Chapel Choir To Present Program

The Chapel Choir of Quitaque First Baptist Church will present an hour-long program of song and testimony at the First Baptist Church in Quitaque on Sunday night, April 4, at 7:30 p.m. The choir gave this program at the First Baptist Church in Wellington on March 21 and will present it at Estelline on April 25th and again in Dallas at the West Illinois Baptist Church on May 1st.

This is a program of Christian folk music, the kind of music that is sweeping the country as a "new" kind of religious music. The choir will sing "I Looked For Love," "Pray," "There Is More To Life," "Lonely Voices," "He's Everything To Me," "A Living Circle," "One of These Days," "Love Is Surrender," "I'll Tell the World," "The New 23rd," and "Pass It On."

Mrs. O. R. Stark, Jr. is the director, with Anna Jean Taylor and Donald Ramsey playing the piano. Scotty Stark, Brit Parker and David Hunter play guitar and Max Ham plays drums.

To Fly A Kite

Anyone who has glanced skyward recently must have noticed that we are enjoying a renaissance in the graceful and ancient art of kite-flying. In these noise-pollution times it seems entirely desirable that the peaceful, quiet pastime of kite-flying should be gaining widespread popularity. The kite, however, wasn't always so innocent. For the first half of its 2,500 year history it was chiefly used as an instrument of war with occasional side careers in crime, magic and medical quackery.

The first reported use of a kite was around 200 B.C. when Chinese General Han Hsin flew one over the walls of a fort he was attacking to calculate the length of a tunnel he planned to dig under them. History is unclear as to the success of this maneuver but if Han's first attempt at kite-flying was typical, he may have so amused and distracted the defenders as he roared up and down the battlements trying to get his kite airborne his army was able to clamber over the walls undetected.

Kites were later used as signaling devices, weapons of psychological warfare (with lanterns and frighteningly noisy whistles attached they were flown over enemy lines at night) and even on a propaganda raid in 1322 when the Chinese used them to drop leaflets on the Mongols. Apparently very few of the Mongols knew how to read, which may have hindered the effectiveness of this otherwise brilliant scheme.

By the thirteenth century man-carrying kites were developed and were used as wartime observation posts — although how dependable the information so gained might have been is doubtful, as Marco Polo reported that only those "stupid and drunk" could be persuaded to man the dangerous devices.

The military was not alone in seeing the possibility of kites. They have been used in a number of spectacular crimes. One of the first was committed in the 18th century by the famous robber Ishikawa, who used a kite to fly up onto the roof of Nagoya Castle in order to steal golden dolphins that adorned the tower.

Unfortunately for Ishikawa (who may have coined the plaintiff phrase "That's the way the wind blows") he succeeded only in grabbing a dolphin's fin and was subsequently hauled down and boiled in oil.

A Rev. J. Doolittle of London reported on the medical benefits of kites, especially for children. "It (kite flying) makes them throw their heads back and open their mouth, thus getting rid of internal heat," he observed.

If Doolittle is right, Americans are getting healthier every day, as kite manufacturers report sales have been more than doubling every year.

And Ben Franklin, who loved the great outdoors, significantly saw the scientific potential of kites. Incidentally, the bespectacled Franklin, who has been so right in everything else, argued that the Wild Turkey ought to be adopted as the National Emblem, as the Eagle's reputation was that of a questionable bird.

When Franklin was overruled he reportedly told his opponents to "go fly a kite!" The Wild Turkey's history is actually so thoroughly American it in turn gave birth to another genuine American — Wild Turkey Bourbon, which was originated as a tribute to a wild turkey hunting party, its 101 proof being sufficiently lusty for such a celebration.

And as the Wild Turkey Bourbon grows in popularity, so does kite-flying. Apparently part of the appeal is that the newer kites are easier to fly.

A fan is one of the best methods of removing fog, fumes, steam, odors, or hot air from such confined areas as trailers, mobile homes, pick-up campers, buses, trucks, cars, boat galleys, station wagons, airplanes, and cargo spaces.

Extra safety and extra comfort are provided for a limitless variety of situations. The brilliantly chrome-finished fans manufactured by the Mobile Products Division, Hupp, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio, offer a positive low-cost solution to almost any air moving problem.

Mounted on a sturdy aluminum base, the totally-guarded, 4-blade, 6-inch-high fan can be controlled individually with a base-mounted or remote control switch. The compactly-designed unit operates on 6, 12, or 24-volts. A spring-loaded ball and socket swivel joint permits CFM of air to be directed anywhere.

meeting were Mrs. Grady Tyler and Mrs. Prof Patrick, and the Advisor, Mrs. Frances Wise.

The girls arrived in Lubbock about 3 p. m. where they checked into the Inn. Then we had dinner at the Zuider Zee. Three of our group then had to practice with the Sharon Singers and the Guys. These girls were Vanessa Robison, Jolene Hall and Gail Tyler.

The girls attended the Talent Show Friday night. Saturday morning all the girls attended the area I meeting. The speaker for the meeting was Don Williams. The title of his speech was "The Tragedy of Being Ordinary." After the meeting the girls had lunch at Furr's Cafeteria. They returned home late that afternoon.

Tuesday, March 9 the Quitaque Chapter held its regular monthly meeting. Earl Crush of the Smith-Laur Home of Lubbock came to speak to the Chapter about his work.

Pam Loudermilk, Chapter President, opened the meeting and this was followed by Mr. Crush's speech and a film. His speech was very interesting and also very educational. The girls asked questions after his speech and after all questions were answered, the closing ritual was said and members went to the cafeteria where refreshments were served.

The Turkey FHA girls were our guests at this meeting, and those attending were Elaine King, Darlene Hale, Marilyn Maxwell, Jana Driskill, Joan Lyles Juana Cotten

Peggy Fuston, Charmaine Fuston, Vicki Ham, Laura Lane, Debbie Lane, Janice Bolton, Karen Eudy, Linda Bolton, Mary Campos, Linda Galvan, Jean Green, Melinda Mullin, Darlene Jouett and their advisor, Mrs. Eudy. We appreciated the Turkey girls coming and hope they'll come back.
