2D QUARTER
NO. 29

Amarillo, Texas, Monday, October 16, 1899.

The Sanitarium Question.

The coming, or rather the going, of the Pecos Valley, it is well known, cut off much of the cattle trade from Amarillo, and this forced attention to the waning fortunes of the city, and to a consideration, in some way, to arrest it. No longer being the largest initial shipping point for cattle in the world, it was feared no sufficient amount of cattle trade would be left to support the town. As a farming country, that hope had long since ceased to offer inducements to Amarillo. As a manufacturing point, nothing could be seen to manufacture. As a mining centre, there was nothing to mine.

What should be done to save the town, was the question on every lip. The fact is, to come to the only alternative, was to fall back on our only hope, our cool climate, good water and pure air. To utilize these blessings and advantages for the best possible purposes, and naturally, rationally, and happily, the idea of a SANATORIUM was born. To make the town a health resort, to sustain the churches, the schools and bring in families to reside, increasing the citizenship of distant ranchers, and make a resting place for the weary, and a retreat for the afflicted, was our only hope.

The matter was thoroughly discussed by every method, in conversation, public meetings and the press, and was, by everybody who had a permanent interest in the town, endorsed, encouraged and accepted. The citizen who had his all here could see nothing else so hopeful; and the EVENING NEWS has no reason to think that many of them have as yet, changed their opinion; and with a divestment of selfishness, prejudices, and jealousies, there would be none. This is saying, that leaving out of the discussion of the question, as to who or how a sanatorium should be conducted, THE NEWS feels assured that no man interested in the upbuilding of the town, or even to holding it's own, could possibly suggest a more sure way than to use it's natural advantages of altitude, air, and water, scant precipitation, good roads, etc., to accomplish the purpose, and, that, hence, a sanatorium was absolutely necessary, and an indispensable adjunct.

"Pro bono publico" is the only motto to be followed for successful communities. It is not that every man should have his way, or that none may undergo a hardship, but is it for the general welfare that all public and quasi-public enterprises should be instituted. And this idea THE NEWS would impress upon the reader before further discussing the question. A steam laundry may drive out a Chinaman, making a hardship to the Chinaman; a sanatorium may take trade from a hotel, making it a hardship to the hotel man, but the community answers it back, yes, it's a hardship to a few, put a blessing and justice to the many.

Sentiment in Ireland..

Dublin, Oct. 14.—No more emphatic expression of the extreme national sentiment in Ireland on the struggle between Briton and Boer has been uttered than that contained in the following resolution passed by that strong Parnelite body, the Cork district council. It is as follows:

"Resolved, that having regard to the fact that the English people, as a nation, have since their accursed presence was first felt in Ireland, every crime, murder, pillage, and all crimes that was possible for fallen humanity to perpetrate against their fellow creatures.

"We hope, if they engage in a war, especially an unjustifiable war, such as the war they are now forcing on the Boers, that their army will be annihilated and their power crippled, which will give the Irish nation an opportunity of obtaining their independence."

The seconder of this resolution observed that any Irishmen joining the English army should be shot down.

The resolution passed unanimously amid applause.

Position of Chilton.

Beeville, Tex., Oct. 13.—Having heard that Senator Horace Chilton was an imperialist, Dr. G. M. Stephens of this city, who is a warm friend of the senator, wrote him a personal letter inquiring as to the truthfulness of the statement. The following is a part of the letter received in reply:

Tyler, Tex., Oct. 7.—Dr. G. M. Stephens, Beeville, Tex.: Dear sir—* * * There is not a word of truth in the report that I am an imperialist. So far from it, I blocked out myself and proposed in the platform sub-committee at Galveston that plank against the acquisition of the Philippines. I voted against the treaty because it had that in it.

I stand on the Chicago platform on the tariff though I do not construe that as a protection platform. I am for low tariff and eventual free trade. Your friend,
H. CHILTON.

DIRECT LEGISLATION MOVE

ACTION TAKEN FOR PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION.

A large number of citizen voters of Erath county, Texas, regardless of past and present party alignment, met at Stephenville and organized a direct legislative movement and call upon all citizens of Texas who believe in such a government as that herein indicated to form similar organizations in their respective counties.

This organization shall consist:

"1. Of neighborhood direct legislative clubs to be organized in every public district school house and in every town and city, where even two or three can be gathered together.

"2. Of one central county club to be composed of one member from each of the neighborhood clubs, which central club shall be in the nature of a county executive committee and all actions of this central club shall be subject to the approval or disapproval of the local clubs.

"3. From time to time there shall be mass meetings, to which all voters shall be invited to participate who favor, that the people be given a chance to ultimate their will into law by giving the people some simple and easily accessible way of expressing their will at the ballot box, such as will be insured by direct legislation.

"4. That the only test for membership that shall ever be required in these clubs is that those seeking membership believe that the people should in some greater degree than at present be intruded into the direct use of their 'all political power,' and that as members they will investigate and reason together about some orderly and constitutional way of wresting power from a few middlemen, kings and czar and jeffries, and restoring this power to the people to whom all the magna chartas of liberty declare it belongs.

"And that no circumstances shall there ever be required and brass collar test of membership and that the use of all party branding irons which would put party boss be utterly discontented. And that all members be left in absolute freedom to act in all matters as their judgment and conscience shall dictate."

The object of these clubs shall be:

1. To educate ourselves and our neighbors as to the beneficence of a government of, by and for the people, and the best ways and means of attaining and preserving such government, and to this end there shall be regular club meetings at least once a month in every public school-house where two or more can be gathered together.

2. These clubs shall circulate direct legislation literature, endeavor to get a column in their local press for advocacy of direct legislation and at proper time shall circulate in their neighborhoods petitions to the legislative body for the submission of direct legislation constitutional amendments to a direct vote of the people, and where these amendments are submitted to see that a full and intelligent vote is polled in favor of same.

4. And in order to break down as far as possible a government of party, by partisans of party pie-eaters and encourage a government of patriots for the people, we suggest that these clubs take into consideration the wisdom of applying the principles of proportional representation in the selection of all public officers.

In the meeting were found democrats, republicans and populist. One speaker thought that this move would be favored by at least 3200 out of the 5200 voters in Erath county.

Another speaker pointed out that there was a direct legislative plank in over sixty different state platforms, including twelve democratic state platforms, and that nearly all of the leading great dailies and magazines who belonged to the independent press, as are distinguished from the party organ press, favored direct legislation.
