A GAS outdoor grill gives food a tangy outdoor flavor without the time and bother of charcoal fire. Char-broiled flavor comes from the smoke of meat juices dripping on hot briquets. Charcoal itself provides no flavor.

Permanent ceramic briquets in the gas grill reach cooking heat in a few minutes, and there is no long wait to start cooking. The heat is regulated manually so there is no need to move a grill up or down.

Shirttail Sermon

"That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that you might be filled with all the fulness of God" (Ephesians 3:16-19).

The Japan horticulturists have developed the art of making dwarf trees. All that is required is to cut the tap root. The tree then has to be trained for life upon its small artificial roots and, deprived of deeper moisture, an oak or a pine will grow to a height of only twelve or eighteen inches.

Perhaps this is the reason so few of us do not "comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height" and do not "know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge" and are not filled with all the fulness of God. We have cut or neglected the tap root of the religious life: intimate communion with God through meditation on His word, prayer and being intimately with Him in our daily experiences. We too often are living on surface impressions and experiences.

Dad said to young Timothy, "Meditate upon these things, give yourself wholly to them that thy fruit may appear to all" (I Tim. 4:7). We will do well to heed these words. Then we will be sustained by the tap root of closeness to the Lord and dependence upon Him.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mayfield drove to Lubbock Sunday morning to visit his sister, Mrs. Dexter Ward. When they arrived, another sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Smith of Portales, New Mexico, were there. His brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Mayfield and Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey Mayfield, who live in Lubbock, joined them for a visit. They report a good time together.

Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Martin and boys of Flomot visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lon McKay, and Trent Saturday night.

Mrs. Lon McKay was in Memphis Tuesday to see the doctor.

Denim is no longer just the blue fabric that's rugged, coarse and dependable. For spring 1971, it's been refined.

The fabric is now found in cotton or cotton-polyester or woven or knitted designs in a wide range of colors. And permanent press finishes make its care an easy job.

With its new personality, denim dress, rainwear, jeans and pants all express the popular fashion moods of earthiness and naturalness.

The total denim look is sporty, so select patterns with topstitching, flat felled seams, patch pockets and front closing to emphasize the denim look.

Denim is especially popular with home sewers because the fabric is easy to handle and requires no special sewing equipment. But a few sewing hints can be helpful.

Work from the right side of the garment when topstitching, lengthen the stitch to eight stitches per inch, and sew about one-fourth inch away from the seam edge. Topstitching is best along side seams, at the hem, around the edges of collars, cuffs, pockets and down the front openings.

An almost straight seam is required to flat fell. To sew a flat felled finish, first reverse the normal seam by stitching it with the right sides out, wrong sides together. After pressing the seam open, press it again with both seams in one direction. Trim away the under seam allowance to one-eighth inch, then fold the top seam allowance to half its width. Stitch to the garment along the folded edge.

The flat felled seam is especially useful to prevent raveling.

Use other details to add interest to denim. At neck facings or under edges of hem, sleeves or pockets, face with one of the prairie prints. Select decorative zippers, sporty buttons or decorative gripper snaps for closings. Or, add an Indian or peasant print braid.

A PRAYER

It is my joy in life to find
At every turning of the road
The strong arm of a comrade kind
To help me onward with my load.

And since I have no gold to give,
And love alone must make amends,
My only prayer is, while I live —
God make me worthy of my friends.

All About Shaving

Things You Always Wanted To Know

You're all lathered up and ready to begin what has been described as man's greatest burden in life — shaving. Don't wince and stop here. There's a happy ending to this story.

Even though shaving your beard is still a trying experience, take heart in these facts. Peruvian Indians relied on crude stone razors back in 3,000 B. C. The Egyptians later developed and used rough bronze and copper blades. The Romans insisted on punishing themselves by plucking their whiskers out one by one with tweezers.

Let's look at the here and now techniques of shaving to insure a comfortable, long-lasting, close shave. First, wash your face with soap and plenty of hot water. This will remove surface grime, while conditioning your beard for the shave. Then saturate your beard with hot water.

Now you're ready to lather up, but don't apply too much or it will clog the razor. Wet your razor with hot water and start shaving. And don't try to beat any speed records if you can help it.

Don't push down on the razor. Let it glide. Shave with your beard's "grain" down the face and along the neck. If you desire a closer shave, do it again and go gently against the grain with your razor.

Now wash with cold water. One important item should be noted at this point in the shaving procedure. When you shave with a blade you remove a thin layer of skin along with the beard. This can cause irritation to sensitive faces.

To reduce shaving irritation choose your shave lotion with care. The makers of Sea Breeze skin antiseptic have recently introduced a medicated shave lotion to help heal and tone up skin irritated by shaving. The medicated lotion soothes away soreness, eliminates the "tight feeling" often accompanying a shave, and leaves the skin smooth.

The lotion can also be applied before lathering to prepare the beard and provide extra comfort during shaving. So you use an electric shaver and not a razor? No problem. Medicated shave lotion if allowed to dry thoroughly makes an excellent pre-shave for electric shaving.

An electric shaver is easier on the skin. New models will give you a close shave in a matter of minutes. Electric shaver rollers stretch the skin to allow the cutter to clip hair near the base.

For those of you who sport a beard or mustache, here are a few non-shaving tips. A full chin beard will broaden a long face; a pointed beard will make the face look longer; a mustache and beard help diminish the appearance of a large nose. It's true — the shaving story is almost as old as man. And your personal shaving story — whether you use a razor or electric shaver — can be a success story if you follow a few simply pointers on proper beard preparation and shaving techniques.

National Small Business Week

National Small Business Week, which the President of the United States annually proclaims during May, is the subject of discussion by Thomas S. Kleppe (left), Administrator of the Small Business Administration in Washington, D. C. and Bernard S. Browning, President of General Business Services, Inc. (GBS), also of Washington. The latter is the nation's largest consultant to small businesses.

Over 95% of the nation's business is small business and the other 5% used to be, according to the SBA. President Nixon, in issuing this year's proclamation, said "Small business has grown into one of the principal economic forces in this, the world's greatest industrial nation."

He said that small businesses do nearly three-fourths of the total volume of sales and one-third of all manufacturing in this country. He said that small business offers a door through which Americans of all color and creeds are now passing in increasing numbers.

"But if small business is to realize its full potential in the years ahead," the President added, "it needs and deserves wholehearted support from citizens and the business community as a whole."

Browning said that each of the more than 650 GBS field directors, in 47 states, are independent small businessmen. Small business offered them the chance to go into business for themselves and to assist other small businessmen.
