As vegetable crops make good progress in the Hereford-High Plains-Panhandle areas and begin to move to distant consumers, John C. White, commissioner of agriculture, Austin, announced the opening July 1 of the seasonal fruit and vegetable market news office at Hereford.

Moderate shipments of potatoes and onions will begin next week, with heavier supplies available by mid-July. The first bi-weekly market report will be issued July 10, according to John D. Engle, federal-state market news reporter at Weslaco. Movement of West Texas commodities is expected to continue until October 15 or later.

Mr. Engle stated that Greg Morrow will be in charge of the Hereford office, at 104 East First Street.

In addition to potatoes and onions, as harvest progresses and supplies warrant, reports will cover cabbage, peppers, lettuce, carrots and cantaloups from the Pecos district as well as the Hereford area.

The market news service will be provided through cooperation of the Texas Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service.

The Hereford reporting office is a part of USDA's 21,000 mile leased wire system connecting market news offices, which cover most farm commodities. Prices in the Hereford area are available in a matter of minutes to shippers, buyers, haulers or other interested persons in all parts of the country.

In addition to the leased wire service, latest market information may be obtained day or night by dialing the automatic answering service, Area Code 806, 364-0129. This market report will be updated three or four times daily, with a final summary of the day's trading around 5 p.m.

Those interested in receiving printed, mailed reports on fruits and vegetables can be placed on the mailing list by writing the Federal-State Market News Service, P.O. Box 1853, Hereford, Texas 79045.

Shallowater Budget Hearing Set for 16th

There will be a public hearing on the city budget for 1973-74, Monday, July 16, 1973 at 8 p.m. at the City Hall in Shallowater.

United Methodist Church 50th Anniversary Services to Begin in Shallowater August 3rd

We will begin our activities on Friday, August 3, with a banquet, hosted by the Wesley Class. The program will include songs sung from the ten year span of time beginning in 1923. The speaker for this occasion will be Bishop Alsie H. Carleton. He is an interesting speaker and a delightful person. You will enjoy meeting this man if you have not already done so.

Saturday morning, August 4, we will have a coffee honoring our former minister, District Superintendents, their wives or widows.

Each will be given a brief time to tell of the highlights of their ministry at Shallowater. Saturday evening, we will have a Bar-B-Q hosted by the Builders Class. Then will come the pageant under the direction of Burt & Sally Sinclair. This will depict the 50 year history of our church.

Sunday morning we hope to have a former minister, wife or widow in each Sunday School Class. At the Worship Hour, we will have Rev. Cecil Tune bringing the first message and the Rev. Tommy Strother bringing the closing message, thus giving us a former minister and one of our own "preacher boys" a chance to minister to us from the pulpit. The service will be abbreviated so that the time of the service should run about the same. Then we will have dinner in the fellowship hall.

Shallowater Man's Hobby is Building Windmill

Know what always needs doing with a real windmill? Or better yet, do you have any idea what always needs replacing on a "real windmill"?

Well, Mr. O.A. Corckett, retired 71-year-old Shallowater area farmer knows. And not only that, but Mr. Corckett, who, with his wife will be celebrating their Golden Wedding Anniversary this Saturday at Fellowship Hall, not only can answer those questions, but has built his own operating windmill, just about five and a half feet tall.

As Mr. Corckett puts it, "Back in 1970 when we had a few 'wet' days, with nothing to do. Orville (his son) and I put this windmill together. He (Orville Corckett) did most of the cutting and welding and I had been working on the plans for several years, but didn't have time until then to put the idea to work."

O.A. came to the Shallowater area in 1957, and "farmed this section until I was too crippled to do it any more." Before O.A. and Emma moved out to West Texas he had worked on a ranch and his major job had been operating and maintaining the windmills on the spread. His present windmill, which actually pumps water and is equipped with a "clutch" to set th-

The Money

One of the benefits certain to derive from Watergate is better supervision of, and reporting on, money collected in political campaigns. The Watergate affair has shown that the accounting of those who handled the money for the Committee To Re-elect the President left much to be desired.

John Dean, for example, reportedly admits he took some thousands of the money to finance his honeymoon. More recently he has repaid this somewhat unorthodox loan.

Others have unquestionably contributed, to both parties, and failed to accurately report their contributions. In the 1968 campaign, there were certainly strange maneuverings among Democrats. No one knew for a time who would pay for many of the late Robert Kennedy's campaign activities. Finally, the National Committee accepted that obligation. The Democrats tried to renege on a huge telephone bill. There were other sloppy examples of financing and accounting.

Certainly 1973 was the year of the Republicans, if 1968 was the year of the Democrats. What voters are entitled to in the future is careful, and carefully supervised, campaign accounting by both parties, and Congress should enact the necessary legislation to make that a certainty.

U.S. Needs U.S.S.R.

Overlooked by some in the developing detente between Washington and Moscow is the need of this nation for new markets, markets which might be guaranteed by agreements exchanging U.S. technical know-how and development for raw materials such as natural gas, minerals, lumber, etc.

It is too early to know whether vast new markets in Russia can solve part of our international trade problem. It may also be too early to know yet whether we can force the Soviets to ease some of their domestic repressions in return for economic agreements (if we can, well and good, but if we can't these agreements might still be desirable in the national interest).

What is clear is that as the chance of military conflict with the Soviet Union decreases, the logic of mutually beneficial economic arrangements is greatly enhanced. As of the moment, the United States needs new arrangements which are helpful to the dollar, just as the Soviet Union needs help.

Therefore, the nation should be prepared to enter into economic arrangements with Russia which are mutually beneficial. We are aiding such dictatorships of the right as Spain and Greece, plus a host of Latin American dictatorships, plus a dictatorial regime in Saigon. Outrages against human freedom occur in all: there is, therefore, no logic and justification in refusing to deal with Russia, a dictatorship of a different kind, if the arrangements entered into are of benefit to the United States.

Private Schools

In England the Labor Party, led by Harold Wilson, is proposing to do away with what are called, in England, the public schools. These are, in reality, private schools and include such famous schools as Eton, Harrow, etc.

At present in England these schools accommodate about seven per cent of the students, so to abolish them would place an immediate burden on the English school system. Laborites oppose the "public" schools because they turn out a disproportionate number of government and industry leaders, thereby see them as snob schools or schools giving graduates special advantages.

Those defending the schools see them as simply more efficient, doing a better job; there is, of course, much tradition surrounding these famous schools and many prominent families have patronized them for centuries. Surprisingly enough, they are not overly expensive, but it's difficult to obtain entry and impossible if such entrance isn't planned many years in advance.

In America private schools aren't threatened; they have, ironically, expanded greatly in the South, usually where massive integration was ordered. Church schools, however, Catholic schools particularly, have declined in number. Financing has been the Catholic problem, plus the fact that the public schools in America often offer better educational opportunity, more diversified facilities.

A traditional democratic strength and influence in the United States has been the public school, where all come to learn with equal opportunity and treatment. Aside from the metropolitan areas, where private schools have always existed, the public school in America in most rural areas and small towns has been a vital and formative part of our democratic society, and should be.

While one would hope that the public schools in this country would always graduate the vast majority of our students, in an admirable democratic tradition, and with their unifying influence, private schools have a right to exist. They do not, under the Constitution, have a right to public funds for support, which some have sought for them as church schools have faced hard financial times in recent years.

Tennis Boycott

Quite a flap erupted at this year's Wimbledon tennis tournament when male tennis stars voted to boycott the famed event because tournament officials banned a Yugoslav player who had the sympathy of the players.

Tennis pros are now organized into professional groups, thus are able to throw some weight around. And in the case of the player banned at Wimbledon, perhaps the players were right, in insisting he was innocent.

Nevertheless, the main point is that tournament officials should be allowed to run their tournaments. The players, many of whom now profit handsomely from lucrative meets, cannot attempt to decide on the many individual problems which arise at each tennis tournament throughout the world.

Baseball players have recently damaged their game's image by striking and threatening to strike and now come tennis players with their refusal to play. Sports fans in general think these professional athletes live a wonderful, lucrative life. Too much wielding of organized power, too many strikes and use of union like tactics, will almost certainly dim their glow in the eyes of the average fan.

State-Wide Greenhouse Tomato Conference Set in Lubbock

Growers from across the state will gather in the city Sunday evening for a two-day conference on greenhouse tomato production.

Although the topics of scientific papers and informal discussions include such technical information as hydroponics, drip irrigation, and the use of waste heat for increasing soil temperature, the greenhouse producers will have a singular purpose in mind—to learn more effective and efficient methods of growing better tomatoes for the consumer.

The conference gets underway with registration Sunday evening at the Red Raider Inn, site of the event. Registration fee is $25.

Program speakers for Monday and Tuesday include officials and representatives of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas A&M University, and commercial growers and distributors.

Twenty commercial exhibits of greenhouse tomato suppliers will be added attractions.

In addition to formal sessions, a special two-day program for the ladies will include tours of the art collection at First National Bank, the Texas Tech Ranch Museum, and the South Plains Mall. Entertainment at the Hayloft Dinner Theatre, a style show at Hemphill Wells, and a cooking school sponsored by Pioneer Natural Gas Company are also on the agenda for the ladies.

The conference, sponsored by the Texas Greenhouse Vegetable Growers Council, is designed primarily for experienced growers in production and marketing, but is open to all persons interested in greenhouse tomatoes. Cooperating in the annual event will be the Extension Service, the Experiment Station, Texas A&M University, and Texas Tech

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Austin—Annual public hearings to determine auto insurance rates were held here this week (July 10) amid predictions that premiums will drop again this year.

Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie expressed hope that evidence will bring a reduction for insurance buyers in most of Texas' 40 statistical rating territories.

This year's hearing was conducted against a backdrop of new legislation and a price freeze which applies to insurance as well as the usual review of accident frequency, claim cost and inflationary factors.

Laws which must be considered are comparative negligence, repeal of the guest statute, personal injury protection and the new deviation or competitive rating plan.

Texas Safety Association will also ask additional credit for persons completing the defensive driving course. Board rules now allow a 10 per cent reduction in auto insurance rates for those certified as having taken the course.

Meanwhile, House Insurance Committee Chairman Rep. Ben Bynum of Amarillo predicted the average premium will drop 10 to 15 per cent when new rates are set this fall.

Competitive rates may mean drops of as much as 20 to 30 per cent for drivers with good safety records, Bynum said.

"Nobody can definitely state what the final rates will be until the statistics and the impact of new insurance laws are weighed in detail after the hearing," said Christie.

14 More Gas Suits Filed—Atty. Gen. John Hill has filed 14 more suits to recover full market value of royalty gas produced from state lands. The first such suit was filed May 18 against Exxon Corporation.

The state contends it is not limited by long term contracts, nor to any regulated ceiling prices promulgated by the Federal Power Commission.

Defendants, according to state allegations, are selling gas at about 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, or less, while the market value is around 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Suits now filed cover about 80 per cent of all lease contracts involving gas royalties, Hill said.

Courts Speak—A four-year prison term assessed Amarillo former State Rep. Walter Knapp for using $1,200 worth of state-issued postage stamps to buy a used pickup truck was affirmed by the Court of Criminal Appeals, on a three-to-two split vote.

The same court reversed and remanded conviction and 20-year sentence of a Mineral Wells man for alleged delivery of heroin because of testimony concerning beatings by police officers.

A.G. Opinions—Law requiring finance reports by House speakership candidates is clear as to who may and may not contribute, the amounts, extent of expenditures allowed and other matters, Attorney General Hill held.

Department of Public Safety, Hill said in another opinion, is governed by statute which requires certification of accuracy of seller's invoice in purchases through the State Board of Control. Other purchases requiring disbursement by the comptroller from the operator's and chauffeur's license fund must be accompanied by the vendor's certification of the invoice's accuracy in the usual manner, Hill continued.

Appointments—In a major reshuffling, Gov. Dolph Briscoe appointed William T. Keenan of Houston executive director of the Governor's Committee on Aging, replacing Mrs. Carter Clopton of Austin.

Briscoe, at the same time, named Alton O. Bower of Austin chairman of the Committee on Aging.

Other recent appointments by the Governor include:

J.R. Taylor of Amarillo and John Biggs of Vernon to the Animal Health Commission.

Dr. Margaret Cigarroa of Laredo to the Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Dr. Richard Hooker of Austin as gubernatorial school finance advisor.

J.R. Porter of Dallas to Texas Mass Transportation Commission.

Cities Honored—San Antonio, San Marcos, Temple and Lubbock have been designated as national bicentennial communities. The cities are to be recognized nationally during the Bicentennial observance of the American revolution in 1976. Thirteen other communities in Texas will also have bicentennial programs submitted for consideration.

by Joe Kelly

Some 4,015 miles and two weeks later, here I am again, 10 pounds lighter, slightly more tanned, stronger in muscle and wind and counting the days until I can return again to Saranac Lake, N.Y.

It was quite a trip, all things considered. My wife had only rough camped twice before, and each time she had other people than just me for company. I wouldn't have believed it, but she more than held up her end of the trip, from start to finish.

It was pretty when we left, pretty when we returned. And we had almost two perfect weeks in the woods. There was only one rainy day, one day when a thunderstorm stuck and ran while we were fishing on the brook and one night when it rained, but quit by morning.

The weather was almost perfect, warm days and cool nights, never really hot and never real cold. We had one windy day when it blew too much to go bass fishing. Aside from that, it was perfect.

I caught trout, both in Gold Brook and in Pine Pond, where we made our camp. The brook trout ran between six and 10 inches, just real good pan size, so we had enough for dinner and breakfast.

I have to brag on my wife. One afternoon, when we had gone bass fishing, we had no luck. I tried every lure in the tackle box without a strike. I used everything except flies.

Just as we were about to give up, she yelled "I've got something." She did, too, a nice 24-inch, 2-pound Northern Pike. About two minutes later she yelled that she had another. Me? I got sunburned, hot and frustrated, but I bragged on her.

The strange thing is that she caught the pike on a yellow sputterbug, a good bass lure. Jim Whitelaw, a prince of a friend, told me later that when pike are feeding, they'll strike at anything.

Since the pike was too big for the frying pan, and we had no oven, I experimented. I cleaned and scaled the fish, doused it liberally with bacon fat, rolled it in yellow cornmeal and wrapped it snugly in aluminum foil.

I built a hot fire with yellow pine I had sawed and split, let it burn down a little and then put the pike over the bars I had fixed for a grill. We rubbed potatoes in bacon fat, wrapped them in foil and put them in the coals to bake. Then we boiled some corn.

About an hour later, I unwrapped the pike. When I slid the knife along the backbone, the meat literally fell off. It was firm, warm all the way through and tender and juicy. It was a rare meal.

Fishing for trout in Pine Pond is another experience. I was loaned what is called a "Lake Clear Wobbler." Lake Clear is not too far from Saranac Lake and boasts good fishing itself.

The Wobbler—this was a homemade one by Jim—is shaped like a melon quarter and rounded, gold on one side, silver on the other. On the end is a short length of leader with a single trout hook, baited with a worm. You snap your swivel to the opposite end.

Jim rowed his boat offshore about 20 yards and we trailed our lines behind. The wobbler is just about on the bottom and you move slowly over the water, just making a little headway.

Unlike the brook, where you snap your wrist and set the hook as soon as the trout offers, in the pond you let him play it. You'll see the tip bend once, then twice. That's when you set the hook. Most of the time the trout will have pretty well swallowed the hook.

It was a beautiful two weeks in a gorgeous place. Pine Pond is a large body of water, about a mile across and over 100 feet deep on spots. There is no inlet, no outlet, with a sand bottom. The water is crystal clear, unbelievably pure and softer than a powder puff.

It is trimmed by yellow and white pines, white and green birches, firs, balsams, ash and other wood. The water is so high now that there's only one beach left and it is beautiful, soft sand.

Two raccon visited us every night, usually coming around before it was dark. Late in our stay, a snowshoe rabbit became a regular visitor at night. He's the cousin of our West Texas Jackrabbit.

I saw a mink one day on Cold Brook, the first I have ever seen there. He was loping along the bank, saw me, stopped, looked and then loped off. Owls were plentiful at night, along with woods mice. And there is a great variety of birdlife, too.

It's the type of place where you can just sit and drink in the beauty of it all and be happy doing nothing, if you want. Some of the time that's just what we did.

It's great to be back—but I have got a date circled on the calendar for next year already.

Mr. Crockett will be busy Saturday, what with a Golden Wedding Anniversary and everything; but if you have time, and would really like to see a "real, operating windmill" as opposed to those you see sitting in some people's front yard just made to turn and look "pretty" go by and let Mr. Crockett show you his. He has already promised this reporter that he would have the thing greased—that "always need doing with a real windmill"—before anyone else came by to look at it. And incidentally, according to Mr. Crockett, the leather in the "sucker rod" always needs replacing although most people put it off as long as the can.

Communicating With Children
Poor communication is the cause of many misunderstandings between adults and children.

Just because a child doesn't respond immediately to something you've said, don't accuse him of ignoring orders. Often he or she hasn't heard—or comprehended—the directive.

Many youth develop an ability to shut out conflicting or undesirable noises. For example, they can get their lessons done despite a loud radio or record player.

Therefore, parents and teachers should determine whether they have also been "tune out."

Adults wishing to improve a child's listening ability may utilize the following suggestions.

- Minimize misunderstandings, make sure conditions favor good communication.
- Touch the child with a friendly hand on the shoulder or arm.
- Gain his attention by speaking his name clearly and distinctly.
- Wait for the child to respond before continuing the conversation.
- Look him "in the eye" when speaking. If he is small, get on his eye level.
- Speak in a quiet voice. Children are a product of their experiences, if adults yell to gain attention, youngsters learn to do the same.
- Discuss mutual interests.
- Pay attention when the child talks.
- Follow up family trips, outings and activities with "give and take" conversations.
- Children respond favorably when parents and other adults care enough to listen to them. This fosters self-respect, as well as respect for others.
