Valley Bows To Knox City In Quarter-Final Game At Childress

The Valley Patriot football season came to an abrupt halt at Childress Friday night when they were defeated by the Knox City Greyhounds 13-0.

There were several factors that may have helped the Greyhounds in their winning, including several Patriots who were just recovering from injuries, and the Greyhounds outweighed the Patriots by several pounds each. The main thing was probably that they were just a little out-matched.

The Greyhounds had 216 yards offense, eight first downs and turned the ball over four times Friday night, but their stiff defense and a pair of big plays helped them to defeat the Patriots in the quarter-final game.

The Greyhounds had some fast men and the coach stated that was the way they won. Their linemen averaged 171 pounds per man, and they used a 41-yard quarterback keeper to set up one score and a 52-yard run brought another TD as it recorded its twelfth straight victory, finishing with 12-1 for the season.

Valley finished its season with 11-2 which is nothing to be sneezed at, and Coach Ted Giddens remarked, "We ain't ashamed. We're going to hurt, but that's the price you pay when you want something as bad as we did." The Patriots finished in the playoffs for the fourth time since 1977.

The Valley defense, which held its opponents to an average of 4.4 points per game, drew rave reviews from the Greyhound

Coach Sloan. The Valley defense limited KC to 85 yards total except for the two scoring drives they made. The KC Greyhounds held Valley to 124 yards total and limited Quarterback Kraig Cox to only seven completions in 21 pass attempts. The Pats had only five first downs.

Coach Giddens gives a tribute to the Senior Patriots of 1983: "Ricky Jeeter, Kraig Cox, Tommy Williams, Bobby Ortiz, Rex Morgan, Keith Beavers, J. Dale Butler, Daniel Ortiz, Walt Rice, Darren Edwards and Lee J. Browning were the seniors and the leaders on our football team. The backbone of any athletic team is its leadership. These seniors gave the football team of 1983 a backbone of steel. These young men will definitely be remembered as winners.

"All of these young men will not be honored by being selected on a special team by the newspapers, but in MY opinion, they should be. I personally would not trade any of these young men for anyone else, because these young men are TRUE BLUE VALLEY PATRIOTS.

"We were successful for a lot of reasons this year. I could name several, such as (1) our underclassmen doing such a great job; (2) the support of the community, and (3) the great job by Coach Adams, Coach Waldrop and Coach Phelps. I could go on and name more reasons, but this article is to express my gratitude and give honor to the Seniors of '83.

"If you young men continue to accept and attack the challenges of life like you did the ones we faced in football this year, there is no doubt that you can be the best at what you choose."

Christmas Party For "We The Women"

"Tis the season to be jolly . . ." so the words go to that traditional Christmas song—but so many of us are caught up in the "busyness" of Christmas preparation that we fail to take the time to spend with our neighbors and friends.

With this in mind, a special Christmas party is being planned for "We The Women" on Monday noon at the Quitaque Community Center. Come and bring a guest and enjoy the singing together, the joy of friendship and the fun of a gift exchange (bring a gift for a woman not to exceed $5.00).

All women are invited to come!

Mrs. Gene Fuston returned Sunday, November 27, from Dallas where she had visited with her uncle who is very ill in Baylor Hospital there.

Lot Of Nutrition To Be Found Inside Pecan Shell

AUSTIN—Pecans are a rich, oily nut that are high in calories—more than 3,000 per pound—and nutritional value. Their protein, 41.7 grams per pound of kernels, is about half that found in a pound of lean ground beef. Low in sodium, pecans contain vitamins A and C, and B vitamins riboflavin, thiamine and niacin, and the minerals potassium, calcium and iron. They are a healthful snack for most people and a good source of protein for vegetarians and others cutting back on meat consumption.

A 300-million-pound harvest in the country's pecan-growing states, which include Texas and other parts of the South and Southwest, is expected to give consumers lower prices this year. Now is a good time to stock up on the nuts, which will store a year when frozen and have a variety of uses.

Texas Department of Agriculture home economists offer these suggestions for buying, storing and chopping this Texas native.

When selecting whole pecans look for shells that are clean and free of cracks and scars. The kernel should not rattle when the nut is shaken. Shelled pecans should be plump and crisp.

The high polyunsaturated fat content of pecans, that provides their rich taste also causes them to dry out, shrink or turn rancid if not properly stored. Though whole nuts retain their quality longer than shelled, all pecans store best under refrigeration.

Freezing pecans, whole or shelled, is the best way to ensure their flavor and crispness. Frozen pecans do not have to be thawed before they are added to a recipe. They can be refrozen several times without loss of quality.

To chop pecan meats place the kernels on a wooden board. Using a long, straight knife, anchor the tip with one hand and move the blade in a brisk, chopping motion. Nut meats can also be chopped in an electric blender, a cup at a time. Blend 3-5 seconds for a coarse texture, 7-10 for a fine one. Be sure not to blend too long, or the nuts will turn to powder. Use the metal blade to chop pecans in a food processor, chopping up to 2 cups at a time.

A pound of in-shell pecans will yield approximately 2 1/4 cups of kernels. Twelve pecan halves equal 3 tablespoons of chopped nutmeats. About 4 ounces of shelled pecans equal a cup.

Governor Mark White REPORTS

AUSTIN - Over the last two years, 151 significant layoffs in the gas, steel, petrochemical and ship-building industries have left 62,000 hard working Texans without jobs.

These displaced workers have families to support and bills to pay. Unfortunately, they have little or no chance of ever returning to the jobs for which they were trained. Economic and technological changes have made their jobs obsolete.

Unemployment remains unacceptably high in many parts of our state, particularly in pockets along the Texas-Mexico border where the jobless rate exceeds 25 percent.

Texas will receive $115 million in the next nine months under the Job Training Partnership Act, a federally-funded employment and training program for the low income, elderly, and those whose jobs are permanently eliminated during economic hard times.

For the first time in the history of federal jobs programs, Congress has given states the authority to decide which projects to fund and the overall management responsibility to see that these programs work.

The Job Training Partnership Act also gives the private sector an important "partnership" role. Since the act took effect in October, I have certified 34 locally-appointed private industrial councils to work with local elected officials in designing and administering job training and employment programs in different service areas in Texas.

Out of Texas' $115 million share of federal job training funds, $79 million will be divided among the 34 service areas to train poverty-level Texans for available jobs. My office is providing general guidelines, but the local private industrial councils will decide on how best to put this money to work to meet the statewide goal of removing 10,211 from the welfare rolls and placing them in permanent jobs.

I have approved spending another $2.2 million in federal job training funds for three projects to provide counseling, job search, training and placement services for displaced industrial workers in Southeast Texas.

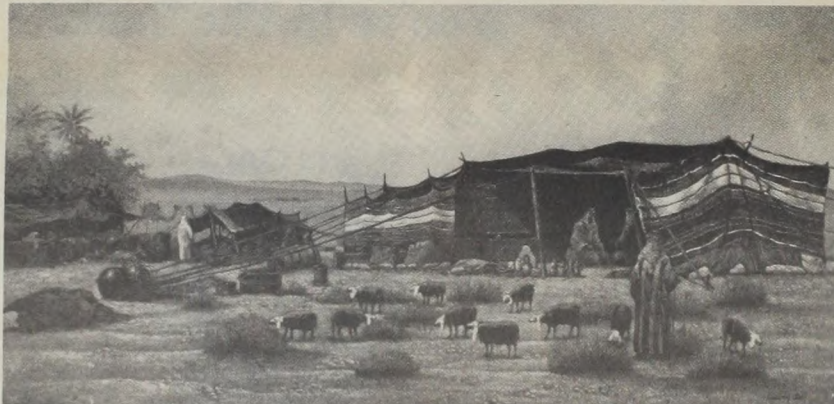

The Southwestern Steel Division of Armco Inc. and the United Steelworkers of America will receive $300,000 to assist 600 workers laid off by Armco's Houston Works plant. Houston Community College and the Texas Employment Commission will receive $1.1 million to retrain another 650 unemployed industrial workers in the Houston area.

In Beaumont-Port Arthur, the non-profit Programs for Human Services has been awarded $760,000 in job training funds to provide similar services to workers laid off from Texaco, Ideco and Ohmstede Machine Works.

I will announce the start-up of projects to help the jobless in other parts of our state in coming weeks but, unfortunately, there is not enough federal job training money to help all 662,700 Texans who found themselves in unemployment lines in September.

Job retraining is only one part of the solution to our economic problems. Improving our educational system and attracting new businesses to Texas will mean jobs for our children into the next century.

Advice: Buy Firewood by the Cord

(AUSTIN)—It's again that time of the year when you see lots of ads for firewood in newspapers, and loads for sale in pickup trucks alongside the road. And while most firewood dealers are reputable, Charles Forester, supervisor of Weights and Measures for the Texas Department of Agriculture, says the unsuspecting consumer can get burned.

His advice: always buy your firewood by the cord.

A cord is 128 cubic feet, Forester explains. "The common expression of measurement is a space four feet wide, four feet high, and eight feet long.

Forester urges consumers to pick a spot alongside their garage, fence or a tree before the firewood is delivered, and then to mark off the exact 4'x4'x8' dimensions for delivery of a cord. "Now, when the seller delivers the wood," Forester continues, "you have them stack it in those prescribed dimensions, and you'll know whether you're getting a cord or not."

Charles Forester, supervisor of Weights and Measures for the Texas Department of Agriculture, demonstrates how to measure out the area for stacking a cord of firewood. He says always to buy firewood by the cord, which should measure 4'x4'x8'.

There are several other precautions which Forester urges consumers to take.

First, never buy firewood by the pickup load. "There is no standard dimension for a pickup bed, because those vehicles range in size from compact to 'stretch cab.' You never know what you'll be getting," he advises.

"Secondly, don't buy wood by the rick. There is no standard dimension for a rick. A rick can be almost anything a seller wants it to be. Unfortunately, it's never what a buyer wants it to be," said Forester.

Additionally, TDA's weights and measures expert urges consumers to be wary of a dealer who offers a quick discount on the sales prices for dumping the wood in your yard without stacking it in the prescribed location.

Predicts Forester, "When you finally get around to stacking that wood, they've only unloaded a half or three-fourths of a cord. Now at $100 for a half-cord, you're suddenly paying $200 for a full cord. You don't realize it until you stack it and measure it. You certainly can't measure the loose-laid wood out in the yard."

He and his staff will be glad to answer any questions about measurements of a cord or possibly questionable sales practices of firewood, Forester says. Most complaints, he says, actually come from the state's legitimate firewood dealers, because "they run a straight operation and they like to keep their business clean."

For more information, Forester invites your inquiries to TDA Headquarters in Austin (512-475-6577), or to any of the Department's 12 district offices scattered throughout the state. Again advises Forester, "Buy by the cord. And if you need help on measurement of the cord, let our office know, and we'll be glad to come out and assist you."

Deer Hunting: Income for Texas Ranchers

(AUSTIN)—A rancher's income from hunting leases may not be large, but it is still much more stable from year-to-year than fluctuating livestock prices. Those are some of the findings of Gary Carman, an economics professor at Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos, writing in a recent issue of the Texas Business Review.

In fact, in the Hill Country Carman found that some ranchers derive as much as 50 percent of their income from deer leases. "The Hill Country does have the habitat for the deer, and the landowners don't have good alternatives to hunting," Carman says, "so they've found hunting leases to be a very profitable endeavor."

Because livestock prices have remained so depressed in recent years, Carman learned that some ranchers who would otherwise prefer not to have hunting on their property have decided to lease their land.

With leases totaling almost $50 million a year, many landowners find it beneficial to nurture the wildlife on their property, especially deer, during non-hunting periods, just as they would any other cash crop. "The management of the herd is the key," says Carman, "because there certainly is a direct correlation between the quality of the horns, the size of the animals, and what people are willing to pay for them."

In the future, Carman sees an increased emphasis for hunters on game fowl, which require a smaller amount of land for hunting. He also encourages additional land purchases by the state for at least occasional hunting.

The Superintendent's Corner

by Wilburn Leeper

Each year during the month of December, every school district across Texas begins considering the selection of new textbooks for the coming school year. The process starts with the Board of Trustees appointing a local textbook committee. The committee is usually made up of teachers for whose grades or subjects the new books will be used and must be employees of the school district.

Sample textbooks are ordered and received by the school sometime in January and it becomes the textbook committee's duty to examine all books under consideration and then select one of the five choices. The Board of Trustees approves or disapproves the choice and certifies the selection to the State Textbook Division. The selection report to the state is final and cannot be reconsidered during the six-year contract period. Teachers, administrators and school boards must be very careful to choose the textbook they believe is best in order to prevent being stuck with a "bad" book for six years.

Textbooks to be considered for adoption at Valley School are language, grades 1-8; English as a second language, grades 6-12; algebra I and II; geometry; trigonometry; world history, and vocational agriculture.

The state expects to spend a staggering $36.2 million next year in Texas on the purchase of textbooks to be furnished free to schools for student use.

If it becomes necessary to dismiss school due to severe weather or for any other reason, the school will notify either KVII-TV (channel 7), KGNC radio, or KBGH radio in Memphis. An attempt will be made to alert the news media concerning school closing the evening before, if a decision can be made that early.

We have learned that Gene Payne has enlisted in the Navy and is now serving his basic training at Great Lakes, Illinois Naval Training Center. Gene is a 1975 graduate of Valley High School. The next time we see Gene he may be wearing navy blue and sporting a short haircut.

The Valley lunchroom served 5413 lunches during the month of November. That's an average of 270 lunches served per day. There were also 789 breakfasts served during the same month. The lunchroom labor consisted of 560 hours in preparation, serving and cleanup.

Mr. and Mrs. King Honored On Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John King were delightfully surprised with a golden wedding anniversary celebration on Thanksgiving Day at their home on Lake Stamford. They were expecting their children for Thanksgiving, but when they arrived, they brought a cake decorated with wedding bells and rings and John and Ruby, 50th. The children brought them an anniversary clock and the grandson, Danny Mayfield, brought a stove to use in their fishing house.

Lanes Visit Niagara Falls, Other Points Of Interest

by Lillie Lane

On October 10, 1983, Birt and Pat Lane of Plainview came by Turkey and loaded Leon and I and our baggage and we headed for Niagara Falls. The first day we crossed Oklahoma. The weather, highways and foliage were beautiful but we were not allowed to stop by the highway and take pictures.

We spent the first night at Clarksville, Arkansas and found the food and motel good. The second night we spent at McMinnville, Tennessee and did some sightseeing there. Tennessee is a beautiful state with lots of huge trees, grass and highways but you can't see any way but straight up for the trees. We spent the third night near Lovington, Kentucky and got to the Paul Spillers, formerly of Turkey, by 12:00 noon and had a nice visit and good food there. Saturday, Eula had planned a 55th wedding anniversary celebration for she and Paul and Leon and I with pretty cake and all the trimmings. Most of their family was there. This was at a cafeteria in Wilmington, Ohio.

Sunday morning after church we went to Lima, Ohio to visit

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry King and sons, Mark and Mike, and a baby friend, Crystal Doeing, of Odessa; Mr. and Mrs. James Hawkins and children, Beth of Kaufman and her friend, Troy of Brownwood, and Coy of the home in Mesquite; Mrs. Joyce Price and daughter, Cari, and granddaughter of Fort Worth; Mr. and Mrs. Danny Mayfield of Lubbock; and a sister and husband of Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Bethel of Lamesa.

MRS. BIRT LANE
At Niagara Falls

Mary Ellen Jenkins (their daughter) and had a good visit with lots of food there. We left the next morning and went to Oberlin, Ohio to visit Hettie Clark and her family. We spent the night and left for Niagara Falls the next morning. We went through Cleveland, Ohio and up the highway not far from Lake Erie. Occasionally we could see the lake.

There were lots of vineyards up there and mums by the acre. This was in Pennsylvania, all of which was beautiful. We ate lunch at Angola Restaurant near Buffalo, New York and arrived at Niagara, Ontario, Canada shortly afterward. The Falls are surely something to see. We spent the night and did some sightseeing. It was wonderful, but by then, we were ready to head for Texas and the wide open spaces.

We spent two nights in Oberlin with Hettie Clark, one night in Illinois and the last night with Guy Paul and Elnora Smith in Sapulpa, Oklahoma and enjoyed our visit. We drove over 4,000 miles and had no trouble at all. We arrived in Turkey on Sunday, October 23, and it surely looked good.

Hightower Supports Preservation of East Texas Wilderness Area

(AUSTIN)—Why would a Congressman representing an inner-city area of Dallas want to preserve a small but significant area of East Texas? "Because, I as a Boy Scout, camped in East Texas over and over again," says Congressman John Bryant. "I just can't stand the idea of them cutting an entire forest down and not maintaining some of it in its original state."

Of the 600,000 acres spread across four national forests in East Texas, Bryant wants to ensure that 10 small parcels are protected from timber production.

"My bill simply seeks to take 65,000 acres of pristine, rare and unusual woodlands and set them aside so the U.S. Forest Service will not lease those particular woods out to private timber contractors to be cut to the ground," Bryant explains. "Most people are under the misimpression that if it's a national forest, it's protected. That simply is not true."

"The national forest is run by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Their goal is to grow trees and to have them harvested. We're saying in this bill that we would like a portion of those lands to be protected from the chain saw."

Because the forests are already owned by the public, Bryant says his Wilderness Preservation Bill will cost taxpayers nothing. Nor, he says, will it jeopardize the timber industry, which is economically important to all of East Texas. Bryant says the 65,000 acres he proposes to protect is less than one-half of one percent of all the available commercial timberland in East Texas.

Hunting will be allowed in the preservation area, as will be fishing and hiking. "Even the drilling of oil wells, when necessary," he explained.

According to Bryant, a former state legislator now serving his first term in Congress, Texas needs to join other states in ensuring that a greater share of its public lands remain undisturbed. Nationwide, he reports that 80 million acres have now been designated wilderness areas, but only 45,000 of those acres are here in Texas—mostly in the Big Bend area.

The proposed East Texas wilderness includes 22 Grand Champion trees, the largest in existence in their particular species, along with dozens of unique forms of flora and fauna.

The legislation, now pending before a Congressional committee, has won the support of numerous individuals and groups here in Texas, Bryant says. "Most notably, from Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower."

In a letter of support to members of the Texas Congressional delegation, Hightower wrote, "The beauty of these woodlands is its own reward, but more than beauty is at stake. We are only now beginning to understand the importance of the complex interrelationship of the various plant species in their native environment, a complementary relationship that has allowed these areas to survive periods of drought and pestilence through the ages."

Bryant says he's also received support from the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife, the Sportman's Club of Texas, the Houston Birdhunters Association, various conservation groups, and editorial endorsements from most newspapers in East Texas, as well as from the Houston Post and the Dallas Times-Herald.

"In fact," Bryant concluded, "I believe that most people in our state would like to see us maintain a little piece of Texas just as it has been over the centuries."

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20518

Wasteful government spending is a major concern for Americans. You are concerned that a portion of your tax dollar is wasted through duplication of efforts, unnecessary red tape, and generally unproductive spending.

Finding and stopping these instances of waste in an organization as large and far-reaching as the federal government is a mind-boggling task, and one which, unfortunately, cannot be completed quickly. However, the Administration is implementing fundamental improvements throughout government agencies and departments which already are yielding improved efficiency in spending while preserving the public services for which the money was intended.

This bold effort by the Administration, with the co-operation of Congress, seeks to address three major areas of concern — spiraling administrative costs in how government operates, fraud and waste in government programs and fair delivery of services to those in need.

The administrative costs of running the government have been far too high, in large part because of duplication, out-moded equipment, unnecessary procedural red tape, and incompatible financial systems used by agencies and departments. For example, there are 330 different financial systems and 200 payroll systems in use by the various agencies and departments of the federal government.

Steps have been taken to standardize and streamline these systems. Already, 300 million hours a year of paperwork have been eliminated, and in another year that figure is expected to rise to 400 million hours.

Other cost-saving procedures have been instituted as well:

— Until two years ago, federal employees were not encouraged to use discount fares for airline tickets. Today, employees are required to take advantage of available discount fares, and the result is an estimated $400 million in travel cost savings.

— Government publications which are either outdated or available in the private sector have been discontinued. Among them are the publications "How to Buy a Christmas Tree" and "Hot Springs Bathing Instructions."

— Simplified guidelines for buying goods and services for the government will increase competition and reduce purchase costs by $5 million when the new system is fully implemented.

Additionally, steps have been taken to improve collection of delinquent debts. Of the $289 billion owed to the government, about $44.3 billion in delinquent. A private business with this 15.3 percent overdue debt ratio would long ago have collapsed. The Administration from its beginning has required agencies to tighten administrative controls over loans and contracts. The result will be the collection of $3 billion in old debts this year alone.

Additionally, Congress passed the Debt Collection Act of 1982, enabling the government to collect debts and screen poor risk candidates for loans and contracts — something which has been routine for the private sector for decades. Agencies now are exchanging information on loan applicants and contractors and using private sector credit bureaus.

The federal government has asked state and local governments to share in the pursuit of greater efficiency, holding down to costs of programs which are jointly administered.

Venoi Cain Has Baseball Facility Named In His Honor.

The Valley Tribune received a note from Charles (Venoi) Cain of Pharr, Texas, a former resident of Quitaque and he reports he enjoys the Tribune very much which informs him what has happened to people he knew while growing up in Quitaque. He and his wife are retired and enjoying life in the Rio Grande Valley, he reports.

He says he was surprised with the following honor:

A resolution adopted by the Pharr, San Juan, Alamo School Board on March 24, 1981, named the new baseball facilities located at the High School on South I Road the Charles V. Cain Baseball Park. Mr. Cain was associated with the PSJA School District for 31 years prior to his retirement.

Charles Cain was born in Broken Bow, Oklahoma, graduated from Quitaque High School in 1941, and attended college at North Texas State University in Denton. He moved to the Rio Grande Valley in 1950, and served as baseball coach, teacher and administrator in the PSJA District.

During his tenure as baseball coach, Mr. Cain's teams compiled a win-loss record of 161 and 72. He directed the Bears to District Championships in 1957, 1958, 1959 and 1960; the Bi-District Championship in 1960; Co-Championships in 1954 and 1956, and in 45 straight district wins from 1957 through 1960.

Mr. Cain taught accounting and was head of the Business Department at PSJA High School during his years there. Prior to his retirement, he served as an assistant principal at the High School. Both he and Mrs. Cain served the school district, with Mrs. Jeanette Cain sponsoring the Bearettes from 1949 through 1968. They have two sons, Charles V. II and Billy Cain, who attended the PSJA schools and graduated from PSJA High School.

The formal dedication ceremony took place at the baseball park on Tuesday, March 24. Mr. Hector Palacios, president of the PSJA School Board and a former student and baseball player with Mr. Cain, read the resolution and presented Mr. Cain a plaque commemorating the occasion.

Mrs. Ross Herrington and Mrs. Rayford Hewett attended the presentation of the Messiah by the Plainview Symphony at Harrall Hall on the Wayland Baptist University campus Thursday night of last week. There was a community choir and a Young Symphony Orchestra also.

Terry Woods and children, Ashley and Trevor of Lubbock, spent the weekend visiting their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Shorty Woods, in Quitaque.

HEALTH HINTS

The word processor with a cathode ray tube (CRT) display saves both time and effort in offices, but according to a recent survey of 2,000 secretaries and 1,000 executives, it may also cause eye strain, back or neck problems, headaches or other stress. Here are some other facts you should know about being a secretary in the computer age:

A recent study may help secretaries avoid potential computer-age health hazards.

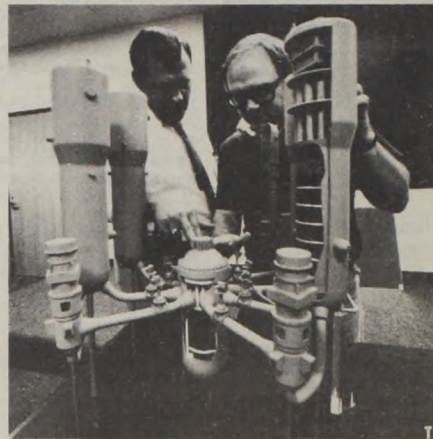

- More than half of all responding secretaries reported eye strain, and nearly half complained of neck and backaches related to using the CRT display terminal. About one-quarter said they experienced headaches and stress.

- The study revealed that physiological problems are experienced by more secretaries in their 20s—who on average spend more time using automated equipment—than by those in their 40s.

- The study, "The Evolving Role of the Secretary in the Information Age," was sponsored and copyrighted by the Business Equipment Division of the Minolta Corporation in cooperation with Professional Secretaries International Research and Educational Foundation.
