by Pammy Millican, CEA-Ag
 Fifty four local 4-H'ers and parents toured the AQHA (American Quarter Horse Association) Museum in Amarillo on August 6, 1998. They were able to see how the horse and his duties have changed over the years.

The tour was a great experience for everyone involved and was a highlight of the year for the 1998 Briscoe County 4-H Horse club. Attending were Shawn, Ory and Dixie Johnson; Haley and Mitchell Simpson; Amy, Bronc, Forest and Butler Otis; Lisa, Brent, Chancy, and Tyler Gage Campbell; Jacy, Doyle and Jay Proctor; Kelby, Autumn, Paula and Bobbie Phillips; Cody Calvin, Jennifer and Ted Daughtery; Jill Millican; Lana, Zack, Dusty and True Burson; Nancy, Jenny, Tyler and Tanner Young; Shawna, Blake and Clay Strange; Liz, Cord and Taylor Griffin.

Others who attended the tour were Missy Yance, Tarren and Shandy Forbes; Penny, Kandy, and Rider Cogdell; Kippi, Blaze and Caper Cogdell; Coilyn, Wayne, Curtis, Drew and Tye Reed.

Not A Thin Dime!

by J. guest
 Have you ever wished that you could help a child who has a crippling disease, severe diabetes, various disabilities, etc., but knew that it took about everything you had to keep your own family going.

The Lion's Club is promoting a very simple way to help another in need. Some of you may have heard of the "Campbell's Labels" program. Lions, families and friends are involved in collecting labels all over the state of Texas.

Credit for computers, sport equipment, audio/visual equipment, even passenger vans, etc. can be earned just by combining labels from all over the state, and sending them to the Texas Lion's Camp in Kerrville, Texas.

In addition to Campbell's Labels, Vlasic, V8, Swanson, Prego, Pepperidge Farm, Pace, Open Pit BBQ, Milwaukee, Marie and Franco-American products may be included.

SO LET'S JUST MAKE IT A HABIT to slit those labels off, put them in a sack, take them to Keith Green's Automotive in Turkey and Merrell's Grocery in Quitaque. You might also leave them at the City hall in both towns.

I recently read that a turkey usually lasts about 200 years. One of the latter stages is that of "apathy" (not caring enough nor feeling that your efforts count enough to do anything about the state of affairs of our community and fellow man). Where are we? Will we do anything about helping our needy children?

Turkey Warned Of Nitrate, Advised To Protect Infants

The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) has tested Turkey water samples, and found that Nitrate/Nitrite is 13.40 mg. This is a high enough level to cause concern among parents of very young infants.

The TNRCC sets drinking water standards and has determined that nitrate poses an acute health concern at certain levels of exposure. Nitrite is used in fertilizer and is found in sewage and wastes from human and/or farm animals and generally gets into drinking water from those activities.

Excessive levels of nitrate in drinking water has caused serious illness and sometimes death in infants under six months of age. The serious illness in infants is caused because nitrate is converted to nitrite in the body. Nitrite interferes with the oxygen carrying capacity of the child's blood. This is an acute disease in that symptoms can develop rapidly in infants. In most cases, health deteriorates over a period of days.

Symptoms include shortness of breath, and blueness of the skin. Clearly expert medical advice should be sought immediately if these symptoms occur.

Letters have been sent out to notify Turkey residents of the results of the nitrate test, to encourage parent and other responsible parties to provide infants with an alternate source of drinking water. Local and state health authorities are the best source for information concerning alternate sources of drinking water for infants.

TNRCC has set the drinking water standard at 10 parts per million (ppm) for nitrate to protect against the risk of these adverse effects. It has also set a drinking water standard for nitrite for 1 ppm. To allow for the fact that the toxicity of nitrate and nitrite are additive, TNRCC has also established a standard for the sum of nitrate and nitrite at 10 ppm. Drinking water that meets the TNRCC standard is associated with little to none of this risk and is considered safe with respect to nitrate.

Ray Price in Concert

Rav Price Is Coming Back To Turkey

by Lauwana Cruse

Ray Price and the Cherokee Cowboys are coming back to Turkey October 17, 1998 for another concert. There will be two performances, 2:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. in the old Turkey High School auditorium-gymnasium. If you saw him last year when he was here, you know what a great entertainer he is. If you missed him you will surely want to see him this time. He says he is bringing eight fiddlers and his show be bigger and better than ever.

We will be selling tickets at the Caprock Jamboree in Silverton on September 5. For more information call 806/423-1273.

Dove Season Expected Good Despite Drouth

State wildlife officials expect good dove hunting despite widespread drouth conditions across Texas. Hunting near watering and feeding sites should be as productive as ever.

Texas Parks and Wildlife leaders say the surveys in the spring indicated dove breeding populations remained similar to last year's.

However, they also say the drouth could have an impact on production, and that could cause negative prospects on the hunting.

Some hunters may not see this however, is they're hunting around water, which will concentrate more birds.

Texas boasts a dove population in excess of 40 million birds, half of which are produced annually. Biologists suggest the population can handle the drouth, saying there's still a very hardy population out there, which is added to by the migrant birds passing through, which were produced in states north of Texas.

Mourning doves prefer watering and feeding in relatively dry areas, and dry weather -- is there is seed on the ground -- makes it easier for doves to feed. They prefer feeding on open ground where they can get to the seed, and landing on dry open ground near tanks and lakes to water.

Dove season runs from September 1 to October 30, with a daily bag limit of 15 birds, including no more than two white-winged doves.

Hello, remember me? Some people call me Old Glory Others call me The Star Spangled Banner. But whatever they call me, I am your Flag, the Flag of the United States of America...Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you...Because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago, people lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade and naturally I was leading every parade, proudly waving in the breeze. When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that that left hand was directly over his heart...Remember? And you, I remember you. Standing there straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember little Sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart...Remember? What happened?

I'm still the same Old Flag. Oh! I have a few more stars since you were a boy. A lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago. But now I don't feel as proud as I used to, when I come down your street, you must stand there with your hands in your pockets and I may get a small glance and then you look away then I see the children running around and shouting...They don't seem to know who I am... I saw one man take off his hat then turn around. He didn't see anyone else with their's off so he quickly put his back on.

Is it a sin to be patriotic anymore? Have you forgotten what I stand for and where I've been? Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and Vietnam. Take a look at the Memorial Honor Roll sometime, of those who never came back to keep the Republic Free...One Nation under God: When you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So -- when you see me, stand straight, place your right hand over your heart...And I'll salute you, by waving back...And I'll know that you Remembered! (author unknown)

Abandoned Water Wells — A Threat To Drinking Water

This is the fifth in a series of articles on drinking water protection in the Turkey Municipal Water System area.

Have you ever dropped stones into the casing of an old well and listened to the sound it makes? Maybe you have leaned over the opening to hear the echo of your own voice bounce back from the mysterious darkness below? These are just two examples of the phenomena that arouse a child's curiosity and make abandoned wells as intriguing and as dangerous as a discarded ice box with the door still attached.

It is only natural for a person to assume no one would ever fall into his deserted well, as the odds are high against this happening. But it can and has happened numerous times in Texas. Abandoned wells are also a direct conduit to our ground water -- a threat to our drinking water.

An abandoned well's potential for adversely affecting drinking water quality will depend on its original use, the local geology, land use, and the type of well construction. An improperly sealed well is often simply covered by a board or a sheet of metal in an unsuccessful attempt to ensure that the well does not become a hazard.

The natural quality of drinking water tends to be degraded by human activity. Wastes that are not discharged into lakes and streams are deposited on or below the land and from there may migrate downward to contaminate ground water. The problem is compounded because the ground water contamination and the effects of contamination are not usually recognized until ground water quality is seriously impaired.

Ground water normally moves very slowly, from a few feet to tens of feet per year, and is filtered in the process. But an abandoned well will circumvent the natural filtration process, and can transfer large amounts of contaminated water directly into the aquifer.

Abandoned wells are found everywhere--on farms, industrial sites, and in urban areas. Well plugging restores the groundwater protection originally provided by soil and rock that were present before the well was drilled. Filling a well also eliminates the possibility of injury, death, or property damage due to a fall or sudden collapse of an old well. To achieve these important benefits, however, the right plugging materials and procedures must be used.

It won't be easy to convince everyone to plug or cap his or her abandoned well. Proper well plugging takes time and money. The exact costs vary with well depth, diameter, and the geology of the area. Some will say that well plugging is like pouring money down a hole. But spending a couple of thousand dollars to plug an abandoned well may prevent contamination of your drinking water. And it might prevent a serious accident involving your family or friends.

To report an abandoned well or obtain information on plugging abandoned wells, contact the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission's Water Well Driller and Pump Installer Program at (512) 239-0530.

The Lure Of Cattle Ranching

provided by Pammy Millican, CEA-Ag

Damage from this year's drought has now surpassed that of 1996. And as we report on agricultural losses, you may wonder what attracts someone to farming and ranching.

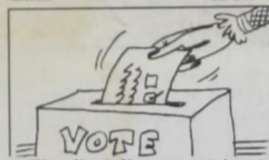

Crop production in Texas is down 50 to 90 percent. Cattle are being sold because ranchers can't afford feed and water. Jim McAdams runs the Spade Ranch near Lubbock, and he says 1996 was not this bad because the cattle they had to sell off were paid for. This year they were in a restocking mode, so the cattle they're forced to sell are not paid for.

The hardship will put many out of business and who could blame them? Ranching and farming are more risky today than they've ever been. So what makes someone want to go into agriculture when they could just as easily choose a desk job in an air-conditioned building?

Extension beef cattle specialist Dr. Larry Boleman calls it the romance of ranching. He says it is very rewarding to care for animals and at the same time be able to provide food for people. Yet Boleman sees the number of farms and ranches dwindling.

He says the people getting into the business now are doing it more as a hobby than a livelihood. He recommends that people come into ranching having already made all the money they'll need to live the rest of their life because they can't count on cattle to provide decent income.

Texas A & M economists predict as many as 90 percent of Texas farms and ranches will have to be refinanced this year. It's unclear how many may choose to go out of business rather than risk greater loss by staying in agriculture.

The first five countries to extend the vote to women were New Zealand in 1893, Australia in 1902, Finland in 1906, Norway in 1913 and Denmark in 1915. The United Kingdom gave women the vote in 1919 and the U.S. allowed women to vote in presidential elections in 1920.
