Doris Morgan, Administrator of Hall county Hospital, Tuesday morning notified Board Chairman Pat Godfrey of her intent to resign, but Mrs. Morgan did not submit her letter of resignation at that time.

"I have been offered a job opportunity too good to pass up, working with a consultation and management firm in health care services on a national scope," Mrs. Morgan said Wednesday when interviewed by Editor

Bill Combs of The Memphis Democrat.

"I wanted to let the Hospital Board know as soon as possible to give them time to plan for securing a replacement, because I don't want to create hardships,"

Mrs. Morgan said.

Yard Of Month Award Given To Harmons

R.J. and Lolla Belle Harmon were the recipients of the June Yard of the Month recognition by We the Women. The Harmons have managed to turn an unused, unkept and neglected yard into a lovely lawn, neatly trimmed with numerous plants blooming.

Their backyard is an inviting spot with a seating area enclosed by climbing roses on trellises.

There are many beautiful yards in Quitaque and our people deserve a pat on the back for their efforts in making our community so attractive.

A special recognition and appreciation goes to David Brunson and his crew at City Hall for keeping the parks and Community Center looking so well kept. The recent rains truly makes Quitaque a garden spot and we are proud of our community.

Buck Chadwick has managed to make Valley School one of the most attractive in the state with the trees beginning to get a lot of growth and the well manicured grass. It's worth a drive out by the school to see it in its "Sunday Best".

Let's Talk Turkey
by Thelma Gafford

With everyone going on vacation, I couldn't help but remember ours. We had planned all year long to go camping, live among the wild, fish and hike to our heart's content.

There's a lot of work goes into just getting ready for a vacation, on the woman of the house, I mean. Besides the planning and juggling, you have to keep the washer and dryer going 24 hours for two days before leaving. The mowing is done between cycles. You're trying to keep everything done up, yet it piles up instead.

You know the exact time you plan to leave... early, early. I've never known why we always have to leave EARLY, but we do. Anyway, the night before, everyone is running around the house almost naked, because the last load of laundry is going. No one can cook, because Mom won't have time to clean the kitchen in the morning, so we all eat snacks. For two days, we eat junk food. Forget sleeping in the beds, no one has time to wait for you to straighten beds.

It finally arrives, the morning to go on vacation... you oversleep... of all the times to get up late. That's worse than oversleeping the first day of school. But not to worry, everything is done up, the house is all clean, we slept on the floor, so the beds are all made, the yard is mowed, and all the laundry is caught up, even the ice chest is packed and ready. We're running late, everyone is racing around trying to get the old truck loaded.

A light sprinkle begins to fall... and wait... you can't find the strings to tie the bed rolls, someone (certainly not me) had left open the plug on the ice chest. Mud is being tracked through the clean house as everyone is still trying to load all the stuff. The shower turns into a downpour, everyone changes clothes and shoes, because they're drenched. The cat and dog are scared of the storm, so the kids bring them in and wrap them in the sleeping bags, so not to dirty your clean house.

Finally the rain stops. It's early

Tips For Dieting In The Real World

How To Stop "Unconscious" Eating
by Audrey Blumenfeld,
R.D., M.P.H.

Want to know my secret for staying slim? Stop dieting! Instead, be aware of when you eat, what you eat, how much you eat and why you eat. Then you'll be on the way to permanent weight control.

Be sure you are eating only when it's appropriate and not when you feel sad, lonely or bored. Learn to recognize the "cues" that put your appetite on automatic pilot. For example, do you always eat when you're watching TV, taste test while making dinner or head for the refrigerator for a late night snack?

It's easy to fall into these routines, but you can break these reflex habits. First, become aware of the activities or moods that set off your emotional appetite. Then find activities that can take the place of eating. And when you just can't resist the urge to munch, eat less fattening foods: chew a crisp apple, eat unbuttered popcorn or try an appetite suppressant gum, such as Stay Trim™ Diet Gum. It will help curb your appetite while it satisfies your urge to chew.

Few of us can pass up the dessert cart at a fine restaurant or say no to a friend's birthday cake—and you shouldn't have to. If you eliminate the foods you eat "unconsciously," you can enjoy a special treat without feeling guilty.

If you're trying to lose weight but find most diet plans too restricted, try my "Real World Diet." You'll enjoy taco salad, sweet & sour chicken, even French toast—all for just 1200 calories a day. A sample day's menu follows.

If you would like a free copy of the seven-day plan, write to Stay Trim Diet Plan/DPN, 303 East Wacker Drive, Suite 1214, Chicago, IL 60601.

Minimum Wage For Hoe Hands Applicable Now

Chemical herbicides and advanced tillage systems not withstanding, hand hoeing remains a necessary expense in High Plains cotton production.

And that leaves producers with the formidable task of understanding a maze of ever changing federal and state laws regulating farm labor, including hoe hands.

Dominating the hoe questions reaching Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG), Lubbock officials note, are those related to minimum wage requirements, social security, unemployment compensation and worker's compensation coverage.

"We answer as best we can by telephone," says PCG executive vice president Donald Johnson, "then follow up by mail with an updated two page written summary prepared last year by the Texas Cotton Ginners Association."

Also answering the demand for information on farm labor laws is the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX). State extension economist Dr. Richard A. Edwards of College Station has just compiled a Texas Farm Labor Handbook spanning 52 pages.

The TAEX publication offers expanded explanations of the subjects mentioned earlier plus 17 others including housing, transportation, income tax withholding, requirements under the Immigration Reform and Control Act, and the new Texas "Right to Know" law concerning chemical usage.

Copies are available to producers from PCG or through county extension agents.

Meanwhile, PCG offers the following unofficial guidelines on the most salient issues.

The minimum wage, $3.35 per hour is applicable to virtually all Texas employers of farm labor. Federal law exempts users of fewer than 500 man-days of labor during any quarter of the previous year.

But a Texas law effective Sept. 1, 1987, provides no such exemption. Farm labor, however is exempt from overtime under both federal and state statutes.

Social Security Administration News

There are special provisions in the Social Security law designed to encourage blind and disabled supplemental security income (SSI) recipients to try to work. These provisions allow recipients to attempt to work without fear of losing all their SSI checks or Medicaid coverage. Also, recipients whose SSI checks were stopped because their earnings made their income too high to receive checks again if they find they no longer are able to work.

Recognizing that a disabled recipient's return to work may not follow a steady progression, the law allows the recipient to use SSI as a stepping stone to employment. Recipients may continue to receive some money from SSI while testing their ability to work. The amount received depends on the amount of earnings—as earnings increase, the SSI payments decrease or stop. A recipient who finds his or her work attempt is unsuccessful, however, may have payments started again—often without filing a new SSI application.

In addition, many blind and disabled recipients can keep their eligibility for Medicaid coverage even when their checks stop because their earnings make their income too high to continue receiving checks. To keep Medicaid coverage, a recipient must continue to be blind or disabled, meet all other non-earnings SSI eligibility requirements, depend on Medicaid coverage to continue working, and be unable to purchase similar medical care.

Blind or disabled recipients who work also are encouraged to develop a "plan for achieving self-support." This plan allows them to set aside income and/or resources for a work goal and can mean an increased SSI payment. Some examples of work goals include education, vocational training, starting a business, or purchasing work-related equipment.

Many people wait longer than necessary to get payment from their Medicare medical insurance because they fail to submit itemized bills with their request for payment form.

Medical insurance is the part of Medicare that helps pay for doctor bills, out patient hospital services, and other items and services not covered by hospital insurance.

To receive payment under medical insurance, a person generally submits a request for payment form and the doctor or other supplier provides an itemized bill to send with the form.

The trouble is, that often the bill does not provide enough information about the services provided and, therefore, a decision cannot be made as to whether they are covered. As a result, the patient must be contacted for more information and payment is delayed.

To prevent this delay, the person should be sure that each bill shows: a description of each service provided, the date the service was provided, the place the service was provided, the charge for each service provided, the doctor or supplier who provided each service and the person's name and health insurance claim number exactly as they are shown on the person's Medicare card. It is helpful if the diagnosis is also shown.

For more information or to file a claim, call 293-9623.

Social Security News

Most people who have business dealings with Social Security handle their own affairs with some help from Social Security personnel. So our aim is to make certain that those entitled to benefits get them, and we even help applicants establish their right to them.

However, a person who wishes to be represented in his or her dealings with Social Security may arrange for this. The representative may be a lawyer or any other qualified person. Social Security personnel are prepared to assist by providing a list of legal service organizations, such as the Legal Aid Society or the State or local bar association, from which the names of attorneys may be obtained.

There are some limits on who may represent a person in his or her dealings with Social Security. First, the representative must be an individual, not a corporation or organization.

Second, a person cannot act as a representative if he or she has been prohibited from engaging in such activities because of having violated provisions of the Social Security law.

Third, under certain conditions a current or former employee of the Government may not be able to act as a representative. Further details about this restriction may be obtained from any Social Security office.

Once a representative is decided upon, the appointment must be made in writing. A form for this purpose is available at any Social Security office. The representative's authority ends when final action is taken in the case or when the person being represented asks that it end.

For more information or to file a claim you may call us at 293-9623.

SSI CHANGES

Recent legislation has made a number of changes in the supplemental security income (SSI) program that can help people with little income and resources, according to Frances Braden, Social Security representative in Vernon.

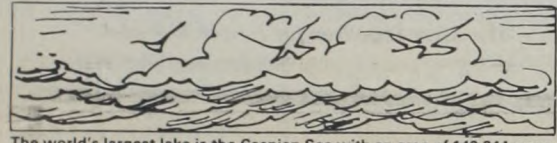

"One of the changes makes it easier for people to get emergency help and to move in and out of institutions without losing SSI payments," Braden said.

As of July 1, 1988, recipients who enter certain institutions for temporary stays of up to 3 months may continue to receive their full payments. These institutions are public medical treatment facilities and public or private facilities which receive Medicaid payments on behalf of the SSI recipient. Under prior law, people in these situations were ineligible for SSI or could receive only a personal needs allowance.

Another provision increases the personal needs allowance for the SSI recipient in a medical institution where Medicaid pays half or more of the care from $25 to $30 a month. It is effective July 1, 1988.

Footnotes

The Eyes Have It

Do your dress shoes wear out faster than a marathon runner's? Maybe you aren't spending enough time inspecting your selection carefully before your purchase. Footwear is a fashion investment, so check the construction of the shoes carefully to make sure you're getting the best your money can buy. Here are some tips from The Italian Shoe Center:

- Look for quality leather with an even smooth texture, free of irregularities in color and finish. Test to see if the leather is soft and pliable by flexing and touching the shoe.
- An inner layer of fabric absorbs moisture and keeps the foot comfortable.
- Check the smoothness of the stitching, which should be fine and regular, especially above the toe.

What a Change! We have people hollerin' "I don't need any more rains"! Two weeks ago, the same was hollerin' "It ain't ever gonna rain," but that's the way it goes in West Texas and the low rolling Plains. . . we'd better be glad for every drop we get, we've still got half of July and all of August ahead!

The National Football League is getting underway with their training camps and the first thing we hear is strike-strike-strike. . . I thought that was a baseball term, but the NFL uses it more than a baseball umpire. . . unsigned players, hold-outs, lawsuits, million dollar salaries, agents, pensions, soaring ticket prices. . . everything except playing football. . . someday the fans may get a belly-full and write the whole thing off and start playing marbles!

A young man from the old school was asking the father of his girlfriend for her hand in marriage. The father, also from the old school, asked, "Can you support a family?"

"I think I can," said the young man, "May I ask how many is in her family?"

The elderly lady, riding a bus, was very anxious not to pass up her destination, so she poked the bus driver with her umbrella. . . "Is this the First National Bank?" she asked.

"No ma'am," he replied, "That's my backbone!"

A man suffering from anemia found a new Doctor who loaded him up with Iron Pills and Iron Shots and was asked how he was feeling. . . "Oh, I'm feeling much better," he said, "so long as I am facing the North!"

All Hell will break loose in about a week when the Democrats get to Atlanta for the Convention. . . Dukakis, Jackson, Gore, Kemp, Bentsen, Dole, N.O.W., MADD, Haig and a dozen others, some of whom we have never heard. . . It's being called the "Jackson Express" . . . tune in your TVs, you'll have fun!

We may not be getting along as well as we are led to believe. . . Coca Cola still outsells champagne.

The Democrats rate Reagan's Foreign Policy as "fair to meddlin'!"

"Now" said the TV announcer, "before I bring you tonight's cost-of-living report, we'll take time out for you to take a sedative!"

Things are different nowadays. . . recently when the teacher informed her young class that, tomorrow we will learn to draw. . . the next day, 16 kids showed up with pistols!

The sexes will never be equal and menfolk might just as well get used to it!

The Town Loafer says his life is an open book, and his wife is the editor!

"Are you the barber who cut my hair the last time?" asked the teenage boy.

"It couldn't have been me," said the barber, "I've only been here three months!"

A local golfer said he had a hole-in-one on the eighth hole the other day. . . the only trouble, he was playing the seventh!

That's -30- for this time, remember, everything in this world is subject to gravity except prices!

Neighborhood Watch Programs Encouraged

College Station - Think prevention to reduce cattle rustling and other types of rural crime.

This advice comes from Tommy Valco, agricultural engineer-safety with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Cattle rustling is big business and it is on the increase. So are thefts of other rural property, ranging from tractors to ranch gates, trailers, saddles and bale carriers," Valco said.

The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association announced that during the fiscal year which ended March 1, field inspectors who are certified peace officers had recovered 4,050 head of cattle - including steers, bulls, cows, heifers, calves and yearlings - valued at $1,844,000.

Jody Henderson of Fort Worth, head field inspector with the Cattle Raisers Association, said that other stolen property recovered this past year by TSCRA inspectors include 97 horses with a value of $94,000; 19 trailers worth $40,000, and 94 saddles valued at $56,000.

"Total value of all the livestock and equipment recovered by field inspectors with assistance of brand inspectors of TSCRA was $2,034,000," Henderson said.

Measures can be taken to prevent or reduce thefts, said Valco and Henderson.

"Rustlers choose a target by looking for isolated pastures or feedlots, unlocked corrals and loading chutes, unbranded animals and animals and absent owners," Valco cautioned. "Professional thieves may spend weeks observing a potential site, so when they make their move it may take less than 10 minutes," Valco said.

Valco recommended that owners check their livestock frequently and mark their animals. A permanent brand, tattoo or other marking system is essential for identification of stolen livestock. Report missing stock immediately, Valco said, since rustlers move stolen property fast.

"The criminal who steals farm equipment, supplies and products is always on the lookout for easy opportunities. By causing the thief to take more time, make more noise and become more visible as he attempts to steal items will greatly reduce his opportunities," Valco said.

Identifiable belongings make less desirable targets, so Valco advised stamping, engraving or welding identification on farm and ranch equipment and supplies. Advertise the fact with "Operation ID" stickers, he added.

"Chain it, disable it or enclose it to prevent theft. If a thief wanted to work, he'd get a job," Valco said.

In addition, make farm and ranch belongings highly visible by lighting, location to the farmstead, or where a neighbor can keep an eye on the materials. Highly visible belongings make for highly visible crimes, Valco said.

"Organize a Neighborhood Watch Program. One or two members can monitor suspicious activities and keep in touch with a base station and police through citizen's band radios," Valco said.

In communities that have adopted a "citizen's watch program," crime has been greatly reduced, Valco reported.

When cattle are reported stolen, Henderson requests a color description, identification number or brand, class - whether purebred or crossbred, age and sex of the animal, and the owner's name, telephone and mailing address. This information is put in the computer and sent immediately to auction markets of the entire area.

"Generally, the stolen animals often are found at an auction barn several hundred miles from the theft site. Sometimes, they are discovered at a sales barn in an adjoining state," Henderson said.

"It is vital to get information about the stolen animals to field inspectors with the TSCRA of the immediate area as quickly as possible," Henderson said.

POINTERS FOR PARENTS

By Ann C. Grandjean, Ed.D.
Director of The International Center For Sports Nutrition

Is There A Right Diet For Young Athletes?

Just as there is more than one way to tie a knot, there is more than one way to eat. Since no one food or group of foods contains all the nutrients the body needs, it is important to eat a variety of foods. Diets can vary greatly. As long as the diet provides adequate energy (calories) and supplies the 50-plus nutrients the body needs—it's the right diet for you.

Young athletes who eat a varied diet on a daily basis may find they decrease their "down time," feel better, train harder and are in better condition than those who do not eat properly.

Since active children and teens need more calories for their body size than their parents, several meals and snacks a day will provide the calories, vitamins and minerals they need to be strong and healthy.

"Eating on the Road" Are you planning a vacation and worrying about all the "junk" food your family may eat while traveling? Fast foods are not all bad. Many so-called "fast foods" provide a balanced meal which includes all of the four food groups. It's up to you to make wise choices among these foods to help reduce total calories, fats, sodium, and sugar while getting a balanced diet.

Some of the foods which provide servings of all four food groups - meat/protein, milk, bread, and fruit/vegetable - are tacos, pizza, cheese burgers, and seafood salads with crackers. Get in the habit of looking at a meal from the standpoint of the four food groups, and make sure you have a balance of these foods during the day.

Reduce fats and calories by reducing or omitting salad dressings or mayonnaise from salads, sandwiches or hamburgers. If you receive a pre-packaged salad dressing with a salad, don't use all of it. There may be several hundred calories in that little package.

When you stop for something to drink, buy lemonade, fruit juice, or just plain water instead of carbonated soft drinks.

When the urge for candy bar strikes, try ice cream, fruit, nuts, or peanut butter crackers for a more nutritious snack.

If you have the choice of a baked or fried potato, select a baked one and omit or reduce the butter and sour cream.

If you are traveling through an area which has fresh fruits or vegetables, stop at a roadside stand and take advantage of these low-calorie, nutritious foods. On our recent trip, we bought vine ripe tomatoes and fresh peaches - DELICIOUS!

Eating out on a vacation can be expensive, so make your food dollars buy the most nutritious food possible.

I see all ages - from babies to senior citizens - at the fast food chain restaurants. Most of us are getting in the habit of having "food in a hurry". Many of these restaurants also realize that Americans are demanding more nutritious food choices, and they are making more options available to meet the consumer's needs.

Have a healthy, happy vacation by eating wisely as you travel down the road.

During the Middle Ages, the year began at various dates in different times and places. In England it was not until 1751 that January was restored to its place as first month, as it had been during the Roman era.
