Mr. and Mrs. William T. Turner Celebrate Silver Wedding Anniversary Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Turner of Lubbock were honored in their home Sunday, March 31 with a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. for their silver wedding anniversary.

Acting hosts were the couple's daughters and son-in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Rudder, Shallowater, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson of Lubbock and Miss Brenda Turner of the home.

The table was covered with a lace cloth, a centerpiece of cut flowers and silver candles.

The former Miss Joy Hendrix and Mr. Turner were married March 28, 1949 in Pyote in the Methodist parsonage. Turner, a native Lubbockite, met his wife in Pyote where he attended school.

They moved to Lubbock in October of 1949. Turner has been employed at Reese Air Force Base since that time.

Coke, fruit, punch and coffee was served by the daughters of the couple, assisted by granddaughters, Stacy and Casey Rudder of Shallowater.

Included among the guests was Mrs. J.S. Hendrix, Panhandle, mother of Mrs. Turner; Mr. and Mrs. Don Price, Pyote; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hitt Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ross, all of Wolfforth; Mrs. Jamie Hendrix of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Speck, parents of Mr. Turner, and Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Turner, brother of Mr. Turner.

AUTOMATIC GIN FEEDER PROVES OUT—Ginners and researchers alike are pleased at shakedown runs of the new automatic seed cotton module gin feeder developed in research sponsored by Cotton Incorporated. The prototype unit is in operation at the Mesa Gin, Lamesa, Texas. Checking rate records are (left to right) Roy Roberts, manager of the Seagraves Co-op Gin, Seagraves, Texas; J.K. "Farmer" Jones, associate director of agriculture research for Cotton Incorporated; Jerry Harris, manager of the Mesa Gin; and Ben Dopson and Bill Meares, both cotton producers of Lamesa, Texas.

Lamesa, Tex.—A new automatic seed cotton module gin feeder is "working like a charm" in shakedown runs at the Mesa gin here, Fred Abel, associate director of agricultural research for Cotton Incorporated, reports.

The new machine increases ginning rates by some 25 per cent, Abel said, and "eliminates the nastiest job in the cotton business, the suction pipe operator."

The feeder was developed in research sponsored by cotton producers through Cotton Incorporated at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Abel said the new machine feeds seed cotton directly into the suction pipe system automatically, constantly and uniformly. The cotton is fluffier and does not enter the gin in wads, as it does when a suction pipe operator lifts cotton from conventional trailers.

Jerry Harris, Mesa gin manager, agrees. "The cotton is better prepared and is more readily cleaned in the overhead," he said. "Our gin ordinarily runs 10-12 bales an hour. In one test run with the gin feeder, we applied a stop watch and measured a rate of 15 bales an hour."

Harris said the key to increasing the ginning rate is the consistent rate at which the feeder conveys cotton into the gin. "The feeder does not run real fast, then slow down, the way a suction pipe operator does. It just keeps on feeding at the same, consistent, near capacity rate. All you do is set the rate, push the button, and let it run."

The gin feeder is the latest step in a new system developed by Cotton Incorporated to mechanize the handling of seed cotton from harvesting through ginning. It must be used in conjunction with the cotton module builder, the basic machine in the new system.

As cotton is harvested, the module builder compacts it into free standing modules, or stacks, on pallets. The module, containing 8-12 bales, moves through the system intact. The module can be stored, retrieved, loaded, transported, unloaded, reloaded and moved again, all in one piece. Finally the module is conveyed automatically into the gin feeder, which breaks up the stack and moves the cotton on into the gin.

While the module builder itself was designed primarily for use in rainbelt areas, it is now winning quick acceptance in arid areas such as the High Plains of Texas, where the most popular method of storing seed cotton in recent years has employed the turnrow rick compactor.

"Even in areas where the cotton rick compactor works fine, the module system will allow gins to enjoy all the benefits of the new automatic gin feeder," said Abel.

Again, Jerry Harris agrees. "We are making extensive use of the module builder this year to stack ricked cotton into modules that can be fed automatically into the gin," he said. "Next year we'll probably go to the module builder and gin feeder system 100 per cent."

In areas where the module builder is used alone, the gin

Texas Magazine, "Dallas Uniques, Antiques & Art" to Change Name, Expand Format and Enlarge Publication Area

The ambush of a Texas Ranger patrol which triggered the bloody Pirate Island feud, historic towns like Salado, Texas artists, antiques and collectables of all sorts and Texans with unique hobbies interest two ex-newspapermen in Dallas more than most people.

The two publish a monthly tabloid magazine about just such things.

The publication, now 15 months old, is about to undergo a name change, from "Dallas Uniques, Antiques & Art" to "Texas Uniques, Antiques & Art", and expand its nostalgic coverage to a statewide basis, Publisher Bob Alexander and Editor Gene Shelton have announced.

"Expanding to state-wide circulation and coverage seems a logical progression," Alexander said, "because several issues of the publication already have taken on a statewide flavor."

The magazine has published lead stories on historic Salado, interviewed a Paris, Texas, flight instructor who teaches pilots how to handle World War II fighter planes, and featured the Pirate Island Feud as the lead story in one edition.

Other major stories in recent issues have explored Texans' interest in religious artifacts, antique furniture, clocks, Wedgwood pottery, glassware, flintlock pistols, old cameras, architectural antiques, nautical antiques, silver, and an examination of the reasons behind the boom in Oriental antique prices during 1973.

The magazine has reported the destruction of historic Texas landmarks and one-of-a-kind buildings in the name of progress. It has also conducted personal interviews with sculptor Gunther Granget; the curator of White House antiques; the Dallas woman who was the voice of Helen rent on early radio; taken a reflective look at the Texas Centennial in a three part series, and interviewed numerous established and promising Texas artists and craftsmen.

The most recent issue features a 20th Century Texas group that reverts to Medieval times on weekends, complete with full armor and pitched battles with sword and broadaxe.

With the expansion to state wide status, Editor Shelton said, Texas Uniques, Antiques and Art will be in need of reporters and correspondents through the state.

"We are sure every reader who likes antiques, collecting, art or has a deep nostalgic interest in any period of history either has a personal story to tell or knows of a good article idea," Shelton said. "We would very much like to hear from them. At the moment our editorial budget is not great, but nominal payments can be made for stories we use."

Subscription rates are $4.00 for 12 monthly issues, Alexander said. Uniques, Antiques, & Art, 2711 Cedar Springs, Dallas, Texas, 75201."

Gin Feeder

feeder is a logical extension of the system, Abel said. It allows gins to handle more cotton without adding capacity, and it practically eliminates most labor problems.

Harris also pointed out that the gin feeder uses standard parts and belts. "Most any gin can be modified very easily to accommodate it," he said.

Abel said Sawyer Engineering of Temple, Texas, made the prototype unit now in use.

Have You A Sod House Heritage?

Did you ever live in a sod house, a dugout, or an adobe building; or were you born in one? Did you ever teach school, attend school or church services in such a building, or help build one? Or are you a child or perhaps a grandchild of a former pioneer sod house dweller or builder?

If you can answer "yes" to any of these questions, the Sod House Society of America, with headquarters at Colby, Kansas, would like to hear from you. The unique society is making a survey and census of people who have had any kind of personal experience with sod structures, including descendants of such persons. Sod houses, dugouts, part sod, and adobe buildings were once common in the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

All former sod dwellers and descendants of a family that can claim a part of the sod house heritage during the pioneer settlement era of North America, or in more recent times, will be listed by the society in a permanent historical record of sod, dugout, and adobe dwellers and their families. Sod buildings in some form were used in well over half the North American continent.

To make this survey a success, information is needed from people in all parts of North America. If you have any information concerning present or former sod dwellers, a report of this will be most welcome. Please tell where the buildings were located, and give family names, as well as your own. Reports should be sent to: Sod House Survey of Texas, Colby, Kansas 67701.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Two weeks ago this next Saturday I spent most of the day until almost dark on Canyon Lake, hoping to stir up bass, walleyes and/or crappie. About all I got for my troubles was sunburn.

It was a hot day, 85 degrees, and the wind steadily increased in velocity during the day. By late afternoon it was getting uncomfortably cool to sit around in a Tee shirt and shorts. We didn't know it at the time, but a front was moving through.

Generally, a front will stir the fish into biting activity. It wasn't the case this time. Other fishermen reported no luck at all, which made our two bass, three crappie string, look better.

The five fish were all caught on minnows in fairly shallow water in brush next to dead trees. Nothing else aroused bites. We gave them a complete variety—surface lures, deep lures, spinners, plastic worms, jigs, spoons, feathered hooks.

Undaunted by the day's failure, we—son-in-law, his parents, grandson—intended to go back Sunday. That night tv said that it would be windy, cold, rainy on Sunday. We looked at each other and heads began shaking. Sure nuff, Sunday was all that and more.

All of which isn't to knock Canyon Lake. It's a big, beautiful body of water with some 80 miles of shoreline. There's a lot of brush in it and it is growing in fishing popularity now.

For a long time Canyon Lake rated low on the scale of popularity because there seemed to be no bass of consequence in it. Experts said that it was because there were no spawning beds available.

Efforts were made to correct this situation and walleyes were added to the lake. Now there are big bass in the lake, and the marinas have pictures to prove it. If you could spend a lot of time on Canyon and get to know it, I imagine the fishing would be great.

A San Antonio paper that Sunday had an unusual story, with picture to prove it. An angler caught an eight-inch bass. As he was bringing it to the boat, another bass struck and the fight was on. When he finally netted his catch, the fisherman was rewarded with a seven and a half pound bass!

Moral: Sometimes we use bait that is too small, but don't expect this to happen all the time, maybe not once in a million.

As a result of the fishing trip, I missed the UCLA-NC State "dream" game. It must have been all that had been expected. As for the finals Monday night, I thought it was a poorly played game.

There were flashes of brilliance by both State and Marquette, but there were far too many turnovers. The NIT final game was much better played and more exciting. It was unfortunate, because the NCAA does have the best teams in the nation competing.

Bob Galt, Dallas Times-Herald sports writer, had an interesting study recently. The most significant thing, locally, is that Tech was the only conference school to support itself in basketball. Galt says Tech cleared $60,000 on the cage program.

At the same time, Arkansas lost $100,000 and Texas dropped nearly $90,000. Everyone else, including hot spots like Houston and SMU, lost money, putting more strain on football, the lone revenue producing sport.

The reason for Galt's article was, of course, the shock that was felt when Texas announced that it would have to have outside financial support after losing $92,871 on sports last year.

Galt found that Arkansas, A&M, Baylor and Tech had made money—and in that order—because of outside contributions. Arkansas raised half a million; A&M $220,000; Baylor $200,000; and Tech, $175,000.

Indeed, Texas is said to have spent $10,000 more on football recruiting this year, although scholarships were more restricted.

The study illustrates the plight that our colleges and universities find themselves in today. Costs have gone steadily up and, as the sports programs have spread out, the expense is enormous.

It wasn't too many years ago that some New Mexico enthusiasts asked the late Dell Morgan what they could do to help Burl Huffman, then football coach at the Albuquerque school.

"Give him $25,000 for recruiting," Dell replied.

The New Mexico people were shocked. "Where," they asked, "are we going to get that kind of money?" Raise it, Dell suggested.

Today, $25,000 would hardly recruit a starting backfield—legally.

Spring football training has started at Tech and there's reason for optimism, if the Raiders can avoid the bugaboo of injuries. An injury-free spring, in view of the large number of players, is almost a necessity.

So far, most stories about Tech spring football have emphasized the losses. Granted, they were big, but there is a large number of replacements with more potential than the players lost.

If the newcomers progress satisfactorily, Tech could have a bigger, more versatile team than the 11-1 team or last year. There's a smattering of experience plus what Jim Carlen says is the best coaching staff in the country.

The combination, with four uninterrupted weeks of work, could be the catalyst for a championship team next fall. Certainly the attitude of this squad should be superior, because Tech still hasn't won a conference title and that is the No. 1 goal.

The baseball season starts today and it really has sneaked up on me, although I've been reading the summaries on the teams. If form is any guide, it could be another zany season.

There are new managers at several spots. There have been a number of trades. Hank Aaron needs two homers to be the all-time champ. And we still have Charley Finely with us.

St. Louis can't get off to such a miserable start two years in a row, so I like the Cards, the Oakland Athletics, the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Mets to be divisional champs.

The Roundup—Former Raider end Frank Ottmer has a son who will probably be a starting tight end at Rice this year. . . . And brother Wallace (Fredericksburg) has a son who was all-district as a junior,

Shallowater Girls 4-H Food Show Winners

Lesa DuLaney, Lynda Maunder, and Lisa Gates swept the County 4-H Food Show winning three of four places in the Junior division. These girls were entitled to go on to the District Food Show held at Texas Tech on Saturday, March 23. All three won blue ribbons, and Lisa Gates and Lynda Maunder were district winners in their respective divisions. Lesa DuLaney exhibited Magic Pumpkin Pie, Lisa Gates had an Asparagus Casserole, and Lynda Maunder made Cheese Dogs. The girls also were judged on their knowledge of food nutrition. Lisa Gates' leader was Mrs. G.W. Gates, Jr., and Lesa DuLaney and Lynda Maunder's leader was Miss Gayle McMenamy.

We also were very proud of the following girls who were blue ribbon winners at the County Food Show: Debra Crowther with a Mexican main dish, Tiffany Billings with potato salad, Jana DuLaney with Macaroni-Cheese Twist with Beef, and Katie Blackmon with Icebox Oatmeal Cookies. Robin McMenamy exhibited Mexican cornbread and Kathy Farris had Old Fashioned Oatmeal Cookies at the local food show. Our appreciation also goes to Mrs. Linda Dabovaney, Mrs. Nancy Nordell, and Mrs. Jim Billings for being the leaders. Others involved in food groups not exhibiting were Sheryl and Sherri Browning, Cheryl Potter, Ricky Conner, and Amy Grimes.

Shallowater School Trustee April 6 Election Candidates

Saturday, April 6, 1974, is the date set for the election of Trustees for the Shallowater School District. Terms of office will expire this year for Bennie James and Jay Stanton. Neither is seeking re-election. Mrs. Pat Cobb, Billy Hart, George Parsley, Joe Randolph, and Butch Pair are the five candidates seeking election for the two positions.

A brief summary on each candidate is as follows: Mrs. Pat Cobb is a 31 year old housewife and has lived in the Shallowater Community for 11 years. Her husband, Clois, is district manager for Gifford-Hill, Inc., Lubbock. The Cobbs have two children, Dee Ann, 6th grade, and Tracy, 2nd grade. The Cobbs are members of the Broadway Church of Christ, Lubbock. Pat has been active in the Shallowater PTA, President, V-Pres., Secretary and Treasurer; also has worked with the 4-H and Brownie Clubs.

She thinks that if a woman were elected to the School Board that she could provide an insight that can not be seen by the other male board members. If she is elected she will do the best for the school as shown in her work with the PTA.

About the teenagers of the school, she says they are not any worse than they were when she was a kid, but probably with a few more problems.

Billy Hart and his wife Joyce, have lived in the Shallowater Community for 11 years. They have three daughters, Rhonda, a 1973 graduate of Shallowater High School; Terry, a junior and Jamie, 6th grade. Bill is 43 years of age and is Senior Plant Operator for the Pioneer Natural Gas Company. They are members of the 12th Street Church of Christ. Bill is a member of the Volunteer Fire Dept. of Shallowater.

The reason Bill decided to run for the School Board was to see exactly how the school was run, to see if some or any improvements are needed. Then he will propose ideas to the solutions of the problems. He said one of the things that makes for a successful school board is for the members to work in unison and not against one another.

George B. Parsley is 44 years of age and is a farmer and realtor. George and his wife, Molly, have four children, Cathleen, a junior; George, a freshman; Lee, 8th grade and Patrick is 10 years of age and attends Heritage Hall School, Lubbock. They have lived in the community for 19 years and are members of the First Christian Church, Lubbock.

He is going into the election with positive thoughts about the board position. He said that the board should be a policy making committee and school administration should carry out the policy of that board. He also believes in open communication between the community and the school board.

He thinks that there is desperate need for special education and vocational courses at Shallowater High School. One of the most important things that the High School should do is to encourage thought and provide students with the knowledge needed to live life.

Joe Randolph is 43 years of age and is a farmer, moving to this community 2 years ago. Joe and his wife, Leta Ann, have four children, Brenda is a senior; Jackie, a Sophomore; Barry, 7th grade and Michael, 4th grade. They are members of the First Baptist Church. Joe is a member of the Shallowater Lions Club.

One reason Joe decided to run was to represent the back side of the district. He said there is definite improvement needed for preparation of students for life after graduation. Improvement needed in the academic studies of the students and more vocational courses in the student curriculum. He would encourage more liaison work between the community and the school board, and between the teachers and the board. The board should interview teachers before they are dismissed. The board should be as specific as possible in defining the job and duties of each department head. The board should set policies on who gets letter jackets, and define the duties of the different managers for the ballteams and for their awards. These should be set by the board so that when new coaches put in new policies, no one will be cheated out of a jacket or award. He believes that once a year a financial statement should be published stating the exact expense and income of the district for the past year. Also a financial projection for the coming year, student wise, income wise, and expense wise, should be included.

Butch Pair is a 29 year old farmer who has lived in the community 24 years. Butch and his wife, Kay, have two children, LaDonna, 6th grade and James Ray is 4 years old. They are members of the First Baptist Church.
