History Reborn As Buffalo Roam Caprock Canyons

A hot wind blasts across the southern portion of Caprock Canyons State Park as Mike Knezek guides an old army jeep over a gully-washed road.

Winged grasshoppers pop into the topless vehicle and then jump back into the prairie grass, which is lush from recent rains.

"At one time this was probably one of the best areas around to hunt buffalo," Knezek said, while waving a hand to encompass the grassland as well as the red canyons looming to the east.

"More than likely there were groups that traveled up from the coast because this was such an ideal spot."

Hunted to the brink of extinction by the turn of the century, great numbers of buffalo no longer rumble through the areas around the Llano Estacado as they once did.

During pre-settlement times, about 60 million to 70 million buffalo roamed the yawning expanses from the Appalachians to the Rocky Mountains. To those that witnessed the great herds, there seemed to be an endless supply of the great beasts that covered the land like a black furry blanket.

But by 1889, fewer than 600 buffalo remained.

In 1983, park officials reintroduced three buffalo to Caprock Canyons. Over the years the herd has grown to 15, making the park perhaps the best public place to catch a glimpse of the animals in Texas.

Knezek, the park's acting manager, drives a bit further and brings the jeep to a stop near a clearing in the grass.

"There they are," he said.

On this day, most of the buffalo are lounging in a pond created by a windmill pump. When Knezek arrived, most of them lumbered curiously over to the jeep.

Enforcement Of The Law Is For Everyone

by Jerry Beck

Enforcing the law does not necessarily mean to take every violator before the judge. We try to understand why a person violates a law and try to correct the problem without causing the violator any more hardship than is necessary.

State Law requires that any motor vehicle operated upon a public highway display current registration, a valid vehicle inspection sticker and proof of financial responsibility. Most owners do comply with this requirement.

I have had complaints from some who are complying regarding the number who are not. It is easy to overlook an inspection sticker or let registration expire.

Please check to insure that your vehicle is legal as these requirements will be enforced beginning immediately with citations being issued for those not complying.

THEN and NOW!

by Eunice McFall

It seems that there is never a boring time at the McFall residence! Now by that I do not mean a dull moment just that something is always happening to surprise not only us but everyone around us! This past week-end our daughter and her two children came up to spend some time with us. We had no big plans, just to be together and have a little R&R. Saturday, our plans worked out just fine, a very slow paced day with only having to do the usual stuff that you do on a week-end to catch up from the week behind and prepare for the coming week.

I should have known that it was too good to be true—Sunday morning just after breakfast Beth thought she heard water running by the bath. Well, guess what? It was shooting out of the top of the hot water heater. And then it was just sliding down the side of the basement wall and filling the room up so that we would have soon had an indoor swimming pool—of course to swim in it you would have had to swim an obstacle course around boxes, bottles, jars, etc all of the stuff that we tend to put in a basement.

Well believe you, me, we got in high gear then!! You see this happened one other time—it takes forever to get a basement cleaned up from flooding. When we first bought our home, the basement was bad to catch water from outdoors when we had a big rain. We got that problem solved but how do you solve the one of a hot water heater beginning to leak??

Out came the wet/dry vacuum, the old bucket to carry it up the stairs and the hiking shoes to make the steps! After cutting off the water, Sid and our granddaughter finally got the hot water heater tank empty so that it would stop running in the basement. Believe me it takes a while to carry 7 to 10 inches of water in a basement floor up the stairs. If you need to get some exercise—this is a good way to accomplish it—I do not recommend it tho'—too tiring!

Once again living in a small town has its' good points. We called on Randy Powell, the local hardware store owner and he opened up and let us get a heater to install yesterday. Now do you think that you could get someone in a larger town to do this for you on a Sunday afternoon? Probably not, first of all you probably would not know who to call and second if you did you probably could not find them at home. Thanks, Randy for the helping hand.

You know there are times when we wonder if the "modern" conveniences are really worth the hassle! Well on second thought I would not like to go back to heating all the hot water needed in our home on the stove as we have done in the past. Really hate to admit it but I suppose it is worth all of the trouble—if it will only happen about once every 50 years or so!! It does make us stop and think about how much we depend upon "modern" conveniences to keep our households going and how helps we feel when something goes wrong with the normal path of things. Guess we do not count our blessing often enough!

Keeping a Lid on Nutrients

When preparing vegetables, avoid sending valuable nutrients down the drain. Important vitamins and minerals may seep into cooking water and be discarded, said Corinne Montandon, a research dietitian at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.
 The amount of nutrients lost depends on the freshness of the food to begin with and the method of cooking.
 To preserve the nutritional value of foods, Montandon suggests: Shopping frequently and buying only as much fresh produce as you'll need in a few days, cooking foods in the shortest time possible, washing vegetables thoroughly without soaking them, avoiding deep-fat frying, which robs food of vitamins.

Perry Declares Labor Day 'Texas Beef Day'

Calling on all Texans to sink their teeth into a juicy steak or a burger, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry has declared Labor Day—Monday, September 4—Texas Beef Day.
 "Texas is the country's leading beef-producing state, and Labor Day is one of the biggest days of the year for cooking out," Perry said. "I can't think of two better reasons to stamper your butcher with orders for your favorite cuts of Texas beef."
 Perry said plentiful supplies at reasonable prices should encourage consumers to buy beef for the holiday.
 "Beef is a great way to reward yourself on the day set aside to recognize the contribution of working people," Perry said. "You've worked hard all year. Put a steak on the grill, and enjoy your day off."

History Reborn

"They are all pretty friendly," he said, while patting one buffalo. "But you still have to watch it."
 Knezek later recounted a close call with a buffalo when he was working in one of the park's corrals. As he went about his business, he noticed one of the buffalo was following him, watching him from a distance. Knezek would bend over to do something, look up and the buffalo would be staring at him. Then one time when he bent over he felt the side of a horn slap the inside of his thigh and in the next instant he was flying through the air. He wasn't hurt. "but that was way too close of a call," he said with a laugh. "So it is a good idea to be a bit careful."
 Thousands of years ago, the area around the park was a thriving hunting ground. Archaeologists have discovered hunting weapons and scrapers throughout the escarpment. Most likely, the hunters used the cliffs to their advantage—running whole herds off the edge to their deaths.
 The area's claim to being one of the premier hunting grounds was furthered when archaeologists unearthed a bison skull arranged in a ceremonial fashion on top of a network of bones.
 "Only one other arrangement like that has been found in the U. S.," Knezek said. "So it makes it unique."
 In the park, the buffalo are allowed to roam 600 acres. They used to have larger stomping grounds, but park officials began to worry about the damage the beasts could do to cars and campgrounds.

Keeping In Touch

by Mrs. Troy Perkins

More than fifty years ago two college roommates at Texas Tech made a vow to meet at the Sally Port of the Tech Ad Building twenty years after graduation. That was in 1938. Sure enough, Gene Truitt and Troy Perkins, along with their families, met at the appointed time and place.

It was so much fun that they agreed to meet once a year thereafter and invite another roommate, Herman Reeves.

This summer they decided to do something different. The three couples met at the Turkey Hotel on Friday, August 11, 1995. Then they all drove to Quitaque, toured the Caprock Canyons State Park, and ate at the Sportsman Restaurant.

On Saturday morning they made the Doodle Bus Tour up the Caprock and back. It was over the same route that one of the wives, Evelyn Moore Perkins, had traveled many times. She grew up at Gasoline and graduated from Quitaque High School in the class of 1936. She attended Texas Tech and made many trips home and back on the Doodle Bug.

Troy grew up at Whiteflat. He, Gene and Herman started to Tech with a cow, earning their room and board with a family who ran a dairy.

All are retired now. Herman and Hylene live in Anson, where Hylene taught school for many years. Herman is retired but still manages his farming interests around Anson.

Gene and Nina live in Lamesa, where Gene manages his farming interests near Key, east of Lamesa. Nina is a retired beautician.

Troy and Evelyn are both retired school teachers and live in Amarillo. Troy is also a retired farmer, managing land in Randall and Motley Counties. All three couples are active as church and community volunteers.

Labor Day News Release

Labor Day, "A tribute to our past and present workers," but for the many who will celebrate, it is the last three day weekend of the summer.

Whether your plans include a trip to the lake or a trip across the state, Trooper L.B. Snider with the Texas Department of Public Safety reminds motorists that planning ahead could prevent a tragedy in the future.

Trooper Snider, stated that driving while fatigued is one of the leading causes of collisions. Before driving this weekend, get ample rest and allow time for frequent breaks. One of our best defenses against an unsafe driver is the proper use of safety belts, but it's only as effective when all occupants are buckled up.

The Department of Public Safety will increase patrols beginning at 6:00 p.m., Friday, September 1st, and continue through midnight, Monday, September 4th. The troopers are there to help you, the motorist, by offering any assistance needed. They are also there for enforcement of traffic laws and removing unsafe drivers from the roadways. Troopers will be looking hard for intoxicated drivers and others who are out to ruin your Labor Day Celebration.

Trooper Snider went on to say that recreational areas will be extremely busy, so if your travel plans include a trip to the lake, take the time to check your vehicle and trailers. When driving on lake roads, be especially alert. These roads often have no shoulders and can be winding and hilly. With reduced visibility and an increase in large recreational vehicles, our best defense is to stay alert and slow down, allowing more time to react if a hazardous situation should occur.

Cotton News From PCG

by Shawn Wade
Protecting the potential that exists for the 1995 High Plains cotton crop will be no easy task according to Lubbock-based Plains/Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG).

Dr. Jim Leser, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) Entomologist, reports the combined threat posed by late-season build-ups of the boll weevil, beet army worm, bollworms and aphids could become a very costly bullet to dodge for many producers.

Leser warns producers across the area to keep a very close eye on their crop and advises them to step up their scouting efforts for each of these pests. He notes that newly emerging boll weevils are continuing to cause problems for producers south of Lubbock and that several of the counties north of Lubbock that are considered to be "threatened" will have cotton treated for weevils before the growing season ends.

Leser notes that fields as far north as Edmonson, Hale County, and Kress, Swisher county, have already been treated for weevils this year.

Producers are advised to do everything they can to get their fields past the point where weevils can damage their crop or else face the possibility of up to six insecticide applications to get them through.

Anyone who wants more complete information about boll weevil management can obtain a copy of the pamphlet titled "Boll Weevil Management in the West Texas High Plains" from their county Extension Agent.

Leser adds that the threat posed by the beet armyworm is also significant enough that producers will need to keep a close watch on their crops. The key to beet armyworm control is early detection and treatment. Later planted, lush fields or fields with skippy stands are the most vulnerable to this pest.

Routine scouting for boll weevils and bollworms are not adequate for beet armyworms since egg masses are located on the underside of leaves.

He notes that beet armyworm eggclays are currently widely scattered across the entire High Plains region. So far they have not swept across the area with the same ferocity that devastated the Lower Rio Grande Valley or, more recently, the Southern Rolling Plains area around San Angelo.

Further information about the beet armyworm contained in the publication "Management Guidelines for the Beet Armyworm on Cotton" can be obtained from any county Extension agent.

A Section 18 for American Cyanamid's insecticide Pirate has been approved for the High Plains. Whether or not enough of the product will be available for use in the area is still unknown. PCG officials are trying to convince American Cyanamid of the need for this product on the Texas High Plains.

It appears that the next three weeks will be critical as to how this year's crop fairs. The threats posed by insect pests are formidable and it will take a tremendous effort to see this crop through.

Changes In Hunting and Fishing License

The Special Resident Hunting Licenses are available to Residents under 17; Non-residents under 17; residents 65 and older and qualified resident disabled veterans for $6.00.

Special Resident Fishing Licenses are available to residents who turn 65 after August 31, 1995; exempt anglers wanting a bonus red drum tag; residents who are legally blind; qualified resident disabled veterans and residents w/Gen. Res. Comm. Fishing license for $6.00.

Exempt anglers not required to have fishing license/stamps are residents who turn 65 before September 1, 1995; residents and non-residents under 17; Kansas and Louisiana residents 65 and older and Oklahoma residents 64 and older.

General non-resident hunting is $250.00. Non-resident special hunting is $100.00. Non-resident 5-day special hunting is $35.00. Non-resident Spring Turkey Hunting is $100.00 and Non-Resident fishing is $30.00.

Remember, anyone required to purchase a license must also purchase necessary stamps.

Can You Find The Drug Dealer In This Picture?

You live in a nice middle-class neighborhood. You don't see drug dealers on the corner. Your kids are only in grade school. Why worry? Because drug dealers don't necessarily look like the ones on television. In fact, studies show that your kids are more likely to be pushed into using drugs by someone their own age - someone they think is their friend.

So tell your children that anyone who offers them drugs is not a friend. Next, be an informed parent. Call 1-800-269-4237 and ask for a free booklet called Growing Up Drug-Free - A Parent's Guide to Prevention. Then and this is really important - get to know your kids' friends. And their parents. Because with you in the picture, chances are a drug dealer won't be.

Thursday Sept. 9 THE 3RD WAR LOAN DRIVE STARTS

-TO BACK THE INVASION!
Mark well the date—Thursday, September 9th. For on that day, you must answer to your country's call.

To meet the national quota, every individual in the country who earns a wage or draws an income or has accumulated funds must invest, if he possibly can, in at least one EXTRA $100 War Bond. Those who can must invest in MORE bonds—hundreds and thousands of dollars' worth more.

Scrape up the money from every source you can...turn in all the loose cash you carry with you...dig out what you had tucked away "just in case." Go without pleasures, luxuries, even necessities this September. And give our fighting men the things they need to fight with—and win.

These men are throwing everything they have into this fierce invasion push. They are giving their blood, their lives. No one can put a price on such courage, self-sacrifice, devotion. But you can show you're with them to the limit! You can say it with Bonds...Extra Bonds this month.

COTTON SLOWLY COMING IN PICKERS NEEDED BADLY

Cotton picking is getting under way and a few bales are rolling to the gins, however the supply of hands is decidedly short which is greatly retarding the harvest.

Most farmers have cotton to pick and are ready to get started if they can get pickers. Some have had cotton ready for picking for some time but prospective pickers would not brave the unseasonable heat and go to the fields.

With cooler weather which was ushered in along with the rain and a slight norther, crews are making their appearance in some of the fields but as yet many farmers who have lots of cotton open have been unable to find pullers.

Should cotton pickers become available, harvesting the crop should be in full swing in a couple of weeks.

Nothing reveals a man's character better than the kind of joke at which he takes offense.

Furadan 4F Cleared For Aphid Control

by Rebel L. Royall

Furadan 4F was cleared for use for aphid control in cotton in Briscoe County on Monday, August 21, 1995. There is no doubt that Furadan is an excellent aphid control material and is one of the least expensive approaches but it does have a downside from the standpoint of worker reentry restrictions.

Absolutely no one is to enter a Furadan-treated field for the first 48 hours following an application, regardless of personal protective equipment (PPE). After the two day restricted access period there is still 12 more days in which PPE must be used. This includes coveralls, chemical resistant gloves and shoes and socks. Coveralls can be one or two piece and do not need to be chemical resistant. Therefore, a long sleeve shirt and long pants would suffice.

The only exceptions to the remaining 12 day restricted entry provisions would involve those that monitor cotton for plant mapping or insect scouting. These folks are not required to wear protective clothing.

Beet Army Worms Found In Cotton

by Rebel L. Royall

Beet armyworm activity is on the rise as more egg masses are found. While most earlier activity has been concentrated in the more southern acreage, light infestations are now becoming more evident in northern areas. Some activity has been reported near Quitaque and south of Silverton.

Art, if it is to be reckoned as one of the great values of life, must teach men humility, tolerance, wisdom and magnanimity. The value of art is not beauty, but right action.

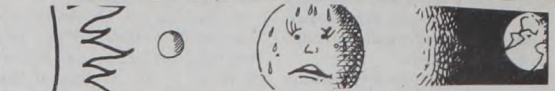

—W. Somerset Maugham

This pest is extremely hard and expensive to control. Costs range from $18 per acre on up for a single application. Control has averaged no more than 70% in most cases. The threshold for worms is probable somewhere between 12,000 to 15,000 per acre. Infestation levels can often reach in the hundreds of thousands per acre. This would mean that a single application would rarely provide adequate control once worms are established. Good coverage and higher spray volumes are required for adequate control.

One approach to managing beet armyworms is to use the early detection threshold. This relies on detecting hatching egg masses. When 2 hatching egg masses are found per 100 row feet examined, multiple applications of the insect growth regulator Dimilin may provide the best approach to avoiding high worm counts and high damage potential.

Sequential application of 4-8 ounces of Dimilin per acre should be used, on a 5-7 day schedule. At least 8 ounces may be needed per acre by the time multiple applications have been completed against heavy egg laying pressure. This is an expensive program but may wind up with the best results.

Once high numbers of beet army worms become well established in cotton, they are extremely difficult and expensive to remove.
