MINES, STOCKS AND INVESTMENTS.

Investor Article--No. 5.

Following is the fifth in a series of articles first published in The Mining Investor and dealing with the possible causes of the decline in the stock market.

It has been claimed in these articles, and it is thought with a great degree of justice, that the principal cause of the decline away from Colorado by rotten mine management, and it has been suggested that to avoid any further injury being done to the mining industry of the state, by this means that it had better be speedily remedied.

To seek a remedy in these matters one must first fully appreciate the losses that have been sustained and the causes for that loss, and in the last four articles have been set forth, as it is thought that the one and the other have been clearly shown.

What is wanted is a general appreciation of the harm that has been done to the mining interests of the state, and then a general movement towards remedy.

It is thought that the general movement towards remedy, if done by co-operation of the ignorant masses cannot be the pathway towards improvement of the wise-heads can.

Colorado Springs, June 28.—Prices were firm at the Colorado Springs Mining Stock Association this morning but the trading was light leaving the market in a very unsettled condition and speculation considerably as to the future.

Another good trader was Fanny Rawlings, which was credited with a total of 15,000 shares.

Among the unlisted stocks Gold Coin and Acacia were the most prominent traders. The first named had a credit of 600 shares at 48c and 49c and Acacia sold to the extent of 5,000 shares at 3c.

The distribution of 1 cent per share has been ordered by the directors of the company payable on the first day of July.

Books close on the 28th of the present month, and reopen July 2. The distribution amounts to $6,000, the company having a capitalization of 600,000 shares.

The Moon-Anchovy company on Gold Hill has been making a wonderfully fine showing of late, and those who have been watching its progress are hardly surprised at the declaration of a dividend.

The property is, as far as can be learned by The Gazette, in a better condition than ever before and the outlook for the future most encouraging.

Dividends were suspended about eleven months ago, when the management was bothered by a strong flow of water.

IRONMASTER'S GOLD

Good Strike Reported from the Gold Hill Property.

NEWS NOTES OF THE LEASES

A Contract Let for Another Eighty Feet of Work on the Cripple Creek and Gold Hill Tunnel—Gold Sovereign Claims Leased—Climax No. 1 Joins the Shipper's List.

Special to The Gazette. Cripple Creek, June 26.—A good strike is reported on the Ironmaster, on the southeast point of Gold Hill, operated by Nelson and others. A 15-inch vein is said to have been opened on the surface that assays $70. This is a few rods up the hill from the old main shaft. Timbers are now on the ground for the new shaft and work will be carried on vigorously from this time forth.

Lucky Lessees. At a depth of 60 feet, lessees on the Gateley block on the Jack Pot have stopped sinking and are now driving a cross-cut to the west through the big phenolite dyke. It is expected to strike another chute when the contact is reached, on the same side of the dyke as the Vandenberg shaft.

The Birch lease on the Mary McKinnie sent out yesterday a car load of ore, estimated at $30 per ton. This was taken from the two old shafts. The new working shaft has not yet reached the ore chute. Drifting for it is in progress from the 120-foot level, and the lessee expects to break into it in a few days.

A Contract Let. A contract was let Friday for another 800 feet of work on the Cripple Creek and Gold Hill tunnel No. 1. The work was awarded to Mr. Davis, who has already done some 1,200 feet of work on this tunnel. This contract will bring the breast of the tunnel to a point 3,000 feet from the mouth.

Gold Sovereign Lease. A lease has been taken on the Gold Sovereign and Jim Blaine claims, belonging to the Gold Sovereign company, by John R. Truman and Carl Kruse. They have taken possession, and with G. B. Johnson as manager, will push the work. A fine hole has been opened for the shaft, and a fine hole has been opened for the shaft, and a fine hole has been opened for the shaft.

Added to the List. The Climax No. 1, on Squaw mountain, bids fair to be the next on the list of prominent shippers. Mr. L. C. Walker, who has a lease from the Little Blue company, made a shipment last week to the Taylor and Brunton sampler. The returns show values of $72.10 per ton, and from a level of only about 30 feet. Today he broke into a four-foot vein of high grade ore that assays from $63 to $1,300 per ton. He is now pushing the north drift vigorously and expects to have a 10-ton shipment ready next Tuesday. Just to the north of the Walters shaft, close to the Ocean Wave claim, the Barthelemy lessees are saving ore that will probably run $70. It is on the same vein as the Climax. Further down the hill are three other workings by other lessees.

High Grade Prominent. Some of the shipments made from the Cripple Creek Mine, during the past week. High grade ore is still the predominant feature of the shipments from camp. There is of course a very large amount of low grade stuff going out and the tonnage of the latter is far heavier than the former but contrasting the present condition of affairs with what was being done a few months ago the low grade is hardly making the big showing that was expected. Following are a few of the shipments that were made during the past week.

Gold Coin. About 300 tons of ore, the capacity of the hoisting and bin facilities as at present considered, was sent out from the Gold Coin last week. While the weight is about the same as for several weeks past the value of the ore is understood to be much greater. Tests on the screening since Monday last show a value of from eight to twelve ounces in gold to the ton, and none lower than the lowest figure. The general grade is undoubtedly increasing in the lower levels and the body of ore is said to be enormous.

Work. Shipments from the Morning Glory, by the Work company amounted to about 20 tons. This is the same as usual and the grade of the ore is also supposed to be about the same.

Anchoria-Leland. During the past week 200 tons of ore were sent out which is about the usual average. It was all smelting grade and is thought to be a little higher in value than the previous week's output.

Union. The Union company sent out four cars of ore last week from the Orpha May, and Lessee Moore and Wilson, one car from the Pike's Peak. The company's ore consisted of three cars of smelting and one car of mill ore. The lessee shipment was in two lots, one consisting of high grade and the balance of loose smelting ore.

Lillie. No attempt is being made at the present time by the Lillie company to make any heavy shipments of ore as the property being straightened up generally under the management of Mr. C. E. Palmer. Ore houses have been erected and other improvements have been made. Quite recently some 21 ounce ore was sent out besides some lower grade stuff.

Moon-Anchor. During the past week 62 tons of medium grade smelting ore was sent out from the Moon-Anchor. It is expected that 60 tons of high grade stuff will be forwarded to the smelter in a few days.

Franklin-Roby. Returns were received during the past week for a shipment from the Lillie claim up Poverty gulch, and belonging to the Franklin-Roby company. It was a 20-ton lot and check for it showed it to have a value of $7,737.

Dante. Six tons of ore were sent out from the Dante last week. It is thought to be smelting grade but the probable value is not estimated.

Monument. No official report has been received by the owners of the Monument block, regarding shipments from the property. It is thought however, that they were about the same as for the few weeks previous, which is about a car of $30 ore every other day.

CHICAGO GRAIN. Chicago, June 26.—Nothing else was reported the vision of wheat traders at the opening but the ever growing specter of a July corner. The usual news of the day had little to do with the day's trading. Traders watched the brokers who were supposed to do the bidding for the men who were credited with the manipulation of July and as they bought or sold so did the crowd. July wheat started at a surprising pace; its first jump was at a rise of from 5/8 to 3/4 per bushel, 72 1/2 to 73, being quoted at the outset. This was followed up with a few kangaroo bounds that took the price to 73 1/2. That appeared to be the height of its ambition for a while, and during the remainder of the first hour it indulged in a series of erratic spurs like a handful of lighted freerackers. From 73 1/2 down to 72 1/2, up again to 73 1/2 and back to 73 were some of the more notable of its gyrations in the first hour. September wheat at nearly 6 cents below July, was strangely neglected for a time but that was a condition in which it was not permitted to remain. It opened at 64 1/2, compared with its closing price the day before. After touching 64 1/2, it hung between that and 64 1/4, with very little doing in it for an hour. Then it suddenly leaped into activity. Poor reports from Russia and the Danubian provinces, started buyers and so lively did the demand become that July was for a time neglected and September wheat at a March of September buying was supposed to come from the same source as the July buying. The receipts at Chicago were 22 cars, Minneapolis and Duluth, reported receipts of 230 cars, against 280 the corresponding day of the year before. The week's exports of wheat and flour from both coasts were 2,150,000 bushels against 2,370,000 bushels the week before and 2,337,000 bushels a year ago. Argentine did not ship any wheat to Europe this week. A year ago Argentine shipments for the similar week of receipts of 230 cars, against 280 the corresponding day of the year before. The week's exports of wheat and flour from both coasts were 2,150,000 bushels against 2,370,000 bushels the week before and 2,337,000 bushels a year ago.

Corn was slow within an extremely narrow range with prices a shade easier most of the time on the Corn Belt's report of the crop condition through the northwest. Oats were dull within a 1/4-cent range. The feeling early in the morning was one of a line of about 500,000 bushels by a prominent trader, but the market developed a more favorable feeling in sympathy with the advance in wheat.

A limited trade was done in provisions. The feeling during the early morning was one of a line of about 500,000 bushels by a prominent trader, but the market developed a more favorable feeling in sympathy with the advance in wheat.

Matchmaking Mothers. Lady Desart has come out in The National Review with a defense of the British matron, and incidentally the other matrons who desire first of all a "good match" for their daughter. A mother, she holds, is bound to fight for her daughter's social advancement in marriage, and not to leave the girl to drift into a love affair in which all the advantages are probably offered on the young woman's side. "If a man," she asks, "is not to consider a girl's value in face, figure, skin, eyes, hair and general complexion, and is not to be introduced to her at social gatherings, and not to consider her dowry (or want of dowry), how, in heaven's name, is he to consider her at all? Of companionable and temperamental, Lady Desart says little, and she probably assumes that the absence of these happy conditions will be no less remedied by money permits husband and wife to go their several ways than when poverty keeps the couple close together. In any case, she finds the London marriage market an excellent institution. "We know," she says, "that London gathers to itself all that is best and most desirable of the manhood of our country, and that our girls will have a larger choice (and the better chance of choosing well) than a wider experience gives in London than elsewhere, so we bring them there. We bring them to the marriage market, but they come to enjoy themselves."

The Shaw Monument's Bad Latin. Boston has a new sorrow now. Relieved of the embarrassing Bechamite, and in the midst of her pride in the Shaw monument, she is suddenly disordered by the rumor that the inscription on the new monument consists of a line of bad Latin. "Omnia remanent servare rempublicam" is the line that makes the Boston scholars blush. Servare is the troublesome word. They tell us that the use of the infinitive is an error, and it is also suggested that the wrong verb has been used, and that if the inscription is to apply to Colonel Shaw, servare, not serva, should be the verb. Serva means to save; servio to serve. Shaw served his country, but it cannot be said that he saved it. This Latin criticism may be somewhat strained, but there seems to be no doubt that the inscription in its present form causes some conscientious Latinists real distress. It was borrowed, it seems, from the seal of the Society of Cincinnati, but borrowed, apparently, in a corrupted form.—Harpers' Weekly.

New York Stock Market. New York, June 26.—Today's stock market showed a subsidence of the apprehension caused yesterday by the volume of the gold shipments for the day and the week, and turned again to the bull side with greater animation and confidence than ever. The market sold off to some extent in the first hour in continuation of yesterday's gold fears and on reported opinions that the coming week would witness the shipment of a necessary reaction in the market were at work on this basis and sought strenuously to bring about the reaction, which they confidently maintained is long overdue in the market and must come ultimately. The St. Paul statement for May showing an increase in gross earnings of $101,719, and in net of $18,496, was the first to stem the downward course of prices. The low point of the morning was a slight fraction below last night's close in many stocks. The rally was characterized by great animation and by heavy dealings, the prominent stocks changing hands in large blocks.

The week has witnessed a further notable raising of the level of prices, the advance being especially notable in the graners and the oil market. Much of the advanced price through the list as in some previous weeks. The market as a whole has firmly resisted all attempts to work a reaction, the severest of these being the advanced price of gold. The week's gold shipments had run up to a figure exceeding any week since the first of the present movement. The present high price of gold is generally recognized by security holders that future conditions will improve to warrant higher prices. Many professional operators are confident that the level of the market has advanced too far to be warranted by the present conditions. They are at work constantly to effect a reaction, but their utmost efforts have heretofore been unsuccessful except in a trivial degree, and all their offerings have been promptly and steadily absorbed.

The bond market shared in the general buoyancy which permeated the stock market during the week and there was an absence of that hesitancy to values which developed at intervals in the stock market. Trading was in large volume and exceedingly active. Purchases by operators was quite a sustaining factor and a brisk domestic demand for the low grade mortgages was regarded with considerable favor by the leading interests. The aggregate sales were $9,902,000.

Government bonds dull, strong throughout and sustained general fractional improvements. The sales were $93,000. Atchafalpa 4s, 103 U. P. D. and G. 1 1/2 Adams Ex. 150 Northwest, 119 1/2 Amer. Chicago Cattle Market. Chicago, June 26.—Cattle pens were practically bare today, as is usual on Saturday, and the market was largely a nominal one. The few cattle offered for sale were taken at yesterday's prices. Sales were at an extreme range of $3.10 to $3.25 for the poorest to the best hogs, and at $2.25 to $2.50 for pigs, the bulk of the hogs selling for $3.37 1/2 to $3.45. Sheep—Spring lambs sold at $3.50 to $5.00, largely $4.50 to $5.00. Yearling lambs sold at $3.50 to $4.75, and inferior lambs went around $3.00. Sheep sold at $3.50 to $4.50. Heavy natives sold very dull at $3.25 to $3.50. Receipts—Cattle 100; hogs 30,000; sheep 2,000.

Outing Days Have Come

From Our Own Correspondent.
Newport, R. I., June 25.—People look to Newport for summer indications as they look to the weather bureau for weather probabilities. London is no surer index of what the coming season will be than Newport is of what the summer will show forth, whether it will be the best of the summer resort hotel men "dull" or what the girls call "lively."
All the present indications point to the word "lively," and nothing short of a Spanish war could disturb it. Tariff tinkers affect it not at all, nor do foreign affairs make themselves felt. The voice of the money speakers is silenced in the clicking of the lawn mowers and the grinding of the steam rollers along the roads.
Newport is being made ship-shape for the season, which even at this date is what the paragraphers call "well under way."
There have been years when great villas at Newport were closed, but this season there will not be a closed door. The last wooden barricade disappeared from Bellevue avenue last week, and the most belated lace curtain is fluttering a welcome.
Newport this summer is to be a city of sensations, but there will be a few old diplomats here to act as mediators should the sensations turn into "affairs" and settle into differences.
The most pronounced early sensation is that Chauncey M. Depew has taken a cottage here for the summer. It is one of the Pinard cottages, on Narragansett avenue. Here our Chauncey will keep open house until October. For many years Dr. Depew has gone abroad every June to remain until September. But last year, during his absence, his friend and business partner, Cornelius Vanderbilt, was stricken with paralysis. Both partners cannot summer in Europe at the same time, so Chauncey comes to Newport to keep house while his friend comes later to open the famous "breakers." The oddest thing about the Depew cottage is that it is located directly across the way from the Wilson villa, where the Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., lives. As Chauncey goes out walking, cycling or driving he must meet young "Neely" face to face. The Newport sensationists say that Dr. Depew has selected this location purposely. It is his own intention to reconcile father and son, and as a mediator and diplomat he has come to Newport and located his tent in the twain. In the work of reconciliation he will be aided by Chauncey, Jr., who is only a little younger than Cornelius, Jr.
The beautiful cause of the trouble, Mrs. Cornelius, Jr., is to have a very gay summer. Her mother, Mrs. Orme Wilson, is to give a great ball for her in August, and has already given out the floral and catering contracts. A Newport ball means a great deal this year, for all things are now measured by the ball which Mrs. Willie K. gave for the Duke of Marlborough two years ago. It means three bands of music—one on the lawn, one in the ball room and one in the supper room. It means two spreads—one a supper served at 12 o'clock and the other a square meal served at 3. It means a festalation of receiving hostesses and it means favors that would load a royal Christmas tree to the ground. But the Orme Wilsons say what the bakers can do "dough" for the great affair, and are going to need it all in August when they give the best bred function of the season.

Another Newport sensation is that Mrs. Grover Cleveland is to enter society this summer via the Newport gates. Should this lady be on social position bent she could not have gone about securing her entree in a more effective way. From the time of leaving the White house she has kept herself in elegant seclusion, accepting few invitations, but whenever putting in a public appearance robing herself as gorgeously as Sheba's queen and with much better taste. She arrives late, is affable to everybody, and fits away before people have had time either to snub or lionize her. The only drawback to her high social position—the most whispery of the Newport gossipers say—is that she has become very stout, and will not be led by an Amazon over 130.
That one little detail is said to have stood in the way of the absolute queenship of Mrs. Calvin S. Brice, who has overcome all obstacles except that of avardupois. She is beautiful, well bred, winning and gracious. She is generous, thoughtful, lavish in hospitality and a born entertainer, and if she were as queenly a woman as Mrs. Potter Palmer would lead Newport by the very power of her personality. Both ladies would be Newport's most cherished guests if only because they represent the government.
Mrs. Cleveland will be a guest. I am assured, of Mrs. Sidney Webster. The American instead of a titled Englishman, anyway. Other heroines are Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, formerly Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, who wedded an untitled American instead of a titled Englishman; Mrs. J. Townsend Burden, who lost as many jewels as any other three women in Newport ever owned; Mrs. Havemeyer, who cannot even give a bicycle party on account of the death of the Sugar Baron; and Mrs. Crocker, the San Francisco beauty, who has taken the Scott villa on Bellevue avenue for her first Newport year, and is said to be so besieged with attentions every summer that she, for very self-defense, hides her face on the public highways.
Marble House is to be occupied this summer by young Harold and Willie K. Vanderbilt, Jr. There is a flag of truce floating over Marble House. The sons are to live there where their father can visit them, but, on the other hand, their mother's sister, Miss Aramide Smith, takes care of them. A little distance away Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, their mother, lives in Esbourn, the villa that is part stable, but such a glorified "stable" as was never seen before. She will entertain in a way to prove that she is the worthy mother of a duchess.

Perhaps some of the June arrivals in Newport are friends of yours. The Oelrichs are here and Miss Fair of California is to come. Mr. and Mrs. Eliza Dyer are located, and the Cuttings, the Riveses, with their Virginia cousins, the Laniers, the Winthropes, the Lispenard Stewarts and the Cushings are smiling a welcome to daily arrivals. Harry Germaine.
It is said Queen Victoria would, were it possible, promulgate a decree against second marriages. It is believed that the Princess Beatrice has promised her mother never to remarry.

interested in the Red Cross movement in Greece, sent over by Clara Barton a sum of money large enough to cripple even her vast resources. That is the gossip, anyway. Other heroines are Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, formerly Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, who wedded an untitled American instead of a titled Englishman; Mrs. J. Townsend Burden, who lost as many jewels as any other three women in Newport ever owned; Mrs. Havemeyer, who cannot even give a bicycle party on account of the death of the Sugar Baron; and Mrs. Crocker, the San Francisco beauty, who has taken the Scott villa on Bellevue avenue for her first Newport year, and is said to be so besieged with attentions every summer that she, for very self-defense, hides her face on the public highways.

JAPAN'S CROWN PRINCE.
He Wants an American or European Wife.
Some months ago I mentioned that the Emperor of Japan had intimated a desire to have his eldest son, the Crown Prince, wedded to a European princess. This was freely commented upon by the newspapers throughout the world, and finally officially denied in one of the government organs published at Tokio. I had a conversation last night with one of the gentlemen specially attached to the suite of the Imperial Japanese Prince, who represented the Mikado at the jubilee. This gentleman is a German by birth, but has lived for sixteen years at the Mikado's court, and has enjoyed the most intimate personal relations with the highest dignitaries of the Japanese government. He tells me that an alliance with a European royal family is the fervent wish of both the Emperor and Empress, but that the difficulties of religion and the probable objection of the Japanese nation are almost if not quite overwhelming obstacles. It must be remembered nevertheless, that the present emperor has done all the modernizing which his court at the present time possesses. The country has a constitution based on the American and English houses of legislature. The law of the whole empire has been made to conform with the judicial systems of western civilization, and the court costume and the gala attire of every man and woman of position in the land of the chrysanthemum are the same as those fashioned by the tailors and modistes of Europe. From an emperor who has induced his subjects to accept so much, much more can be expected.

"If," said my Japanese friend, "a European princess could not be induced to share the ancient didem of the Mikados, why should an American girl not be willing to accept the position?" I laughed at my Japanese enthusiast, to which he replied: "But they marry your dukes and earls, why not our princes? If you say that it is merely the religious question—well, the Lutheran sister of a German emperor accepts that remarkable mass of superstition, in my eyes, called the Greek church, in order to become Crown Princess of Greece. Why should a Christian girl not be willing, for political reasons, to acknowledge herself a follower of Buddha? Besides," he continued, "I believe that if our Crown Prince were to marry a Christian woman, she would be allowed to preserve her own faith, just as was the case with the Englishwoman who married the lost Sheriff of Morocco, head of the Mohammedan church. The children of the union with the Crown Prince of Japan would, of course, have to be brought up in the dominant religion of the country."

SALVATION ARMY JUNK STORE.
Corps Organized in Brooklyn to Gather Up Rubbish.
A novel enterprise has been started under the direction of the Salvation Army in Brooklyn, and is officially styled the Salvation Army salvage corps, having headquarters in the basement of the old Methodist church at Stags and Locust streets. The corps has been in operation only a few weeks, but it is growing steadily as the work advances. Its object is to act as a discom scavenger, removing junk, old furniture, broken newspapers, clothing, and, in fact, anything that a housekeeper wishes to get rid of. All that is required is that a notice be sent to Captain F. A. McDermid, who has charge of the corps.
In explaining the operations of the corps, Captain McDermid said that they expected to extricate from the business steadily, and the number of orders were increasing each day. Five pushcarts and six men receive $2 a week for their services, besides their board and lodging. The old paper is sold to junk dealers, the iron to iron dealers, while the old furniture is made over and sold to the poor. The Long Island Bottlers' association makes it an object to them to return bottles to their original owners.
The basement of the church is filled with articles of almost every description. All the repairing is done by Captain McDermid's associates, and they eat and sleep in the headquarters. Captain McDermid is a bachelor, 37 years old, and during his lifetime he ran through a fortune of $72,000. He has also been in almost every state in the Union. He was converted and joined the Salvation Army five years ago.—(N. Y. Times.)

Paper Bullets.
According to L'Echo des Mines, Paris, bullets of paper covered with aluminum are the latest thing in ammunition. "This invention," made by a French officer, tends to do away with the seriousness of wounds made by lead balls, or those with steel coverings, owing to the rupture of the bony parts. According to the patents granted to Richard Louwers of Goritz, the precision of fire is in nowise affected, but the passage made by the projectiles through the body is absolutely straight and permits of a rapid closing of the wound. As the number of the wounded will be as large as formerly, and as in most cases their incapacity will be as complete, we ought to look upon this discovery as calculated to satisfy the sentiments of humanity. But nevertheless the innovation has small chance of success, for we must recollect that, in war, unfortunately, the end sought is to put the largest number of men possible into a condition where they will be unable to bear arms for the longest time.—(Translated for the Literary Digest.)

Battle of the Future Will be Under Water

The United States is Now Experimenting With Three Modes of Submarine Warfare.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Sag Harbor, June 25.—In the development of torpedo warfare the stage has been reached when these accessories of marine combats are about to be pronounced either utterly useless or the arbiters of battle. At Sag Harbor tests of Whitehead torpedoes are going on every day. Over in Mr. Bliss' shop in Brooklyn the government is building these torpedoes, and Sag Harbor has a proving ground where each torpedo is tested before it is accepted.

The United States government is experimenting with three systems of submarine warfare. There is the sub-marine mine, the torpedo and the sub-marine boat. Some officers of the navy have no belief in the efficacy of the torpedo, and not long ago the executive officer of a battleship said: "If I were going into battle with this ship the first thing I would do would be to throw overboard every torpedo we have. I believe they are more dangerous to the ship which has them than to the enemy." Nevertheless the naval advisers of the government do believe in the automobile torpedoes, and the government is building them.

The sub-marine mine, upon which much dependence is placed for the defense of harbors, is not a "mine" at all in the common acceptance of the word, but a stationary torpedo. Of all the harbors of the United States charts have been prepared and laid out in squares. In each of these squares is, theoretically, a sub-marine mine waiting to be exploded from the shore by an electric spark when a hostile man-of-war gets over it. The school of Applied Instruction for the sub-marine mine is at Willets Point. There are stored miles and miles of cable for the mines. Still there is not enough cable of this kind in the United States to supply the sub-marine mines for the defense of the New England harbors alone. Not much has been manufactured since.

Only Promising Submarine Boat.
The third under-water system of fighting which the United States has adopted is by the means of submarine boats. After 30 years of experimenting Holland has at last invented a submarine boat which promises to be a success. The "Nordenflieth" submarine boats, two of which are now in the possession of the Greeks, have not been a success, and nothing was heard of them in the late war between Turkey and the Hellenic Kingdom. There is a Spanish submarine boat, too, but it so far has not attracted much attention. It is not too much to say that the United States has today the only boat, or rather will have it after it has been paid for, which in the opinion of experts will be able to actually fight under water.

The scheme of defending harbors by running torpedoes rapidly across the entrance by some mechanical means is just now attracting some attention. Lieutenant Graydon, of the United States navy, had such a scheme when the French and Chinese were fighting, and resigned his commission to enter the Chinese service to carry it out. The war lasted so short a time that the system did not have a fair test. Lieutenant Graydon's plan was to keep a line of torpedoes passing across the mouth of a harbor by means of a trolley.

Torpedoes on a Trolley.
A new plan on the same lines recently has been invented, by which the torpedoes are sent back and forth by a trolley system. The scheme is cheap, if it will work. The stretching of the wire is not expensive, and the trolley arrangement, which is supposed to keep the torpedoes running, can be made cheaply. The torpedoes are supposed to be of the automobile type, their propulsion being furnished by compressed air engines, and the wire and the trolleys are only guides. Suppose a ship on hostilities bent were coming up through the Narrows after running the batteries at the Hook and standing the fire of Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton. It would seem that one of the torpedoes flying swiftly across the narrow channel would strike her and blow her out of the water.

The only trouble is that the explosion of one torpedo would destroy the trolley system by breaking the wire. One ship with her crew might be annihilated, but the other ships would get through. But suppose the whole harbor were sown with submarine mines, a fleet of submarine boats cruising about off the light-ships, and the trolley system running across the Narrows. Something under water would give the invading fleet a pain for their money.

As the nations of the world are looking to airships and "dirigible balloons" to play a part in warfare on land, so are they looking for the decision of future naval battles to be by the use of submarine appliances. In nineteen hundred and something battles may be fought in the clouds and under the sea, while the surface of the ocean and the fields of the land are reposing in peace, the one carrying its merchant fleets and the other rich with seed-time and harvest.

Torpedoes Discharged Under Water.

If, as it is believed, Mr. Holland has built not only a successful submarine boat, but has solved that other problem that for a long time has been worrying naval experts—the successful firing of torpedoes under water—he has indeed accomplished wonders in the line of submarine warfare. The original design of a torpedo to be used from a ship was that it should be discharged under water, as it is essentially a submarine agent of destruction. This was found to be impracticable, and on all the ships of the United States navy and on nearly all of those of England, if not on all, the torpedoes are shot out of tubes above water. In some of the latest ships which England has built under-water torpedo tubes have been put in, and the English say they have discovered the secret of how to fire a torpedo out of a submarine tube. In the Holland torpedo boat there are two tubes for the discharge of torpedoes, and both work under water. Just by what means Mr. Holland has done this is not known, and will not be known until the boat at the Crescent shipyard at Elizabethport has been tested thoroughly.

So far submarine warfare has been a failure, but it seems as if a new era was approaching. The recent experiments with torpedo boats at Newport show that it is possible for a vessel of that class to "sneak" into a harbor and get within a striking distance of a man-of-war, even when the man-of-war expects the attack. The United States has in its navy some of the most expert torpedo "sharpshooters" in the world. Notable among them is Lieutenant Cameron Winslow, whose father was captain of the Kearsarge when she fought the Alabama on that memorable Sunday morning off the harbor of Cherbourg.

"ZALMA."

Concerning the Duke of York's Marriage—A Novel on the Subject.

The story of the alleged marriage of the Duke of York to the daughter of Admiral Sir Michael Culme Seymour has been once more brought upon the tapis by the appearance in London of a book bearing the title of "Zalma," and the name of Mr. T. Mullett Ellis as author. It is what one calls a "key-novel"—that is to say, a book like Lord Beaconsfield's "Lothair," "Comingsby," and "Endymion," or Daudet's "Nabob" and "Kings in Exile." That is to say, all the personages in the book are portrayed from life under the most transparent pseudonyms.

"Zalma," in one word, is the story of a royal prince, who, having contracted a secret and unauthorized marriage with a girl of non-royal rank, suddenly becomes heir presumptive to the throne through the death of his elder brother, and thereupon for dynastic reasons contracts a public marriage with a royal princess, abandoning his first wife, who is pensioned off by his family and sent to reside with her two children in Canada.

It is no mere penny novel written for kitchen readers, but the brilliant work of a successful author who is on terms of personal acquaintance with most of the individuals whom he gibbets in the book; and to such an extent is it held to constitute a distinct charge of moral and ecclesiastical, if not actual legal bigamy against the duke of York, that many of the most important of the English newspapers are demanding in print that some definite announcement be made by the crown and proofs furnished with the object of clearing the name of England's future king of the shadow which now rests upon it.

Even Mr. Astor's Pall Mall Gazette describes the book as "astonishing," and speaks in the highest terms of its literary merit, while several leading provincial papers, such as the Liverpool Post, the Manchester Guardian, etc., speak of the "great gifts of the author," who, "under an audaciously thin veil, revives a recent scandal concerning the highest personages in the land."

At the time of the duke's wedding to the duchess it may be remembered that the archbishop of Canterbury, speaking from the altar, made an indirect reference to the stories then current concerning the first and secret marriage of his royal highness, and equally indirectly branded them as without foundation. What the English people now want, and through the press demand, however, is that the crown itself make some clear and distinct announcement clearing the duke once and for all time.

Of course, the duke's first marriage, if there really has been one (as every one believes, and as the behavior of his mother toward the duchess during the first year of his matrimonial existence tended to show) is invalid in point of law, since no royal prince can contract a legal marriage without the consent of the sovereign and parliament. But it is idle to deny that in these democratic times legal quibbles of that character are altogether inadequate to satisfy public sentiment, and that the vast majority of the duke's countrymen were they to know for a certainty that he had been ecclesiastically married to Miss Seymour, and then without a divorce had from her led to the avaricious Princess May, would regard him as nothing less than a bigamist.—(Marquise de Pontenoy.)

PROSPECTS OF BIMETALLISM.

The dispatch which was printed in The Gazette yesterday morning is the most encouraging statement of the chances of international bimetallism that has been printed for some time.

A good deal is made in the dispatch of the sending of a special ambassador to represent the government of the United States at the occasion of the queen's jubilee, more so, it appears to us, than the facts warrant.

This year's race means a revolution in inter-collegiate rowing. Cornell has wrested the laurel wreath from Yale, for it, in fact, from the forehead of a boasting fellow, and the victor has shown "swell" Harvard that New Haven does not hold the only other college worthy of sporting notice in these free and independent states.

Mark Twain once visited Hawaii, and in writing of his trip, described the native of the island as a man who "sometimes wears a million gallons daily, or a pair of spectacles, but generally speaking, he wears a smile."

The American flag which was pulled down in Hawaii by an ex-confederate at the direction of President Cleveland, has been hauled up again by a Union soldier, William McKinley.

New England cotton mills are announcing that they will not make their usual summer suspensions of business this year.

SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

Noteworthy Opinions of Journals of the World.

The scheme of co-operative colonization in some western state or territory of the unemployed and the unfortunate, which has been so long in the air, is being agitated, and to which the author of that vastly over-rated book, "Looking Backward," stands as a sort of irresponsible sponsor, does not seem to be either coherent or sensible.

practical success of that during many years is not questioned. The settlements of the Shakers and the so-called Oneida community in this state are other instances of successful co-operation.

In such communities of this sort as have lately been organized, the inducements for one colonist to betray the general cause have been minimized, and the scene of the experiment has been removed from the crowded thoroughfares of the world, and their clamor of competition.

But such superiority and such advantages are for Great Britain, not for the United States. They concede that their system might not work there as well as the British, but they claim the right to believe that neither would the British system work as well here as the American.

the example cited by The Spectator, the object was not that the occupant of the White House was deemed a Briton, but that he was not deemed a good American.

Knocking Off The Turk's Head

Many New Games to be Played on the Bicycle by Any Rider.

ALL IMPORTED FROM OLD ENGLAND

"Duck on the Rock," the "Apple Race" and "Fox and Geese"—The True Way to Enjoy Your Wheel.

From Our Own Correspondent.

"It seems strange to me," said a biking tourist who had just returned from a spin through England, "that our wheelmen do not make more use of their bicycles in the ordinary field games and old-fashioned sports."

"The average Yankee biker apparently finds his chief pleasure in the pastime in scorching frankly overland with the century goal the only thing to be sought for. They ride their wheels just as they eat and sleep and work—always in a hurry and in a pell-mell fashion that leaves them all used up. There are exceptions, of course, but that seems the general tendency. Now in England I found it very different."

"The average Britisher enjoys his wheel just as he does his horse and his pipe. To be sure, he burdens his wheel down with brakes, fear cases, mud guards and other trappings which we scoff at, but for solid comfort he is, in my opinion, players take a rock in their hand before mounting, and when the man who is 'it' gives a signal they all ride swiftly towards the duck, and as they pass try to knock it off.

"If one succeeds the person who is 'it' must dismount, return the duck to the rock, remount and touch one of the players before he gets out of bounds. By placing the boundary lines a quarter of a mile or so from the duck, the game is made more exciting, and the person 'it' has a greater chance of catching one of his opponents.

"Duck on a rock on a bicycle can be played on an ordinary country road, and if it is desired to make it doubly difficult and risky a stretch of road with a steep hill is selected. There is some danger of injury to the wheel by the flying rocks, but if a player is moderately careful he can dodge them.

Riding a Maypole.

"Another pretty picture which I saw

"Duck on a Rock," the English Bicycle Sport which will become popular here.

as far ahead of us as our Pullman trains are ahead of their compartment cars.

Fox and Geese on Wheels.

"From what I observed of them, the English men and women get a great deal more fun out of the bicycle than we do, and more benefit, too. For instance, instead of tying their spinal column into a bow knot in an heroic effort to gain a century badge, the women meet of a Saturday afternoon or a half holiday and play fox and geese on their wheels.

"The homely, old-fashioned game as played under quite the same rules as when on foot, only, of course, the circle when laid out on a larger scale. I have seen a dozen women playing fox and geese on the lawn of a big country place, and it is as pretty a bicycle picture as you could wish to see. Oftentimes the circle is a quarter of a mile in circumference and the lines radiating from the center goal afford plenty of space for riding. Of course, the bigger the circle the more sport, but it can be played in a space smaller than a city square, and lots of amusement and exercise can be got from it.

"Duck on a rock" is another exciting game of our childhood and has lost its childishness and become a rattling good game for grown-ups through the medium of the bike. Duck on a rock is a bit rough and dangerous for women, but men can and do play it with great success.

Rough but Exciting.

"As with fox and geese, duck on a rock has to be conducted on a larger scale when played on a wheel. The while on the other side was a dozen or more young women dancing, or, to be correct, riding a gigantic maypole. For the ribbons long strips of brightly colored paper similar to those which jugglers uncoil from a victim's hat were used. These were tied to the handle bar, and were forty or fifty feet long. As the riders rode swiftly in and out, weaving the ribbon around the pole, I couldn't help thinking how much prettier and daintier it was than the average bicycle parade in this country.

"Going through the various cavalry drills on bikes is also an excellent substitute for scorching, and at the same time gives all the exercise one needs.

"Knocking off the Turk's head" is now a popular game in England. The Turk's head consists of a round leather pad placed on a post four or five feet high. The contestant, with sabre in hand, rides past it at full speed, and if he succeeds in knocking the pad from the post he scores a point.

Bicycle Tournaments.

"Bicycle tournaments are now established fixtures of biking in England. A club will hold a tournament and invite all the clubs in the surrounding country to participate. The list of events includes almost as many forms of track contests as an intercollegiate meet. The apple race always causes the most amusement and excitement. As many apples as there are entries are placed in a tub of water, and each rider must ride to the tub, pick an apple out with his teeth, without using his hands, and, bearing it in his mouth, return to the goal. The biker who gets his apple across the line first wins.

"Fugs of war, polo and lacrosse are also in the list of events, and for the women there are potato and slow races.

"Of course, for any of the games the riders have to be experts, but it is good training for road riding, and besides is healthful and exciting sport. I think if we took it up here it would become popular in a short time and do away with the crooked back and overstrained cyclists."

CIVIL WAR IN TACOMA

It is Over Tacoma Mountain which the Seattle People Call Mount Rainier.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tacoma, Wash., June 2.—"Hello, stranger! Come out here to take a hand in the civil war!"

The station was Tacoma, and the newcomer, an eastern traveler, stood upon the steps taking his first look at the country of hills. Around him gathered a little group of old inhabitants, eager to point him on the current events of the town.

"There's a civil war going on here now, and no mistake, over the name of that mountain. We call it Tacoma. The Seattle folks on the other side call it Rainier. The trouble has broke out fresh every year since Tacoma got settled, but this year it's hotter and heavier than ever. 'Taint safe now for a Tacoma man to go to Seattle, nor for a Seattle man to come here. Haven't you heard about it? Why, the Cuban dispute ain't in it with the Tacoma and Rainier trouble. We are in the right, and that makes us strong."

"Yes, and it's a good 'ad' for the town, too," said the real estate man. He was standing with a foot on the lower strip of the railing that runs along the east side of St. Helen's avenue to guard foot passengers against falling over into the street, which lies the depth of two Tacoma lots below. "Yes, that mountain is a corking good 'ad' for the city of destiny, and we work it for all it is worth, too, you bet your life."

As he spoke he raised his head a little to all the country, for it nourishes the soil and gives it strength."

"But how about the mountain being known as Rainier for many years before this city was even thought of? Wasn't it named after an English Admiral Rainier?"

"Say, who in the world was Rainier? You don't know, nor anyone else, except that he was a pirate of a privateer-er, which is the same thing. No one in Seattle ever saw him. He never saw the mountain. And I'll tell you another thing. There ain't a Seattle man dare come down here and say 'Mount Rainier.' We'd push in his face if he did. Any way, he wouldn't be let do any business here. I might sell him some of the flat rats, but the chance would not let him ship goods from here without paying for his misuse of names."

The Seattle Side.

When the new-comer was in Seattle a few days later he felt himself ready to combat all the arguments of the Queen City folk, but when he spoke the people laughed at him. One man pointed to a hill on the east side of the mountain and said: "If you really wish to know what Mount Tacoma is, it's that dirty little knob there. Tell your friends in the City of Destiny!" In a bookstore where he ventured to inquire for literature on the subject he was told that no books in which the mountain was called Tacoma were allowed in the place. It was the largest store in town, too, with a large business. The charming young woman who waited on him said: "We ordered 200 magazines not long ago, but when they came and we found that there was a story in it that told about Mount Tacoma, we wrote to the publishers that they could recall them. We would not put them on sale, nor did we care to handle so untrustworthy a magazine anyway. The 200 copies are still in the cellar."

"I know that a good many folks in the east think that the mountain's name is Tacoma. They do not know anything about it. If Tacoma sounds better to them than Rainier they will say Tacoma, likely. But the Northern Pacific railroad is responsible for the name 'Tacoma.' It was the first road to come through to the sound. It laid out the townsite of Tacoma on the sound at the end of the road and then started in to advertise. It spent hundreds of thousands of dollars booming its terminus. As Seattle

Gowns for Gay Women

Exquisitely Neat Toilets for the Races and Out-Door Sports.

AMERICANS AT THE GRAND PRIX
They Go from the Jubilee to Paris to Buy Pretty Summer Dresses—All the New Skirts are Trimmed.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Paris, June 21.—It is a wonder to me that Parisiennes ever dare to plan their toilets for special occasions ahead of time in this stifling climate of theirs. We are treated to days of intense heat, unaccountably chilly days, thunder and hail storms, all within the space of a week.

Last month we were even treated to a light fall of snow, and all the May blossoms and bright green leaves glistened with a covering of snow at least for two hours one morning.

But notwithstanding these changes of the weather the "grande dames" of Paris plan their toilets for the "Grand Prix" way ahead of time. If her ladyship's taste runs to chiffon or mousseline de sole gowns, she chooses one and has it cut a trifle square-necked or "V"-necked, so that it might well be mistaken for a dinner gown, and this she dons for the Grand Prix.

If the day of the Grand Prix is a rainy day, or a chilly day, on the chiffon or mousseline de sole gown goes just the same. It is certainly a day of great toilet.

A Dress Occasion.
Sometimes one is advised to sit near the gates of the Bois to watch the "grande dames" drive by in all their glory to the Longchamp track. But side of the crown, where there was a bunch of deep violet feathers. It continued around the crown and fell over the brim at the back, where it rested on the hair. A stunning, tall, blonde American girl wore a chic gown that was much admired.

The skirt was a full godet of hunter's green silk poplin, with the fulness all carried to the back. It was trimmed round with six narrow bias folds of white moire. Three of the bands trimmed the skirt at the hips, and three trimmed the bottom of the skirt.

An Original Corsage.
The corsage was a blouse of white moire, with short full basques. It buttoned double-breasted fashion with two big pearl buttons, and at the neck turned back in small pointed revers to show a chemise of filled white mousseline de sole. The edges of the revers were trimmed with double frills of white mousseline de sole. The sleeves were the new coat sleeves with very little fulness at the tops. A note of narrow black was introduced into this toilet with the narrow black velvet belt and high tour de cou of black mousseline de sole. Long black suede gloves worn with this toilet rather accentuated this note of black.

The original little hat of this toilet was of rough black straw. It was trimmed around the crown with a plisse of broad white moire ribbon, and at the foot of the plisse there was a wreath of pale yellow roses. At the back and a little to the left side there was a tall bow of hunter's green velvet.

I note several white pique corsages made after the same model as this moire corsage. They were worn with skirts of different material in the Rue de la Paix, one of the attrac-

Baronne de la Rouel, one of the attrac-

"Their Toilets Were Not Extravagant, but They Were in Exquisitely Good Taste."

there one misses the exquisite details of the toilets. The grand stands presented a blaze of color with bright shades of violet-bluette blue and scarlet in the ascendancy.

The groups of Americans and English were rather conspicuous on account of their more sombre toilets.

While sipping my last coffee at the famous little Longchamp Moutin between races, I got a good look at some very fetching costumes. They were not as extravagant as a great many of the toilets, but they were in such exquisitely good taste.

One of these gowns had a skirt of violet cloth, not very deep in tint. It was a godet skirt with all of the fulness falling in folds at the back. At each seam of the front gore there were narrow panels of white satin inserted. These were covered with white gauze embroidered heavily in gold, and there was a trimming of gold applique at each hip.

All in One Piece.
The corsage was a full blouse of steel blue foulard over blue satin. Over it was worn a bolero of deep violet velvet embroidered in gold. The bolero was cut short and straight around. At the front it had broad pointed revers that were faced with white satin and fell about fashion to the bottom of the bolero. There were two tall turn-over collars to this jacket; one was of the violet velvet, and over it was a smaller collar of white satin.

The sleeves, which were close-fitting as far as the elbow, were made of solid violet velvet. Above the elbows they were mounted by five narrow folds of the embroidered velvet, with high full puffs at the top.

The hat that was worn with this toilet was of rough straw in a deep shade of violet. Under the brim there was a full ruche of clip blue mousseline de sole. A long white plume started from the left tove young June brides, wore such a pretty gown of gray taffeta that was trimmed with black and white satin.

The skirt was a godet, with a very moderate flare, and all the fulness was carried to the back. It was trimmed around the hips with two narrow bias folds of white satin that formed a point at the front. Just below the folds were three narrow circular ruffles, one of black satin, another of white satin, and the last of the gray taffeta. The bottom of the skirt was trimmed with a broad facing of black satin that was broader at the back than at the front. At the top of the facings there were six narrow circular ruffles—two of black satin, two of the gray taffeta and two of white satin, alternating. Above the ruffles were two narrow bias folds of the white satin, arranged in a sort of swirling line.

The corsage was a blouse of white mousseline de sole over white satin, and was drawn down loosely into a high black satin girde. Over the corsage was worn a bolero of gray taffeta. It was cut with two long points under each arm that fell over the girde and reached to the top of the skirt. The edges of the bolero were finished with a broad facing of white satin trimmed at the top with two narrow bias folds of the same satin. There were small pointed double revers of black satin over white. The sleeves of taffeta were long close-fitting coat sleeves, draped at the top.

Down the front of the corsage there were double ruffles of the white mousseline de sole, bordered with narrow black satin ribbons and a ruffle of the same mounted the collar.

In no case is the summer skirt left untrimmed if the modiste has her own way. Malicious persons claim that the dressmaker insists upon trimmed skirts because it is impossible for an unskilled seamstress to make one at home. The plain skirts in vogue for the past two years were so easily accomplished at home that only those "well fixed" in this world's goods purchased them outright. A few yards of cloth or satin, and you had your skirt. But with the new trimmed skirts it is quite different. The trimming is both elaborate and difficult.

Ruffles are freely used, but they are lined and "tailor made." The neatest finish is put upon them. The ruffle is stitched along the edge and is made as "trim" as though it were the most important part of the dress, as neat as the pocket in a tailor-made jacket. It is stitched on the skirt in the same neat way, and when done can bear inspection from underneath as well as on top.

Many of the new skirts have overskirts of a different material, and great dressmakers like Worth predict that by the time summer is over the plain, untrimmed skirt will be almost Gothic in appearance, so out of style that it has a "came out of the ark" look.

Of course there is mourning and lamentation over the new order of things, but when Dame Fashion speaks what is there to do but obey—or die?
Nina Goodwin.

Wrinkles.
Owing to the excessive dryness of our Colorado climate, we need to avoid the use of all soaps, alkali preparation and as much as possible water. Our skin should retain all the oil possible, if we would keep at bay the foe of woman's happiness—wrinkles. The outer or scarf skin, through dryness becomes looser than the under-lying membrane. And right here is the place to say a word about "instantaneous wrinkle removers," which are professed to do away with wrinkles of both old and young. There is no preparation yet discovered, which will itself accomplish this. But in the hands of a scientific "masseur," and with the aid of a pure oil, or a purely vegetable toilet cream, they can with a little care, be kept away for years. But not alone through the use of the preparation used, the massage will strengthen the muscles which have become flabby, and the creams will nourish and fatten the skin thereby causing it to become smooth and firm. The world is full of people who profess to be shocked at the use of creams and cosmetics of all kinds, and therefore go about either with their faces "shining like a glass bottle," or with the surface of the skin drawn into the finest puckers and wrinkles. (I might add that there is nothing better than a pure rice powder

Our Guarantee—Your Money Back if You Want.

A Pointed Reply.
Some little time ago Kaiser Wilhelm was present at the enrollment of recruits for one of his famous regiments of the Guards. He walked along the lines speaking a word here, asking a question there. One recruit was asked: "What would do if you are on sentry duty and many people crowd near you?" "I should ask them to go away at once, your majesty." "That's all very well," said the Kaiser, "but suppose one man stays behind and makes himself a nuisance to you, what would you say then?" "I should say, 'Don't make yourself a nuisance,' your majesty." The emperor roared and said: "Well, I don't mean to make myself a nuisance," and so passed on to another visitor.—(London Figaro.)

A Difference.
"My impression," said the physician, who was testifying before a coroner's jury in Georgia, "is that the man was shot in the early hours."
"That's funny," said the coroner. "This here other witness has done swore that he was shot in the leg!"—(Atlanta Constitution.)

A Stylish Bonnet.

In Mauve Straw.

The hat here sketched is in mauve straw. It has a medium crown, with a flat brim narrowing round at the sides to the back. You will then require one yard and a half of mauve chiffon, one yard and a half of violet chiffon, half a yard of jet trimming (two inches wide) and one bunch of mauve poppies or dahlias. Cut your violet chiffon into six strips, each nine inches wide; join at the ends to make one long piece, then double it and gather the two edges, sewing it round your crown to stand up in flutes. Next proceed to do the same with your mauve chiffon, then draw the band of jet lightly round the crown, sewing your mauve poppies to stand up at the left side.

"I took a tramp in the woods yesterday," said Miss Frocks to the new arrival at Deer Park. "Did you? Oh, well, I suppose that men are no scarce that even a tramp is better than nothing."—(Life.)

The Girl with the Medicine Fad

She Owns a Beautiful Tan Leather Box Filled with Cut Glass Bottles and Instruments.

From Our Own Correspondent. Not the least fetching fad of the summer girl is her medicine chest.

"And Jamaica Ginger for the Green Apple Season."

slipped under a bandage without piercing the patient. Two rolls of surgeon's bandages ready for use, a pair of tiny steel forceps and a small lance complete the surgical tools.

A COLLEGE EDUCATION USEFUL.

Mrs. Bountiful—Will your son's education be of practical use to you during his vacation? Farmer Orchard—Yes'm. I couldn't get along without him.

Son (vigorously)—Bah, rah, rah, apples!

a quiet talk upon maidens and a hint for their diagnosis. The first symptoms of measles—that common complaint in every summer hotel where children are found—and the initial performances of mumps, whooping cough and chicken-pox are all set forth; so that the man or woman who catches these from the flaxen-haired angel of the house may not die a thousand deaths from fright before realizing that he or she is afflicted merely with chicken-pox instead of some dread scourge.

The summer girl, in selecting the medicine fad for her own, shows a very excellent knowledge of human nature. The "ministering angel" is everywhere in demand. Hospitals complain that they cannot keep their trained nurses because of the call for them in domestic fields.

The summer medicine girl realizes this, for she makes the most of her fad. Her medicine chest is covered with the most beautiful of kangaroo leather, finished at the corners with triangles of sterling silver. On top there is a plate with a big silver monogram. A small silver key locks the box, and to the key is a little silver plate attached on which is engraved "key to medicine chest."

The bicycle medicine girl—and she is legion—has straps fastened to her box, which she attaches to the wheels, lightening it as much as possible first. Very small medicine chests that will go in the toolbox come for bicyclists. For camping out there are large, square medicine boxes, very complete and very ornamental; and for an ocean voyage or a cruise upon a yacht there is a medicine chest with a distinct set of keys, which has a useful end, not always to be discovered in the summer fad.

DEBARRED SALVATION. The Bourbon infant buried without Religious Rites. For the first time in the history of the house of Bourbon one of its members has been buried without any religious rite whatsoever, the late Bourbon infant of Spain having been interred at Paris with what are known as civil ceremonies.

They took no notice of her death, nor yet of her obsequies, and in spite of her near relationship to the young king, and to her rank as princess of the blood, no court mourning was decreed by the court of Spain in her honor.

It is scarcely necessary to add that she is debarred under the circumstances from admission to what is known as "El Purgatorio" at the Escorial, that is to say, from that particular portion of the vaults of Spain's grandest, yet gloomiest palace, which has been given over to the remains of the infants and infants of the reigning house ever since the erection of the palace four centuries ago.

A Human Gun.

Jack Fresh—What's the trouble, Jim, aren't you working?
Jimmy Cartridge—No, I went down aren't dis mornin', an' de boss said I ought ter be discharged, so he fired me.

A Convenient Sleep-Talker.

Reginald de Sweet—Could I speak to your father this evening, Maud?
Father (talking in sleep)—Yes, and hurry up with it, I'm tired of sitting up nights to give my consent.

Wit and Humor.

A Cause for Early Rising.

"Mary, go into the sitting room and tell me how the thermometer stands."
"It stands on the mantelpiece, just ag'in the wall, sir!"—(Larks.)

There was a discussion in the general council of the Reformed Episcopal church Friday, on the subject of vestments, during which Bishop Stevens said that he thought that after the church had separated itself from priesthood, as it had, he did not think a mere dress could signify anything of Catholicism. His favored Bishop Campbell, substitute, which practically allowed the clergy to wear what they pleased. "I attach no importance whatever to a mere garment," said the bishop. "Why, I have officiated without any garment whatever." There was a great laugh at this. "I mean," corrected the bishop quickly, "without any insignia of office."—(Troy Times.)

How It Stood.

"Thank you," said the lady to the man who gave her his seat in the street car. "You surprise me," replied the man.
"What do you mean?"
"By that 'I thank you.'"
"I couldn't have surprised you more than you surprised me by offering me your seat."
The stand-off was thus completed.—(Detroit Free Press.)

Honors were Easy.

The Springfield Republican tells a story of an Indian Orchard Swede who recently attended a revival meeting there. During the exercises the leader asked the individuals of the congregation if they wanted to work for the Lord, and received the usual cheerful affirmative. When he reached the Swede, however, there was a little misunderstanding.
"Wai, I don't know," he replied to the question, scratching his head. "I got purty gud yob down to the Yapanman Vaive works, and I gus 'll kap it."

Reticence Explained.

"Miss Pussiegh has had exceptional social advantages," said one young woman. "She has been presented to the queen."
"It's strange that I never heard of it," replied the other. "Oh, she never mentions it. You see, it occurred so soon after her majesty's coronation."—(Washington Star.)

"Mrs. Bickers treats her husband very badly," remarked Mrs. McCormick. "I would say that she treats him like a bicycle tire," replied McCrackle. "How do you make that out?" "She blows him up."—(Harper's Bazaar.)

"Your husband seems to be a victim of the tobacco habit." "No; I'm the victim. He thoroughly enjoys it."—(Chicago Record.)

A Choice Offered.

"Is the boss in?" he asked of the book-keeper.
"Which one do you wish to see," replied the bookkeeper. "The office boy or the typewriter?"—(Life.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox has written a poem about the new woman. Incidentally she says of her heroine:
"She looked on romance as a fairy story,
She flung off the garments that gave her grace,
She outstipped men on the road to glory."
"What a cool, summer, seaside lyric that is!"—(Atlanta Constitution.)

"Matrimony," said the Sweet Girl boarder, "is a holy rite."
"Why then," asked Asbury Peppers, with an air of a man sure of his ground, "why then, is it that so many who marry find they are wholly left?"—(Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Compliments.

"Miss Brown told me that you paid her such a charming compliment the other evening," said Mrs. Coddington to her husband, "something about her being pretty. The poor girl was so pleased. I don't see how you men can be so untruthful."
"I should think you'd know by this time that I'm never untruthful," said Mr. Coddington, reproachfully. "I said she was just as pretty as she could be, and so she was."—(Harper's Bazaar.)

"Do you think that will do?" inquired the farmer boy, as he displayed a sign which he had just written and prepared to tack up.
"Jehosophat, no!" exclaimed the old man as he read the placard to her husband, "something about her being pretty. The poor girl was so pleased. I don't see how you men can be so untruthful."
"I should think you'd know by this time that I'm never untruthful," said Mr. Coddington, reproachfully. "I said she was just as pretty as she could be, and so she was."—(Harper's Bazaar.)

The Cleveland Leader.

The Cleveland Leader tells a story of a simple-minded countryman who strayed into a Cleveland art store the other day, and appeared to be much struck by a picture entitled "Lion After Gerome."
"Well," said the proprietor after a while, "you seem to be pleased with that picture."
"Yes," the old gentleman replied, "I do sort of like it. That's a powerful ugly looking beast thar, and I swon I don't know's I blame Gerome very much for s'ittin' out of the way."
"Getting out of the way?" repeated the proprietor. "What do you mean by that?"
"Why," the visitor explained, "it says 'Lion after Gerome,' don't it? Well, Gerome ain't nowher to be seen, so I s'pose he must be hidin' behind one of them stuns."

First Bath.

First Bath—What makes the water so full of weeds?
Second Bath—I counted eight widows in bathing this morning.—(Philadelphia Record.)

"How would you like this frieze, Mrs. Newbound?"
"Freeze, eh? I should think as much, with that row of naked babies sittin' on them damp clouds."—(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

"Why do you look so dejected?" asked the tin-foil. "I was beaten out of $5 to-day when assembling on parade for drill. Pat happened to fall in next to a London recruit. On the order 'Double!' being given by the drill sergeant, the cockney was heard to exclaim: 'Oh, hang double!' To which Pat immediately replied: 'And hang London, ye spalpeen!'"—(London Answers.)

The Trouble with Titles.

"The Princess Troubeskorze looks sad these days. What is the matter with her?"
"She can't remember how to spell her full name."
"How They Came to New York."
The following conversation took place between two gentlemen in a crowded New York club room. They had been talking about the condition of things when they first came east. Mr. Rawson said:
"When I first came to New York I had only a ragged coat, with a knife and a few marbles in my pocket."
"You were better off than I, then, for I had neither a coat nor a waistcoat, nor a knife, nor even marbles."
"Nonsense!" was the reply. "How could that be?"
"Well, I will tell you. When I came here I was a baby in long clothes. The roar of laughter that arose could have been heard miles away.—(Tit-Bits.)

New Bloom for the Florist.

"He—Oh, I am the flower of the family beyond doubt."
"She—I wonder if that was what papa meant when he spoke of you as that blooming idiot?"—(Inter-Ocean.)

There is such a thing as an emotional trunk, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer.
"I'll have to ask you to pay in advance," remarked the hotel-keeper.
"Isn't my trunk good?" asked the new boarder.
"I fear it is a little too emotional."
"Emotional?"
"Yes. Easily moved."

A Resemblance.

A small boy, after critically surveying the new baby, remarked to his mother:
"He's got no teeth, and no hair. He's granddaddy's little brother, ain't he, ma?"—(Fun.)

Too Talkative for Dakota.

Wife—What is the reason you refuse to take me to Dakota with you?
Husband—For a good sound reason, my dear. The atmosphere-out-there's so dry that talking can be heard for more than a mile.

Prepared for a Great Deal.

He—Well, darling, I have just asked papa for your hand.
She—What did he say?
He—He asked me if I felt able to bear a heavy burden.
She—And what did you tell him?
He—I told him that I would take care of all he could give us.
