), and the light of the world (John 8:12).

Our lesson does not deal with the feeding of the five thousand, but the story of that miracle of our Lord is the background for the discourse on the bread of life which is assigned for our study. It is one of the most delightfully simple, yet unfathomably profound, portions of Scripture.

The story of how our Lord multiplied the loaves and fishes of a small boy's lunch and fed the multitude presents him as the Creator and Sustainer of all things. The people having been fed, wanted to take Jesus and make him their King (John 6:15), so he went over the Sea of Galilee to Capernaum. But he could not get away from them, for they followed him thither. Meeting them he gave them the instruction they so much needed as he effectively contrasted the temporal and earthly with the eternal and heavenly.

I. The Bread of Earth and the Bread of Heaven (vv. 25-27).

They sought Jesus not that they might receive spiritual blessings, but that their stomachs might be filled (v. 26). It was not a high motive, but an understandable one. Hunger, or the fear of hunger, threatens so many of the people of this earth that one does not find it in his heart to condemn them too yet it was a low motive and one which caused them to entirely miss the greatest and most blessed provision of God for their every need. The bread of this earth, bearing the imprint of a human maker, would soon leave them hungry again, and eventually they would die. The bread of heaven, bearing the seal of the Father (v. 27), would soon satisfy them for all eternity.

Note the folly of those who labor for the reward which this world can give, but who neglect their eternal welfare (v. 27). How foolish, too, is the Christian who spends his whole life and his talents in the pursuit of money and invests little or nothing of time or ability in the service of God!

II. The Work of Men and the Work of God (vv. 28-33).

Entangled as they were in earthly things and desires, they seemed for a moment to reach out toward the things of God. Jesus had been talking about everlasting life and the bread from heaven; they want-ed to know what they could do to merit and receive it.

It is quite typical of man even to this day that he thinks there must be some way that he can come through to eternal blessedness by way of his own works. We shall see how effectively Jesus dealt with that folly!

The only work that man can do to meet God's first demands and inherit eternal life is to believe in Christ (v. 29). Men want to add up works of penance, works of charity, deeds of righteousness, character development, the observance of religious traditions and ceremonies, the offering of prayers, and so on without end. Jesus sweeps aside all this with one brief word, saying in effect, "It is not a question of do; it is a matter of believe."

Works is not the answer to any spiritual need, but faith in Christ. We must trust God and believe in the One whom he has sent; then we are ready to go out and do his will!

They (yes, and we too) must now face the alternative III. The Way of Death and the Way of Life (vv. 34, 35, 56-58).

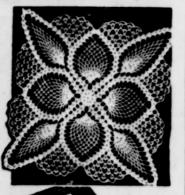

One could wish that the request made in verse 34 could be taken at face value, but the fact that they later turned away and left the Lord indicates that this was again a desire for physical bread. There was probably a vague desire for eternal life, too, but not enough to make them follow through with appropriate action. How much they were like folk today who want the benefits of Christianity, but who will not take up the cross.

There is here a bold contrast between the things of this earth, which, as we use them, perish (and, alas, we perish with them), and the things of God which are of eternal value and power.

Which shall it be, reader, for you? Are you willing to go on day after day on the way of death, or will you today take Christ, who is the way of life?
