Boosters Congratulate Mustang Band

Between 35 and 40 Shallowater band parents, grandparents, faculty, former band members and interested observers sat in Jones Stadium, November 4, and watched the Class A bands perform, waiting for our band to march on the field. We did not have to have a child marching to swell with pride when 74 boys and girls dressed in snappy black and red uniforms approached the field.

A thrill akin to patriotism came through us as we watched our Shallowater Mustang band go through their performance with skill and dedication. As we cheered the performance, we all felt our band had marched a "1" but there was more waiting and watching before scores were announced.

Band director, Rusty Sherman made his way up to the stands to thank the remaining boosters for coming to support the band.

We as boosters appreciated his thanks, but we feel our thanks goes to the Shallowater Band and their fine director.

Shallowater Town Meeting Set In Center at 7 Tonight

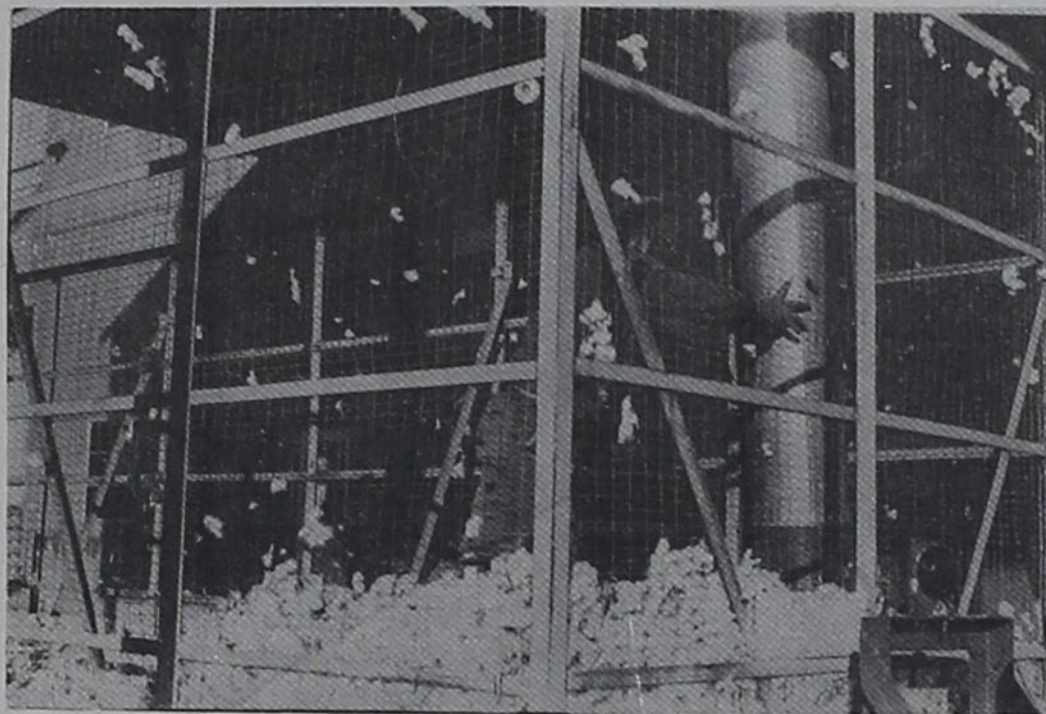

A town meeting has been set for Thursday, November 13th at 7:00 p.m. in the Shallowater Clubhouse concerning a clinic and a staff of doctors for Shallowater.

A group of local citizens took interest in the project when they discovered the possibility of obtaining federal money to help finance a clinic and a staff of doctors for local residents.

The group has also found professional help with the project at the Texas Tech School of Medicine. Dr. Tom Nicholas, head of the family practice system department, is taking interest in the project. Dr. Nicolas has had experience in the past in setting up local clinics in small towns and he will be at the meeting Thursday night to help explain the project.

It is the belief of the group backing the project that such a program would greatly benefit the local area. Although some people will contend that Lubbock doctors are close enough to serve their purposes, there are many advantages to having a local clinic with a staff of doctors. These advantages will be discussed at the meeting Thursday.

The cotton harvest has started in this area. Manager of Shallowater's Co-Op Gin, Carey Gooch, says the yield is lower than expected but the quality and micronaire is good. Area farmers are now waiting for the effects of the first killing freeze, which probably occurred Wednesday morning, that killed the remaining vegetation and helped force open the remaining green bolls. Cotton harvest area wide is expected to be in full swing within the next ten days. (Staff Photo)

Business and Residence Burglaries Reported in Shallowater Last Week

Two separate burglaries were reported last week to Shallowater Police. One involved a local residence and the other a local business.

Police Chief, Don Rackler, reported that between 6:30 and 8:00 last Friday night, a burglar forced open 9 of ten trucks belonging to the White's Inc. Warehouse on Highway 84. White's reported two Citizens Band radios missing.

In another incident, Danny Jones of 1010 6th Street, reported a burglary of his residence Monday night. The burglary took place while Danny and his wife were in Lubbock shopping. The burglar gained entry through the back door of the residence. The thieves took all types of small appliances. According to Chief Rackler, they took everything they could carry. The estimated amount of loss to the Jones family was $2550.

Chief Rackler reported that he and his department had very few clues to the burglary except for reports of strange cars seen in the area at that time. Chief Rackler asks that anyone who has any information about the burglary, such as sightings of strange cars in the area, should contact the police department.

According to Chief Rackler, this is the time of year when robberies increase because of the holiday season coming up. The public should be on the lookout for strangers in town and they should be reported to the police department. "If a stranger is seen in town, it's no problem for us (police) to take a little time to check it out, and if the stranger does have business in shallowater, we can question him in a professional manner so as to not offend him," according to Chief Rackler. With a little public

City Council Meeting Set Next Week

The City of Shallowater will hold its monthly City Council meeting Monday, November 17 at City Hall at 7 p.m.

At this writing only one item is slated for the council's agenda. The council will consider extending the city limits of Shallowater one block north on city streets, 9th and 10th. Plans are underway for a new housing development in that area. The council earlier this year voted to reimburse the contractor of the project one half of the cost of water, sewage, curbing and paving of the area.

All local Shallowater residents are encouraged to attend their city council meetings.

Local Police Officer Receives State of Texas Certification

Dennis Gray and his certificate of Certification as a Peace Officer of the State of Texas. (Staff Photo)

Dennis Gray is now a certified peace officer for the state of Texas. The certification is the result of over 240 hours of education at the Police Academy in Austin. 240 hours of class are required for certification and Dennis completed over 280 total hours.

The officers receive highly intensive training in all types of police work including burglary, narcotics and many other phases of police work.

Dennis completed his school work on March 7, 1975. One year experience is required for certification also, and Dennis recently filled this requirement.

David Turner, a Shallowater

patrolman will receive his certification in about 3 months. This will complete the certification of the entire police force. For a town of Shallowater's size, this is rare and the police department deserves high commendation for this.

Notes from The Mayor

We owe much to a group of men who make up our fire department. They held keep our insurance rates low as compared to most towns our size; therefore saving us money every time we pay our insurance premiums. These rates are set by the State of Texas Insurance Board based on the percent of firemen attending meetings, type of equipment for use (trucks, etc.), full time professional or voluntary workers, size of water lines, distance of fire plugs from property, etc.

The Fire Department is headed up by a dedicated Fire Chief, Floyd Epperson, who is guided by laws of the State and help given by the other firemen. We are also fortunate to have professional firemen like LaVon McAuley who gives time and knowledge to our Fire Department.

Our Fire Department rates very high as compared to other volunteer departments on personnel, equipment and performance; and I have much confidence in them. They will answer a call immediately any time, day or night, regardless of the weather. Many use their personal cars to go to the call, which may be several miles out of town; and of course, this is at their own donated expense. They also give two Monday nights a month for practice, testing of equipment and meetings. Our department consists of our Chief, Floyd Epperson, his able assistant, Kenneth Shropshire. Another great responsibility rests on Harry Leonard, who is our Fire Marshall. Richard Hopson does a good job of being the secretary and treasurer. Other important members are: Manuel Duenez, Elden Hixson, C.E. Pair, Harry Charles L. Allen.

The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. James McMena-my. There were 16 members present, and one guest, Mrs. Joe Cox. Mrs. Doyle Mosbey was hostess.

The next meeting will be a salad supper on November 24th.

Tipton, Bill Boone, Sr., Dennis Gray, Mat Gonzales, Birl Holleman, Jake Powell, W.F. Williamson, Charles McClure, David Turner, Bill Hart, Sid Leonard, Joe Robertson, J.D. Young, and Don Rackler.

We each should have much gratitude for each of these men, and I know you join me in being very proud of our Fire Department. They do their job so well. Join me in a salute of thanks from our town. Would you join this group? Which reminds me again, what are we doing for our city?

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Shutouts these days in college football really are few and far between. Almost every team today has a kicker who can usually put three points on the board.

Thus, the whitewash of TCU was sweet in more than just the sense of a victory. It was good to win, it was an important win. But it was even tastier because the Raiders kept the Horned Frogs so completely bottled up that there wasn't a point on the home half of the scoreboard.

Indeed, the Raiders have to go back to 1971 to find another team that they've blanked. That was Baylor—and turn about is fair play, because Arkansas zeroed the Raiders the following week. Since then, no one has shut out Tech.

TCU now has gone two successive games against the Raiders without scoring, a drought that might bode no good in the future. The best advice Tech can get is to savor those shutouts.

For the first time since the second game of the season, the Raiders now have scored more points than their opponents. The margin isn't big, but who cares?

Tech's offense has been coming on, stronger and stronger. It is now averaging 416.9 yards a game and Tech is outscoring foes, 25 points to 23.3. If it meant a winning record no one would care if the point margin was 25 to 24.9.

Someone, after the TCU game, asked Steve Sloan how it felt to relax and not be nervous about a game. The young coach obviously was shaken a little by the question, but pointed out that Tech had gotten stronger as the game went on.

For those who weren't there—including me—the radio broadcast left much to be desired, but it was apparent that when Tommy Duniven fumbled when Tech was on the three that it was no afternoon for the coach to relax.

Indeed, it took a full quarter for the Raiders to mount a serious drive again. The offense sputtered Saturday last and it was not reassuring to those who had to picture the scene through the eyes of an announcer who may or may not have been in Fort. Worth. OH! Please, give us Jack Dale on all Tech broadcasts!

Anyway, as I was saying, the offense sputtered. Give the Frogs some credit, of course, but it seemed that Tech relied maybe too heavily on the air lanes.

The defense did a superb job. It kept the Frog attack so limited that the Homecoming team seldom was able to move against the Raiders. Tech obviously was in command of things.

It was a fine victory and sends Tech into the final two games with a three-game winning streak and momentum. The Raiders could, if Lady Luck smiles, wind up with a 7-4 record and that would be terrific in Steve Sloan's first year.

It doesn't matter how sorry a football team is, it can win. As I've penned before, the late Bill Roper of Princeton had a motto pasted on the bulletin board in Tiger dressingrooms that said: "A team that won't be beaten, can't be beaten."

That's still true today—and that was 50 years or so ago. Thus, TCU could beat Texas this week. I'm not brave enough to predict it, but it could happen.

Okay, so what else is new? Well, sir, the home team has a tremendous advantage, doesn't it? So you would think, but in 17 conference games the home team has only a 10-7 edge.

In non-conference games, conference teams have won 10 of 15 at home, while dropping eight of 12 on the road—to such teams as Florida, Oklahoma State, LSU, Nebraska, South Carolina, Arizona and Alabama.

How about the big TV games? Well, sir, this is startling. Only two home teams have won—UCLA (vs Tennessee) and Texas A&M (vs. Illinois).

But eight times visitors have come away with triumphs, three of them in upsets. Two of those upsets have been major ones, Missouri over Alabama and Georgia over Florida. So, the home field may not really mean that much.

Tech? The Raiders are 4-1 at home, 1-3 on the road.

Tech President, Grover Murray, Will Resign Post

Grover Murray, president of Texas Tech for the past ten years, announced his resignation effective August 31, 1976, in a general faculty meeting held Wednesday afternoon in University Center on the Tech campus.

No reasons were given for the resignation at the meeting, the second general faculty meeting this semester.

There is usually a brighter side to any bleak situation.

Hybrid Harvest Nearing Completion

Hybrid grain sorghum seed harvest of DeKalb Ag Research is nearing completion and the processing plant in Lubbock is running long weeks in order to ready the new seed for farmer planting next spring.

President says. "Good harvesting weather has contributed to excellent quality grain."

Louis Lostroh, manager of the Lubbock County Plant, says about 14 persons are now processing the incoming crop.

"We'll process thousands of fifty-pound units of seed production from this area before February," Lostroh says.

Lostroh says the Lubbock Plant is capable of bagging about 4,500 fifty-pound units of hybrid seed each day. Bagging began October 12 and will continue through the winter months. Newly bagged seed will be stored in warehouses around the Lubbock area.

"To produce quality hybrid seed requires good isolation from foreign pollen sources," the plant manager says. "In order to do that we're contracting acres some 200 miles away from the plant."

Most of the seed produced in the area is Sudax, a sorghum sudangrass hybrid and forage sorghum, but a good portion is of the grain sorghum type with bred-in genetic resistance to the sorghum greenbug.

Too much flattery is like too much sugar. Both are artificial.

Harvester combines hybrid grain sorghum production near the DeKalb plant in Lubbock. A DeKalb spokesman says the company is harvesting their largest crop of hybrid grain sorghum seed. Workers harvest hybrid seed from female sorghum plants which is later processed and bagged at the Lubbock facility and made available for farmer planting in 1976.

dollar losses to sorghum growers in the past. The new DeKalb seed is expected to save farmers millions of dollars.

Three DeKalb grain sorghum plants are located in Texas and Kansas, in addition to 25 corn production facilities spread throughout the major crop producing areas of the United States and Canada.

"This helps us hedge on poor growing conditions in any one area," Lostroh says, "and provides a more stable supply of hybrid seed to our farmer-customers each year."

Mission in Africa
by Boyd Pearce

Hunting is big business in Africa. Stores abound that can outfit you for safari, everything from mosquito nets to Land Rovers. People come from all over the world to hunt in Kenya. I think everybody in the world knew that hunting was big business in Africa, except us. It had never occurred to us that hunting might become a part of our lives in Africa.

Africa is a big, rugged country, and the "bush" draws you like a magnet out of the cities. You "feel" the beauty of it, but its not beautiful like the Rockies and the redwood forests of the American west. It is a lonely, wild, endless beauty. The tall grass is yellow, the trees are scrubby, the hills seem like outcrops of large boulders piled on top of one another. The colors are drab pastels—but you "feel" they are vivid. It is wild and often dangerous, but you "feel" it is peaceful. But most of all, you are overwhelmed by the bigness of it.

You can stand there and look in every direction and see no telephone poles, no billboard, no traffic sounds, nothing but bigness and beauty and quiet. Then you hear it—the sound of birds calling in the distance, the rumble of a great heard of wildbeast running down the valley, the snort of a hippo in the river and sometimes the distant roar of a lion.

We loved the country and never tired of being out in it. I'll never forget my first hunt. I had stood around wistful enough, long enough that finally another missionary volunteered to take me. We left about daylight one morning going out to hunt for eland—the largest antelope in the world. We passed up smaller animals looking for the big one. We rode and bounced over rough roads, we walked over dusty hills, we stood on top of the Land Rover and scanned the country side with binoculars. I got thorns in my boots, ants in my pants, sunburned, scratched up and leg weary, but still we saw no eland. We sat under a thorn tree in sweltering heat and ate a can of cold pork and beans for lunch, agreed were were having a great hunt, and took off again. Nothing! Finally, late in the afternoon my companion gave in and shot a wart hog, an ugly animal, but good meat. It had hide a quarter of an inch thick, and tusks that would make a hunter proud.

Junior High Students Complete Projects

Junior High students not only followed the usual pattern of reading, writing and testing in Texas History and Bicentennial studies classes this past quarter, they put their learning into some concrete activities as well.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Keitha Hopson, Mrs. Virginia

Hohertz, students created everything from toad stool candles done in red, white and blue, to replicas of one of the missions in early Texas history.

Currently on display in the junior high building are a number of items done by these seventh graders.

Football Spotlight

by Chris Hutchings

This week's football spotlight is on four sophomores of the Mighty Mustang team. They are Curtis Lester, Jesse Longoria, Tim Reep, and Rod Warren.

Curtis is six foot even and weighs 190 lbs. He plays guard on offense and linebacker on defense. Curt is a hard-hitter and will never let down. He is a true Mustang thru-and-thru. His number is 60.

Mustangs Again Face Defeat

by Kim McMenemy

The Mustangs played Anton last week at Shallowater. The Mustangs couldn't seem to get it together throughout the whole ball game. Anton built up a quick lead and increased their score to 28 before the final gun was sounded. Standouts on defense were Daryl Morris and Ricky Hawkins, both with interceptions and big plays.

Come out this Friday at 7:30 and support the Mustangs as they play Stanton at Todd Field in their final game of the season.

The realities in life are often too much for the sensitive, sincere person.

Jesse Longoria, No. 18, is 5'1" and weighs 145 lbs. He plays quarterback and cornerback on defense. Jesse is strong willed and knows how to handle a situation.

Big Tim Reep weighs a whopping 260 lbs. all on a 6'3" frame. Tim's positions are offensive and defensive tackle. Whoever said big men are slow, Tim puts them to shame. His number is 70.

Rod Warren, last but not least, weighs 175 lbs. and is 6 ft. tall. He plays tackle and linebacker. Rod is tough, and he goes where he wants to. Rod's number is 72.

NHS Has Supper Meet

The National Honor Society enjoyed a program planned by Judy Waller and Diana Perser this past Monday evening. Tim and Tad Sinclair presented a variety of musical numbers on the banjo and mandolin.

Coming events for the society include a Christmas party and candy sale at upcoming basketball games.

As I close out another week of club news, I think a "Tip of the Hat" goes to Mr. Rusty Sherman and every member of the Mighty Mustang Band for the honors won last week. Folks, we appreciate your hard work!

Beginning Typist Try Electric Machines

Miss Patricia Ortiz, beginning typist, was among five other students who faced the "traumatic" experience of typing on an electric typewriter for the first time this past Monday.

by Anita Alvarado

The fourth period typing class started the second quarter with a new experience. Typing at an electric machine is not the easiest thing for beginning typists.

The electric typewriters are time-consuming until new techniques are learned. One of the girls commented, "Every time I want to return I end up reaching up to return the carriage and it's not there. All I am supposed to do is touch the return key!"

Each student will spend a period of two weeks getting acquainted with an electric machine. "Yes, until a student makes the adjustment from a manual machine to the electric, it is rather frustrating," commented Mrs. Sharon Barker, typing instructor. "However, more often than not, once our students make the transition, leaving the electric typewriter at the end of two weeks is a sad affair," she says.

There are six electric typewriters available to beginning and advanced typing students, five Selectrics and one Royal. These typewriters are also available to teachers and student aids in preparation of tests, reports, and other teaching materials so that this is an investment of school funds which benefits more than just typing students.

Senior Spotlight

by Melissa Martin

Tom Sinclair and RoseMary DeLeon take places in this week's senior spotlight.

Tom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bery Sinclair. He is an 18 year old Leo. Hunting, swimming, and just about anything that deals with wood or metal working are his special interests.

Tom is involved in numerous activities. After school and on Saturdays he works for Ronnie Elliot at the machine shop. Church youth is another activity of which Tom is a part. He also is Senior Class President.

Lobster Newburg and girls are Tom's "favorite things". Ag Mechanics is his favorite school subject. He comments, "It is a good subject from the routine classroom and also because we get into a lot of good bull-shooting sessions after the work is done."

When asked his plans after graduation, he commented, "My plan right now is just to graduate. Afterwards—I wish I knew!"

RoseMary DeLeon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angel DeLeon, fills the only half of the spotlight.

RoseMary is a 17 year old Aries. Her hobbies are traveling and watching television. Working with anything that has to do with math are her favorite things. Algebra is her favorite school subject.

RoseMary participates in many school activities. Among these are U.I.L. number sense and F.F.A.

After graduation she plans to go far off to any college in California. We wish her luck on getting there.

Teacher Spotlight

by Melissa Martin

This week's teacher spotlight shines on Mrs. Sharon Barker, a teacher with many talents.

She taught at Amherst for three years prior to joining the faculty of Shallowater High School, where she has been for the past seven years. She and her husband, Larry, reside at 1212 5th Street.

Mrs. Barker is an all-around business teacher. She also teaches art. Oil painting is her hobby.

"I'm glad Shallowater is my home. The people here are really something!" is a comment she made about the Shallowater schools.

"I like teaching business subjects because they are relevant to daily living, something we all must do."

Students and teachers alike, depend on Mrs. Barker for many things because they know she'll always work hard and do her best. In addition to her classroom teaching assignments, she also sponsors FTA, the school yearbook and newspaper.

Mrs. Barker deserves a lot of credit for her hard work and talents she shares!
