Decision Time For Cotton Farmers

Lubbock-Price variability is a major source of risk facing cotton producers, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The producer cannot control the price, but he can control when he prices and how," said Dr. Jackie Smith, Extension economist and management specialist.

Knowing when to "price" his crop is one of the most difficult decisions farmers make all year, said Smith. South Plains cotton farmers are currently having to make such decisions. They can price their cotton now, at some time before harvest, or wait and sell after harvest.

Typically, farmers are in a better position to manipulate the factors that determine yields than the factors that determine prices, noted Smith.

For the first time in two years, area cotton farmers have the opportunity to sell new crop cotton above loan. To utilize this opportunity, Smith suggested that the farmers use the futures market to place a hedge, utilize options, or take advantage of available forward cash contracts.

The most often-used method on the South Plains is the cash sale at harvest, said Smith. This method is likely to require only limited storage and other selling costs but the price received is dictated by the market at the time of the exchange and selling at harvest is not likely to result in the season's high price.

He noted this is the easiest way to market and may be considered safe by some farmers but is actually a high risk strategy. If the producer is able to delay sales until after harvest, he has the alternative of using the "hold and hope" method. This enables him to speculate on price and hopefully receive payment which will more that offset storage and handling fees.

The decision South Plains cotton farmers are now faced with is whether or not to use one of the methods of forward pricing currently available to them, said Smith. These methods include: 1) cash forward contracts, 2) hedging in the futures market, and 3) hedging with commodity options.

"For farmers to understand how they can reduce their price risk, they must understand the alternative marketing strategies available to them," said Smith.

Cash forward contracts are currently being offered, and can be used to lock in a price, said Smith. The forward cash contract makes sense if the producer expects prices to fall before harvest or if he is not willing or able to take much risk. Cash forward contracts are usually based on the futures market. Locally available contracts have yielded a price 10 to 15 cents over loan during the past two weeks. He said many farmers like this method of pricing their cotton because it normally shifts the basis risk to the buyer.

Hedging in the futures market allows the farmer to forward price his cotton (con't on pg 2)

TDA Boosts "Country Crafts" For Rural Areas Of Texas

by Lynda Fogerson

Have you wished for a way to market your crafts to others outside the county? We have many talented craftsmen and women who now have the opportunity to advertise statewide.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is seeking ways to boost income in rural areas. One way to do this is to help families take advantage of their won craftmaking talents - from quilt-making to woodcarving, or from doll-making to needlework.

The program, called Country Crafted Texas, is designed to link up rural artisans with urban markets. TDA in conjunction with the Texas Farm Crisis Hotline will print an attractive promotional directory listing rural artisans and the types of crafts they make. This directory will be distributed to the press, marketers and interested consumers.

TDA will also offer Texas rural artisans various opportunities to exhibit their crafts in high-traffic shows. Some will be featured at the State Fair in Dallas in October. Austin's Sami Show has agreed to "adopt" country artisans and to show and sell their wares, for a small commission on sales.

This program is open to rural artisans from areas outside the city limits of towns of 25,000 or more. You must be a Texas resident working in your own home or studio. Your handcrafted material must be original (no kits or commercial patterns.) You need to be able to reproduce your crafted items for sale (retail, wholesale, or commission). Due to state health regulations, food items cannot be accepted.

I have a supply of brochures with this information and a postage paid reply form for your use. Call me at 823-2343 or come by my office in the Courthouse basement if you are interested. If you know someone you think needs this information, call and let me know and I will mail a brochure.

We are continually seeking ways to promote the county and the skills we have to offer. This is another opportunity to bring recognition and income to the people in the county. Why not investigate this chance to publicize and sell your personal creativity.

"Turkey"

by Curtis Tunnell

Back when the streets of Turkey were being paved down through the main part of town, some of the dirt had to be removed from the street. This was done by a walking turning plow, pulled by two extra large horses then hauled out by a friso operated by hand and also pulled by the horses.

The Ozark trail monument stood in the middle of the street and had to be removed before the paving took place, as it weighed several tons and no heavy machinery to move it with. It was decided to dig a large hole in the street and bury it, which they did. The monument was built back about 1920 by a committee from Oklahoma and the two closest ones still standing is by the old Tampico store building about seven miles east of Turkey and one at the court house square in Tulsa.

Before the street was paved, telephone poles had been put in front of the stores by the side walk on the north side of the street, and about twenty wires to each pole. The wires went to a central office where an operator was on duty twenty four hours a day. One night a norther and snow storm blew in from the north and laid all the poles down in the street. This caused the telephone company a lot of trouble but the poles and wires were removed and put in the alley.

During this time Turkey had no street lights but installed a light on top of the water tower which had a three thousand watt blub and ever night was like a moonlight night in Turkey. The West Texas Utilities furnished the electricity free of charge.

through futures market transactions. The economist noted, hedging is not speculation, but a strategy to reduce the price risk. He said farmers should be able to "lock" in a slightly higher price with this method but they need to have an understanding of the mechanics of hedging and realize they are still subject to basis risk.

Hedging in the futures market reduces the risk of a price decline but, like cash contracting, it also eliminates any possible gains from a price increase said Smith.

To manage price risks, the farmer should consider the full range of marketing alternatives, noted the economist. This includes the newest pricing tool available - commodity options. Options offer a type of insurance against adverse price turns that require no margin deposits and allows buyers to participate in favorable price moves. Because of the premiums to be paid for the options, the cotton farmer will not likely be able to "lock" in as high a price as he might with a regular hedge, but he does not give up the opportunity, to benefit from a favorable price change, said Smith.

Smith noted that there are several marketing strategies to consider. One that might be attractive to some is using a cash forward contract to sell cotton and call option to protect the deficiency payment. Some producers that have not yet priced their cotton have already used call options to protect their deficiency payment.

Smith stressed that producers should at least contact a cotton buyer or commodity broker to find out what is being offered. Cotton farmers can currently price their cotton above loan, but if they think cotton prices will hold through harvest, there is no reason to be out the additional costs involved in forward contracting.

Answers from Experts at Newton's Apple
THE MAN OF MOTION

Q. Did Sir Isaac Newton really discover gravity when an apple fell on his head?

A. Not quite. Historians believe Newton discovered gravity when he saw an apple fall—but not on him, report researchers from Newton's Apple. Later, Newton showed in his Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy that a force of attraction exists between any two bodies wherever they may be in the universe; the gravitational force of the sun keeps the planets in their orbits, just as the gravitational force of the earth attracts the moon (and an apple!) he also discovered secrets of light and color.

Social Security News

By Terry J. Clements
People who plan to apply for monthly Social Security retirement, survivor, or disability benefits can help speed the process if they are well prepared at the time they apply.
The applications are designed to obtain information about the worker, spouse, children, and work history, including military service and railroad employment. Applications for disability benefits also record information about the person's disabling condition.

A person will need certain documents to support his or her claim. Only original copies of documents or copies certified by the issuing agency can be used. Uncertified photocopies are not acceptable.

Some or all of the following documents may be required in a particular case: Birth certificate, proof of military service, W-2 form or self-employment tax return for the more recent year, proof of marriage, proof of divorce, children's birth certificates, and death certificate if applying for survivor benefits. People applying for disability benefits should have information about their work history and information about the sources that treated them for their medical condition.

A person should not delay applying for benefits because he or she does not have all the required evidence. People at the Social Security office may be able to suggest alternatives.

When possible, a person should apply 2 or 3 months before he or she wants benefits to begin. This will allow plenty of time to process the claim so checks will start on time.

People do not have to visit a Social Security office to apply. They can take care of this by telephone, or they can call to set up an appointment. You may contact us at 1401-B West 5th, or call us at 293-9623.

A $10 deposit is required to guarantee reservations.

Interested participants should contact Wayland's International Occupational and Lifelong Learning Center at (806) 296-5521 as soon as possible.

The first illustrated daily newspaper in the United States was the New York Daily Graphic, 1873.

College Slates Secretaries Workshop

Advance registration is now open for Wayland Baptist University's 23rd annual Church Secretaries' Workshop, slated for July 23-25.

Gayle Hilligoss, president of Success Systems, Inc., in Lee's Summit, MO., will keynote the three-day meeting for the third year in a row. Hilligoss' company is a consulting firm providing ministry resources and seminars to Christian professionals across the nation.

The workshop is annually one of Wayland's most popular summer events and one of the longest-running seminars of its kind in the country. Last year's event attracted some 115 participants from all across the Southwest.

The workshop is designed to advance the skills of all church secretaries, both full- and part-time, regardless of the size or denomination of their church.

This year's program will include sessions in business communications, telephone etiquette, planning a church reception, newsletters and mail-outs, and what the pastor expects.

The workshop will begin at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, July 23, and conclude at noon Saturday, July 25.

Registration fee is $63 per person and covers meals and housing as well as the workshop.

The five most popular sports activities for American adults are swimming, fishing, bicycling, bowling and running.

Don't Mess With Texas!

Don't Mess With Texas, the first anti-litter program in the country to target habitual litterers, has received two of the most prestigious national awards in the advertising industry.

First, the American Marketing Association of New York honored the highway department's advertising campaign with a gold Effie. The Effie recognizes the highest achievement in advertising: superior results.

Then, the American Advertising Federation awarded the program a national Addy as one of the year's best advertisements. The national Addy was presented for the DONT MESS WITH TEXAS radio commercial featuring The Fabulous Thunderbirds.

"We are, of course, excited about these awards. They are the first national advertising awards the highway department has ever received," said Don Clark, spokesperson for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

"Our best reward, however, is that this program is successfully saving tax dollars," Clark said.

The program, now in its second year, is credited with a 29% reduction in trash along Texas highways during its first year. Results for the second year are expected in August. This meant about a $5 million savings to Texas taxpayers in 1986 alone.
