Senior Banquet Held Last Saturday Evening

The Shallowater high school senior class of 1973-74 was honored Saturday evening, September 8 at 7:30, by the First United Methodist Church in Fellowship Hall, with their annual banquet.

The international theme was carried out in table decor and foods.

Invocation was led by Miss Terri Dixon, senior. Mrs. Cleo Vaughan, president of United Methodist Women, gave the welcome address and the response from the senior class was by Terry Saunders, president of the class.

Rev. Max Browning, pastor, was Master of Ceremonies and introduced Mr. Harold Harriger, a Lubbock attorney and layman of First United Methodist Church in Lubbock, who gave a very inspiring address to the group.

Benediction was led by Miss Cynthia Stewart, senior. Dinner music was furnished by Mrs. Burt Sinclair.

Special guests were Supt. and Mrs. Weldon McCreary, High school Principal and Mrs. Charles Hohertz, Senior room parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.V. Hardin, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Morris; also class sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Grissom.

Mrs. B.H. Thomas Jr. was general chairman of the banquet.

Frenship School District won the first round Wednesday in what may prove to be a long and bitter battle to keep a part of the original school district's area. In a 4 to 1 vote, the County Commissioner's Court of Lubbock County refused the petition of land developer Howell Kilgore, which has been requesting the de-annexation of a section of land bordered by the Lubbock Independent School District, and within the newly annexed city limits of Lubbock. Kilgore had contended that the land involved was actually more a part of the city of Lubbock than that of the Frenship (ie Wolforth) areas, and thereby should be allowed to be included in the Lubbock Independent School District. Lubbock Independent School District Superintendent Ed Irons appeared at the hearing and pointed out where proposed sites for future school locations were in regard to the developer's section of land.

The vote by the Commissioner's Court went as follows: FOR the de-annexation of the land, a single vote by Commissioner Alton Brazell; AGAINST the deannexation, four votes, cast by Commissioners Les Derrick, Arch Lamb and Max Arrants and County Judge Rod Shaw.

Although there had been no move by press time, it was expected by court house observers that an appeal would be filed by Mr. Kilgore's attorney within the next few days. The only question remaining unanswered at the present time was whether the appeal would be filed in a local district court or in Austin with the State Board of Education.

like a side effect of the nematode disease.

"Total crop losses have been known to occur when both diseases attack the plant," says the nematologist. "But, usually, the severity of the fusarium wilt is reduced when the disease damage wrought by the nematodes is brought under control.

"Some cotton varieties," continues Orr, "have a tolerance to the nematodes. However, many of these varieties are open-boll types and typically have a weaker fiber strength."

Rotating to grain sorghum was found to reduce nematode infestation in some cases, he adds. The sorghum is more tolerant to the disease than cotton or vegetable crops.

"However," he concludes, "root-knot nematodes will live and reproduce on the grain sorghum roots. If enough nematodes survive, the disease will almost always reoccur in next year's crop, even after the sorghum rotation."

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

The genius in advertising who thought up the slogan for Avis to the effect that, because we're No. 2, we try harder, never saw Texas Tech's scrimmage Saturday.

Still, he seemed to sum up what the reserves, using Utah plays, unfortunately, felt. The reserves scrapped the so-called first two offensive and defensive teams pretty much to a standstill. When it was all over, there was a lot of head shaking.

True, the "Utes" only scored once, but it was a sustained drive, something like 70 or 80 yards and included a fourth and 15 pass that succeeded against a veteran defensive backfield.

Indeed, that vaunted defensive secondary did a good job of equalling the rest of the team. Neither was impressive. Oh, for a time, the defense had the upperhand, but as the session continued, the reserves became embarrassingly potent.

Okay, so it was a dismal effort Saturday. It's behind us and the real game is ahead, that's the important thing. There's no question but what the players were tired after two-a-days. Work has been intensive this fall and the enthusiasm, Saturday, wasn't there.

As one observer quipped, as he listened to the Country Western music languidly flowing from the loudspeakers onto the field: "The players are about as inspired as the music."

I have every confidence that the Red Raiders will put it all together this week. They may have scored a lopsided victory over Utah last year, but the Utes have a better team, apparently, than they showed.

Also, in Don VanGalder, they have a quarterback who is one of the best. He's a year more experienced and he has a more experienced line to operate behind. The Utah defense is suspect, but Bill Meek is capable of bringing that along rapidly.

It's not, despite the 45-2 rout a year ago, an easy opener. The Utes are capable of moving the ball and Tech's defense ought to get a good test, both on the ground and through the air.

As for the Raiders, the potential is there. You can talk all you want to about inexperience, but it depends on what you mean. If you mean many offensive and defensive players didn't start last year, you're right. If you mean they haven't (1) played or (2) gained experience in games, you're wrong.

All in all, I look for an interesting game, with the Raiders getting a good test, but coming out on top with ease. Both teams probably will be a little tight. Both probably will make mistakes.

After that, I look for the Raiders to start putting on a show, led by Joe Barnes, George Smith, John Garner, James Mosley and the finest stable of backs Tech probably has ever had. By all means get a look at Tech Saturday. I think you'll like what you see and will come back—and back—and back.

Everybody else is picking the way the conference is going to wind up after the final action, so I might as well join them, even though the only team I've seen is Tech.

It appears to be another one of those years when the league is divided into three portions. The top echelon has only one team, Texas. The Horns appear to be in a class by themselves. In the second echelon is Tech and, at this point, SMU and maybe Baylor. The third echelon has Arkansas, A&M, Baylor, Rice and TCU.

I hope someone trips up Texas. At this writing, I don't know which team it will be. The Horns could be better than last year.

Then comes Tech and SMU—and I'm going to have to include a much improved Baylor team on this level. Injuries could kill the Mustangs and hurt the Bears.

That leaves the lower echelon to the Aggies, Owls, Frogs, and would you believe it, the Razorbacks!

If you want to analyze it, SMU could have the more explosive attack, while the Bears will depend more on balance and inspiration. Tech has ability and good depth.

I can't buy the Kiddie Korps at A&M as a contender. Arkansas could surprise, because I respect Frank Broyles. The Hogs could hurt anyone and everyone. The Owls will hve ups and downs, with more of the latter. While the Frogs could be the best defensive team in the league and be the real spoilers in the title chase.

So, to go out on the proverbial limb, here's the way I read the finish (and don't go out and bet the rent money).

- 1. Texas
- 2. Texas Tech
- 3. Baylor
- 4. SMU
- 5. Arkansas
- 6. TCU
- 7. A&M
- 8. Rice

Shallowater Landmark Being Remodeled

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Johnson, who own and operate the Little Folks Day Nursery, have started work on remodeling the nursery at 7th St. and Ave. F in Shallowater.

The house is a landmark in

Mrs. James McMenamy led the closing prayer.

Special guests were mesdames Doyle McKinnon, Barbara Chandler and Clarke Evans.

The man who admits a foolish act now and then is to be trusted. The "wise guy" who is never wrong should be left alone.

Shallowater, being built in 1917, with the front still as built, having been added onto the back at one time.

Now the Johnsons are adding 380 sq. ft., a baby room, a 2 year old playroom, a TV room and office, a storm shelter has already been completed and will be underneath the house with the entrance inside, which is an added safety for the children.

The fence will be extended to the alley and a larger playground area provided. We will have a picture when the work is completed.

Most outdoorsmen, especially hunters, hail their wives as the world's greatest wild game cooks.

If the real truth came to light, it would be learned that these statements are simply to mollify the little lady in the kitchen.

If you could tune in on the typical hunter-wife conversation when young Dan'l Boone troops into the kitchen laden with game, it would run something like this:

"Don't bring that in here! I'm not going to stink up my kitchen cooking it. Give it away. Let someone else cook it."

Admittedly some hunters do bring smelly messes into the kitchen, and they are to be chastised for so doing. But there's another side to the coin. Often the wife is at fault. Sometimes she scolds young Dan'l simply to cover her ignorance in not knowing how to cook the game.

This ignorance, both on the part of the hunter and the housewife, can be eliminated by a little book "larn-in'."

Most cookbooks contain recipes for cooking game and fish, but in general they are quite sketchy. There's a new book out—Shooter's Bible Cookbook by Geraldine Speindler—which should be a must in the library of every outdoorsman.

Distributed by the Stoeger Arms Corp., 55 Ruta Court, South Hackensack, New Jersey, the book tells how to take the "gaminess" out of wild game and make every dish a gourmet's delight.

This 208-page paperback book ($3.95) covers the game from hunt to dinner table. And it's written by a woman who appreciates hunting. She and her husband hunt regularly, and her hunting arsenal consists of shotguns, hunting and target rifles and handguns.

Opening chapter of the book can get young Dan'l off the hook for it adequately covers field dressing and storage. Remember hunters bag the game . . . and they also ruin much of it through improper field dressing, storage and care.

If young Dan'l becomes an expert in field dressing, he can leave most of the stink in the field and eliminate those cold stares and sarcastic words from the better half when he roams into the kitchen with evidence of his hunting skill hanging over his shoulder.

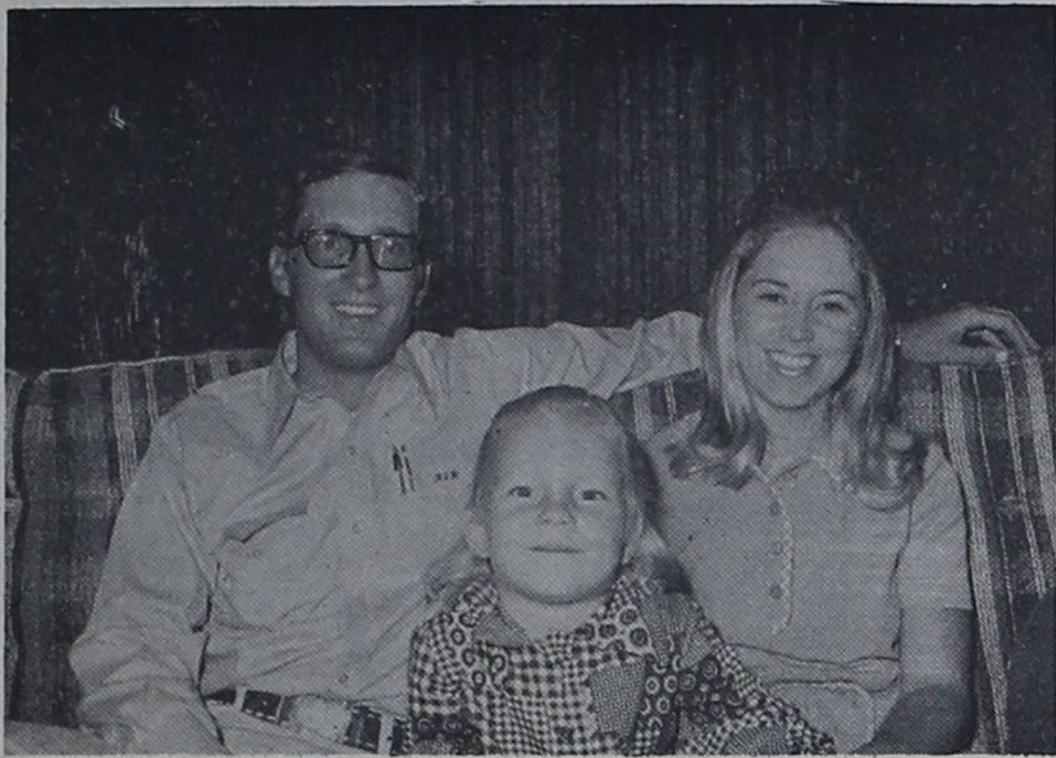

Well prepared game is tasty, but there is no denying that at times some game will cause pungent odors in the kitchen. And, of course, young Dan'l's wife is going to air objections about that.

But if the housewife studies the recipes in the Shooter's Bible Cookbook, she'll discover how she can turn out some real fine game dinners with none of the "gamey" smell hanging like a thundercloud in the kitchen.

The book contains chapters on cooking big and small game, fish, fowl and game soups. Also what to do with all that game "burger." Additional chapters cover the preparation of sauces, stuffings, and side dishes that can turn the game meal into the proverbial seven-course dinner.

This book is the little gem that can bring "peace" within the household of the hunter. And who knows? It might even get the little lady interested in going hunting herself. And that is the opening wedge—a big one—in getting a smiling okay for some additional hunts.

by Jewel Robinson

Mrs. J.H. Wheeler of the West View Home Demonstration Club, read, as probably many of you did, that in East Texas at Athens a blackeyed pea bake and recipe contest was held. Joy wrote for the prize winning recipe "since we raise and eat so many blackeyed peas in Hockley County". Joy tried the recipe on her family with favorable results—well, it was really 75 percent favorable. It is a different way to serve blackeyed peas and Joy has graciously shared the recipe. I hope you will try it and let Joy Wheeler know if you like it.

The Junior Class of 1973 have elected their class officers for the year. Don Grimes was elected president; Gary Green, vice president; Donna Hardin, secretary-treasurer; and Nancy Thomas, reporter. Our representatives for Student Council are Jerry Harrison and Gracy Lupton. We also have two Juniors serving as officers on Student Council who were elected last spring. Rusty Lusk is vice president and Jean Shipp is treasurer. Our sponsors this year will be Mrs. Hawke and Coach McAdams. The Junior Class will need everyone's support to make money for the Junior-Senior Banquet this spring. We know it will be the best ever.

On Friday, August 24th the Sophomore Class met to elect class officers. It was a big job for the sponsors, Miss Dillard and Coach Williamson, to keep them under control. Finally, the officers were elected, they are as follows: President, Jeanye Hunter; Vice President, Laura Thompson; Secretary, Carol Shropshire; Treasurer, Susie Saunders; Reporter, Terri Martin. Student Council Representatives are Russell Martin and Kim Young.
