MISS NORMA RAMSEY FATALLY INJURED IN CROSSING CRASE

Miss Norma Ramsey was instantly killed at a railroad crossing in Abilene, Monday morning and her elder sister, Miss Nena Kate seriously injured, when the Chevrolet sedan they were driving was struck by The Texas fast east-bound passenger train.

Miss Ramsey was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Ramsey, of Abilene, former residents of Baird.

The accident occurred as the girls were driving south on Victoria street from their home.

The train was No. 16, the Texas, running five minutes later than the regular 9:05 schedule. The automobile, traveling southward, lacked only a foot of clearing the rails when it was caught by the pilot of the locomotive and hurled off the track, landing upright about 15 feet away.

A. F. (Tony) Wegg, engineer of the train, and W. V. Rose, fireman, said they did not see the car until it mounted the track. They said the regulation whistle for crossings—two long and two short—was sounded. Wegg, avetran of 31 years of service with the T. & P. and considered one of the best engineers on this division.

The two girls were the only occupants of the car. Both were thrown clear. Miss Norma falling 30 feet east and north of the automobile and not more than a foot from the south rail of the track. Miss Nena Kate Ramsey was pinned beneath the car her left limb held under the right front wheel.

First arrivals found Miss Norma Ramsey dead and Miss Nena Kate unconscious. The dead girl's head was crushed, the right wrist and left ankle broken, and her body lacerated. She was removed to Laughter Undertaking Company's morgue. Another ambulance carried Miss Nena Kate Ramsey to the West Texas Baptist Sanitarium. She was borne immediately to the operating room, and X rays taken.

No fractures were revealed by the X-rays, and attending physicians said unless she was hurt internally her condition was not dangerous.

Miss Nena Kate Ramsey is acting head of the speech arts department of Simmons University and Miss Norma was a senior in Simmons.

Funeral services were held at the First Baptist church in Abilene, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the services being conducted by the pastor. Rev. Millard A. Jenkins and Rev. Willis P. Gerhart rector of the Heavenly Rest Episcopal church. Hundreds of relatives and friends were present to pay a last tribute and express sympathy to the heart broken family.

A quartet, composed of Mrs. Hugh Tandy, Cullen Willis, Miss Annie Bess Chambers and A. D. Whisenant sang special music, including the numbers, "Abide With Me," "Rock of Ages," and "When They Ring Those Golden Bells."

Pall bearers were Buck Matthews, Charles Bacon, Bob Brown, Bob Compton, William Goudy, Lloyd Browne, Ross Hall and Donald Burger.

Following the services at Abilene the remains, accompanied by many friends and relatives were brought to Baird for interment in Ross cemetery, where the maternal grand parents of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. D. Richard son, pioneer residents of Baird, were buried many years ago. Many friends of the family joined the procession here.

Norma Missouri Ramsey was born Nov. 27, 1906, at Baird, where her father practiced dentistry for many years. He retired in 1918 and moved to Abilene to educate his children.

She was graduated from the Abilene high school with the class of 1924 and since had done work in four institutions of higher learning; the University of London, Simmons University, College of Industrial Arts and Abilene Christian College.

Physical education was her vocation and she participated actively in major sports of all four schools. She was a member of the corps of asst. instructors and played on the soccer team at the physical education school of the University of London last year. She was in school in London with two sisters, Nena Kate and Comette, and the group toured Europe during their year's stay abroad. She had assisted in athletics at both Simmons and C.I.A.

Miss Ramsey would have received her bachelor of arts degree with the August graduating class of Simmons.

New Method of Hair Waving Shown At Marinello Shop

Mrs. L. O. Meadows, proprietor of the Marinello Beauty Parlor, held open house last Saturday to demonstrate, to a large number of visitors who thronged the place all day, the new method of permanent hair waving with the Zotos method of machineless waving.

The parlor was beautifully decorated with bowls of sweet peas and snapdragons and punch was served to all visitors.

Mrs. Meadows Marinello Shop is one of the selected few who is giving this new method of permanents, which is given without heat or machinery, the heat being supplied in the new wampets or sachets with which the hair comes down wet, soft and fluffy and is guaranteed to last until the wave grows off.

Many visitors were present to see this demonstration and all were highly pleased with the work and Mrs. Meadows informs us that she has given a number of the new waves this week. There were visitors here from Cross Plains, Clyde, Putnam, Oplin, and other parts of the county.

The car which sheriff Edwards believes was stolen was left at the station by three men who drove into the station and wanted to trade a spare tire for gasoline and when Mr. Hughes refused to comply with the request, the three men left the car and went hiking down the highway.

Deputy sheriff, Will Ray, of Clyde recovered a new Chevrolet coupe, which was stolen from Gladewater and arrested the driver, Jack Bruce, who is in jail here. The car was delivered Wednesday to a representative of the National Theft Bureau, by sheriff Edwards.

The lad was in school and did not need the saddle, said the one proffering it for sale.

Lotief Refuses Ticket To Free Banquet

Cross Plains, Texas
May 5, 1932

Mr. John M. Hendrix
Sweetwater, Texas.

Dear Sir:—
Thanks for your letter of invitation which included free ticket to legislative banquet, to be given by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, to the members and candidates for legislature.

I am sorry that I cannot be with you on that occasion as I feel it is my duty, as a candidate not to get in the habit of accepting invitations to free banquets or otherwise. It may lead one to be under obligation to those who are giving the feeds and no one can serve two masters at the same time. I think that was the main trouble with our past legislature. They accepted too many free meals, dances and other entertainments at the tax payers expense.

Too, the W. T. C. C. stand on the soldiers bonus does not meet with my approval. They have no right to fight the bonus bill that we all know those good ex-service men have earned; have earned every nickel that is coming to them.

This money not only will help them in these hard times but will be a great help to every line of business and will relieve retail trade all around us. It should not be called a bonus, it is a just debt that this government owes the ex-soldiers, who left their dear ones at home and went across the Atlantic ocean.

A Chamber of Commerce is not intended to be a political organization. It should be purely commercial for the benefit of all classes.

Respectfully

CECIL A. LOTIEF.

Scalp Is Heirloom
The scalp of an Indian chief slain by her father is among the cherished possessions of Mrs. Burch Young, of Fort Worth, Texas. This heirloom and other trappings taken from the dead warrior passed into her hands recently on the death of her mother, Mrs. Ira Long, widow of the former Texas ranger captain of frontier fame. Captain Long died in 1913 at seventy-one. The Indian chief was killed by Captain Long in a hand-to-hand encounter in Lost valley in Jack county, Texas, more than fifty years ago.

Hogs Respond to Good Treatment

Clean House and Lot a Big Help in Profitable Raising.

Hog growers who are practicing sanitation, feeding of a protein supplement and a mineral mixture, using self feeders and vaccinating their pigs, are finding that these recommended practices pay.

This is the statement of George R. Henderson, county extension agent at large for the Colorado Agricultural college, who has made a survey of hog production methods on 80 farms. Here is what he found regarding sanitation:

Farmers who change their hog lots at least every two years are saving an average of six and one-half pigs per litter, compared to four and one-fifth pigs per litter saved by those who simply clean their farrowing houses, but let the pigs run on old ground. Farmers who neither change lots nor clean the farrowing houses are saving an average of three and nine-tenths pigs per litter, which is considered too low to enable the grower to break even on the enterprise.

Pigs in the feed lot also respond to a good system of sanitation, it was found.

Where hog lots are changed and houses cleaned, farmers are marketing hogs at 210 pounds in 213 days or taking about 290 days to produce 200-pound hogs. Where houses are cleaned, but lots are not changed, hogs are marketed at 188 pounds in 225 days, or at 200 pounds in 240 days. Where no sanitation system is followed, it takes 216 days for pigs to average 176 pounds, and 245 days to produce 200-pound hogs. "In order to make money on hogs," says Henderson, "leading farmers have found that they must follow certain practices. One of these is sanitation. Sanitation means clean sows, clean houses, clean lots and clean pastures."

Handle Potatoes So as to Avoid Any Bruising

Too often men handle potatoes as if they were stones, forgetting that every injury reduces quality. Bruising potatoes is an expensive practice. It offsets the good all previous efforts have done to produce a quality crop.

The digging should be done if possible when soils are neither too wet nor too dry. Wet soils discolor tubers badly, while dry soil slips through the digger, leaving the potatoes to be bruised on the apron. By padding and substituting smooth rollers for the agitators this danger is reduced. Deep digging provides more dirt to protect the potatoes from machine damage. Deep digging gets all the crop. Then, too, sunning the potatoes toughens them. Further, quality is protected by picking in a padded half-bushel for a couple of hours after digging and hauling to the storage in crates. In addition padding the grader, especially the apron, running the grader slowly and placing something soft under the sacks being filled, are necessary in securing the type of potatoes most demanded by the trade. Such precautions, if generally practiced, would add considerable value to the crop.

Better Sires Pay Well

Good bulls—bulls of high producing strains and with great prepotency as breeders—increase the productivity and, hence, the profitability of the dairy herd.

Just suppose, for easy figuring, that a herd of 10 daughters produce 100 pounds of butter fat per year each more than did a herd consisting of their 10 dams. That is 1,000 pounds of butter fat. Suppose that it was worth 40 cents a pound, which it should be in average times. That's 40,000 cents, or $400, and it is mostly clear velvet over the profits made in the herd of dams.

Would it pay to use better sires and receive that increased income, or even higher income? Well, it has paid and is now paying a great many dairymen.—Idaho Farmer.

Insulate Poultry House

Tests at Nebraska Agricultural college indicate that at the usual prices insulation for a 20 by 20-foot poultry house will cost about $50 or about 40 cents per bird housed. If this cost is spread over the life of the house, it amounts to about two eggs per hen per winter.

We know by experience that quick changes in temperature in winter may throw a flock out of production for several days or even for the rest of the winter, just when egg prices are the highest. It seems quite reasonable that good insulation with its effective influence on slowing up temperature changes inside the house should help very materially in keeping up the winter egg production and should pay several times over the small cost.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Ensiling Don't Kill Weeds

Weed seed which has gone through the process of ensiling in a silo is not necessarily made harmless for growing in the fields later on, a ten-year experiment conducted in the silos of the dairy department at the Kansas Agricultural college shows. In fact, the tests indicated that some noxious weed seed seemed to be strengthened by soaking in silage for several months. In some cases, weed seed that had been in the silo three years was still viable.

POULTRY

NO BEST WAY TO FEED CHICKENS

Emphasis Must Be Laid on Completeness of Ration.

Recent developments in rearing poultry have brought out new feeding methods, each with its supporters who see the method rather than the feed, says Prof. L. C. Norris of the New York State College of Agriculture, who adds that there is no best way to feed poultry as long as the emphasis is laid on the completeness of the ration.

When birds are kept indoors it becomes more difficult, but not impossible, to meet the hens' feed requirements, because green feed of the proper type, and bugs and worms, have been automatically removed from their ration. Many food substances needed by hens may be in these natural foods, picked from the range. The only way out of such a situation is to make use of the so-called protective feed-stuffs, such as milk and dried leafy green feeds.

The same food needs can be provided in an all-mash as in a scratch mash ration, says Professor Norris. Where an all-mash ration is used it must not be too bulky, but should be more concentrated than when a scratch mixture of cracked corn and wheat is fed in addition to a bulky mash. When any one of the proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts, or vitamins is lacking, then poor growth, low egg production and lowered disease resistance results.

For good growth it appears that from 18 to 20 per cent of protein is needed in the chick ration for the first few weeks. Afterwards the protein content may be gradually reduced to 15 or 16 per cent at twelve weeks of age. Laying hens need about 15 or 16 per cent of protein in their ration. Pullets during the first six months of egg laying need slightly more protein as egg production is accompanied by slow growth.

Wide variations in feeding methods are allowable, says Doctor Norris, as long as the hens get enough of a ration that has the essential nutritive values.

Hole in Roof Is Poor

Cutting a hole in the roof is a poor way to ventilate the poultry building because it allows considerable heat to escape, making the house cold, says Prof. A. C. Smith, chief of the poultry division at University farm, St. Paul. Running a shaft through the roof to near the floor is also a faulty method because much of the moisture will escape the shaft and accumulate near the top of the room where the air is warmest.

The easiest and simplest method of keeping the poultry house comfortable with reference to temperature, moisture and ventilation, Mr. Smith says, is to have it equipped with windows just like those used in dwellings and then use the upper sash for ventilating during extremely cold weather. The sash may be dropped any distance required by the conditions of wind and weather, but it should never be completely closed, even on the coldest night.

There is no automatic system of ventilation that will give complete satisfaction, Mr. Smith says. Any system used will require adjustment and sometimes this will have to be given several times a day.

Disinfect Drinking Water in Henhouse

A good homemade disinfectant for the drinking water in the poultry house is a calcium-hypochlorite solution. To make it, take one 13-ounce can of chloride of lime, one-half pound of fine table salt, and one gallon of hot water. Mix and dissolve; allow the lime and the salt to settle, and use only the clear liquid.

Prepare the mixture in earthenware or glass jars and keep it protected from the light. The solution should not be kept more than ten days. Two table-spoonsful of the solution for each gallon of drinking water disinfects satisfactorily.

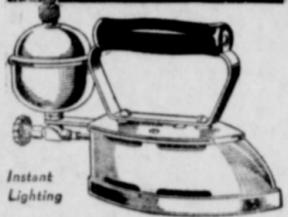

Follow Directions

The manufacturer's directions should be followed, to the letter in determining the temperature at which to keep the eggs within an incubator. The manufacturer did all the experimenting that need be done, and his recommendations, he gives are as nearly accurate as it is possible to make them. The thermometer should be placed just exactly as directed, then the incubator operator will know that the temperature for the eggs is as it should be.

Proper Insulation

Proper insulation is as important as good ventilation for poultry houses. South Dakota authorities agree that while condensation of moisture is reduced with rapid changes of air, yet in thoroughly insulated houses it is not necessary to speed up circulation of air so much as in poorly insulated houses. Other South Dakota tests indicate that hens receiving yellow corn in scratch and mash lay 25 per cent more eggs and consume less mash than hens receiving white corn.

Unusual Lion Speeds Bishop
When the bishop of Blackburn was photographed with a lion at a circus in Blackpool, England, recently, the flashlight made the lion restive, and the bishop and his party left the tent as speedily as dignified bishops can exit. The bishop had been conducting a mission on the Blackpool beach, and, with other clergymen, visited the circus to talk to the performers. The photograph, the flash and the plight interrupted the conversation.

Wanted to Know
"John, it says here the government has a plan to thaw out the frozen assets of the banks," remarked Mrs. Dumbell.

"Well, what of it?" he asked.

"Why, don't the banks hire plumbers to do that?" she inquired.

DO YOU KNOW WHY --- You Should Never Try to Fool Wifey Unless You're Sure She Knows You?

TO AVOID DULLNESS IN MARITAL STATE

It is a mistake to think that two people can, in this Twentieth century, live their whole lives happily, successfully and abundantly on the basis that husband and wife are one, unless each party to the arrangement is free to follow his or her own tastes and fancies. Otherwise you inevitably get boredom and unbearable dullness. Dullness has wrecked many marriages which otherwise would have been successful.

I have eliminated the possibility of dullness. On two days each week I never see my husband. It has proved a really sound arrangement. I do what I like, go out with friends I choose, even though some of them he dislikes and others he thinks just silly. Still, he does not object. For those two days we live our lives apart as if we had no mutual responsibilities at all.

He chooses his own friends. Some of his friends I dislike as much as he dislikes some of mine. Others are just dull and uninteresting.

The days we are together we enjoy each other more because we have been apart. We are each of us refreshed and have something new to talk about. It is not a bad plan, and I might even say that it is a plan which many other people might find very suitable. They will be surprised at the results. —Anita Loos in the London Saturday Review.

Camels and Locomotives

One of the biggest concrete bridges in the world is along the new railway lines being built through Turkey. Although only a little over 500 miles long, the two lines penetrate difficult country, necessitating the building of about 2,000 bridges, large and small, and many tunnels. In Angora an average of 8,000 blasts of dynamite a day are used to dislodge the rocky wastes. More than 18,000 peasants and shepherds are employed on the work besides thousands of peasant women who labor as stone breakers. An oriental touch is given to the picture by the thousands of camels used to transport supplies as the building progresses.

WHEN CHRIST COMES THE SECOND TIME

"And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from the heavens, and destroyed them all.

EVEN THUS SHALL IT BE in the day when the Son of man is revealed." No. 88 Jesus in Luke.

MAN MADE THE TOWN

by RUBY M. AYRES

At twenty-two the only thing Diana really desired was another woman's husband. A nervous wreck from the excitement and strain of London's gay life, she is taken by her aunt, Mrs. Gladwyn, to a famous specialists' office. The physician orders her to the country for a long rest. She rebels, but the doctor is handsome and sympathetic. She learns that he is not the great man himself but an assistant Dr. Rathbone. "God made the country and man made the town," he tells her, and she agrees to go to a rural retreat.

Before she leaves she goes to Dennis Waterman's flat, where they are surprised by Linda, Dennis's wife, who takes the situation quite calmly. "I suppose she wants you to marry her?" she asks Dennis.

At the night club where she goes with Dennis, Diana collapses. She regains consciousness in a little country cottage, with a nurse, Miss Starling, bending over her. Dr. Rathbone's home was close by, Miss Starling told her.

After three weeks Dennis Waterman calls. He tells her he will have to go away, and his manner, as he leaves her, suggests that his love is waning. But Dennis has not been gone many days before Diana finds herself asking Miss Starling all sorts of questions about Dr. Rathbone.

Not long afterwards she learns that there is a woman living in Dr. Rathbone's house, a woman named Rosalie. Then Diana meets Rosalie in the woods; she acts strangely and leaves Diana puzzled.

Soon after the meeting in the woods with Rosalie, Dr. Rathbone calls again at Diana's cottage.

A cablegram from Dennis arrives. He is returning from America. That interrupts what might have been a tender episode between Diana and the Doctor. He leaves; later Dennis cables that his return will be delayed. Diana thirsting for love, turns her thoughts again to Dr. Rathbone. She is thinking of him now as "Donald." Regardless of the mysterious Rosalie, Diana resolves to see Dr. Rathbone. She goes to his house, but, as she stands at the front door the doctor's big police dog leaps at her and she feels his teeth tearing at her throat.

Rathbone saves her from the beast, dresses her wounds and takes her to her own cottage. Both realize now that this is love, but Dr. Rathbone tells Diana that he can be no more than a friend, because of things in his life which he refuses to explain. He urges her to go back to London.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

TENTH INSTALLMENT

And then, as there was no answering smile on his face, she sighed and went on.

"I wish I understood about myself. Sometimes I think that you understand, that you know all about me, only you won't explain to me. Why won't you?"

"Perhaps because I'm not clever enough. Perhaps because I know I should only hurt you."

Diana was looking down at the little three cornered scar on her slender arm.

"Well, I've got this to remember you by, anyway," she said ruefully.

He made a swift movement, as if of protest, then stood still again.

"Nothing more than that?" he asked. She raised her eyes.

"Yes, much more," she said. "I shall always remember you as the dearest, best—"

"Don't make me conceited."

She sat down in the chair in which he had sat to dress her arm, leaning her chin on its high back and looking up at him.

Well, that's that, she said in a puzzled sort of way. "When do you want me to go?"

He smiled at the question.

"Well, not today or tomorrow," he said whimsically. "I only thought that before Mrs. Gladwyn comes back—"

"Supposing she never comes back."

"We won't suppose anything so unlikely, and besides, I must see that left arm a great deal better before I let you out of my sight."

"Then I hope it NEVER gets better," Diana said.

Dennis had come down for one last visit before Diana returned to London. He was full of plans for their future but Diana found herself cold to all of them. His caresses failed to thrill her as they had before her illness.

Finally Dennis flung away from her and gone back to London. His angry departure had failed to stir her, although it left her with the feeling her world was falling away from her.

She wondered if her love for him had died. And the thought, strangely, carried with it no regret.

And then suddenly came the revelation that it was Donald she loved, maddeningly, distractingly. She knew then she could never be happy with any other man.

"To-morrow," Diana said to herself, "to-morrow I am going to London."

She was glad because it was Rathbone whom she loved; a man surely worthy of the best life could give him, and in some strange way that gladness overweighed the knowledge that, even supposing he cared for her in return, he would never tell her so. But she could not believe that he cared—why should he? There were so many women in the world more deserving of happiness than she—noble, unselfish women—not just selfish, spoilt—useless. Then she was conscious of a great fear; fear because all her life she would have to do without him; that would be hardest of all to bear.

When morning came she found that out of the mass of confused thought only one fact had struggled; she must keep her pride what-ever happened. Nobody must ever know, nobody must ever dream that she had loved him and her love had not been returned.

"I may as well go away with Dennis, or anybody else who wants me," she told herself recklessly, as she watched the creeping daylight. "I can't ever have the man I want, so nothing matters."

CHAPTER XV

Diana made a quick trip up to London to do some shopping. She had lunch with Dennis, who told her Linda was going to Paris and begged her to run away with him.

She kept putting him off with indecisive replies to his urgent begging and he finally drove her back to the country. She promised him, as she was kissing him good-bye, that she would give him an answer in a few days.

Miss Starling told her, when Dennis had left:

"Dr. Rathbone came just after lunch."

"Oh," Diana's voice was studiously indifferent.

"He left a message for you."

"Oh," Diana said again. "What was it?" she asked as Miss Starling kept silence.

"He asked me to tell you that he did not consider there was any real need for him to call any more—that he had arranged with Dr. Finlay to look after you regularly, and that he hoped you would approve. He asked me to say that, of course, if you wished to see him again particularly, he would be pleased to arrange to call or for you to go to his consulting room in London." The Creature was knitting so rapidly now that the needles flashed dazzlingly in the afternoon sunlight.

Diana closed her eyes.

"Thank you. That will do nicely," she said, uncertainly.

When, a little later, Miss Starling had gone for her usual constitutional, Diana sent a telegram.

It was addressed to Dennis Waterman at some West End Club, and consisted of only two words:

"Yes, Diana."

Diana left the cottage very quietly on the Friday afternoon. She told the Creature she was going to dinner and a theatre with Dennis Waterman and would not be home until late.

Diana drove straight to Mrs. Gladwyn's house when she got to London. She was not expected, and the maids seemed rather flustered by her sudden arrival.

She intended to pack a small suit case for which Dennis would presently send his chauffeur, and after that—well, after that her mind was a blank—after that nothing would matter very much. Nothing mattered very much now, if it came to that. Diana was amazed because she felt so cold and unconcerned.

Even the thought of Rathbone hardly distressed her. That episode, precious as it had been, was definitely ended.

She did not know what plans Dennis had made, and she hardly cared. Since the afternoon she sent that wire she had often wondered why she had done it. It was not because she WANTED to go with Dennis except that deep down in her heart was a foolish, feverish hope that perhaps he could help her to forget—could drug her senses and take away the endless pain of loneliness and longing.

Dennis was the one creature in the world of whose love she was confident, and so she had turned to him as a half-frozen outcast would turn to the first fire that gleams through the night.

She had no regrets—nothing mattered.

At seven o'clock she sent the maid for a taxi and put on her cloak. She would be a little early for Dennis, perhaps, but the silence and memories of this room worried her—it would be better to get out and mingle with the noise and bustle again.

She went down to the waiting taxi, leaving orders about the suit case. She did not care if her aunt's maids suspected anything; she knew it would not be the first time she had set them all talking. It was only really genuine people like Miss Starling and Jonas who made one feel ashamed.

The cab stopped, and a commissionaire hurried to open the door. Dennis had chosen to meet her at this small, rather unpretentious restaurant because he said they would unlikely to meet anyone they knew, and it was Diana herself who had suggested the theatre. "It's so long since I saw a play," was the excuse she made, but that was not the real reason. It was because she felt the desperate need of excitement to help her—of stimulant to give her courage; if Dennis offered her champagne to-night she would certainly not refuse. She walked into the little lounge and sat down by the fire. It was very quiet—just the kind of place runaway people would choose, Diana thought cynically.

The swing door moved noisily, and Diana turned. If it was Dennis—Diana stared blankly for a moment at the woman who came in—stared, and thought herself mad or dreaming, for the woman was Linda Waterman.

She was alone, and their recognition was mutual before Linda came across the lounge with easy confidence, beautifully gowned and looking young and untroubled.

"How strange—that you should be here," she said. "Dennis tells me you have been very ill. I hope you are better."

"Yes—yes, thank you."

Linda held her hands to the warmth. There was a large diamond on one finger that caught the light and sparkled into cold white flashes of fire.

Diana was very pale, and the vivid blue of her gown intensified her pallor. She was wondering vaguely what would happen when Dennis arrived. Something seemed to tell her that of them all he would be the only one seriously disturbed. With an effort she forced herself to speak.

"Did you have a good holiday in America?"

"It was hardly a holiday. I had so much business to attend to. Dennis hated it—he was longing to get back all the time."

Her eyes dwelt on Diana's face with half amused interest.

"Are you waiting for him now?" she asked abruptly.

Diana's lips moved, and she flushed crimson, but no words would come, and Linda said with an unconcerned laugh:

"You need not mind telling me if you are. I have not come here to spy on you—it's just bad luck that we should both have chosen the same rendezvous. I am waiting for a friend myself."

Diana rose to her feet.

"I thought you were in Paris," she stammered, and then wondered why, of all the things she might have said she should have chosen words that were surely an admission.

Linda shrugged her shoulders.

"I suppose Dennis told you so? Well, I wanted him to believe I was going to Paris," she said quietly. "It suited me for him to think so." She laughed again. "It's very odd, but it never seems to occur to my noble husband that perhaps I too have my secret orchard."

She held out the hand that wore the big diamond and stared at it meditatively.

"I'm rather glad you and I have met again," she said. "I intended to write to you soon, anyway."

"To WRITE to me?"

The burning colour rose again to Diana's face—she felt utterly at a disadvantage. Linda was so assured, so cool—she was sure at last that Linda no longer cared for Dennis.

"You need not look so angry," Dennis's wife said calmly. "I know you hate me, but you need not. I quite like you, Diana; if it were not for Dennis, I believe we could be good friends."

She moved suddenly, coming a little closer the girl.

"I suppose Dennis never told you that I offered to divorce him, did he?" she asked interestedly. "I assure you I did—before we went to America, the night you dined at the flat."

ON ACCOUNT OF OURSELVES

If our products are good and if we have been of service to the community in which we live, then our existence is fully justified. If we have been consistent with the above requirements then we merit your 100% support and patronage.

FIRST We operate a sanitary bakery. It is open for your inspection at all times. We make bread that we believe improves as it matures during the second, third and possibly fourth days. If it does this it is evidence that we use wholesome ingredients and give careful attention to the baking—

SECOND We use the T. & P. Railroad for freight and express shipments when possible to do so. We have thereby rendered aid to a wonderful Railway system and indirectly, a help to those who are employed by it and depend on the Railway Company to sustain them and their families—

THIRD We use all the Callahan County products we possibly can in the operation of this Bakery— We use Callahan County flour milled at Putnam. This supports another county industry, and does our part toward making it possible for farmers to exchange their wheat for good flour right here at home.

FOURTH We have assisted in the maintenance of our City Government, City Schools, County Organization, and have joined others in feeding the sick and needy.

FIFTH We have consistently and continuously spent our money in this community with the Doctors, Attorneys, Lumber Yards, Picture Show, Cafes, Garages, Filling Stations, Tailor Shops, The Printing Office, Barbers, Dry Goods Merchants, Grocery Merchants, Hardware Merchants, Meat Markets, Drug Stores, Telephone Company, Western Union, West Texas Utilities Co., The Community Natural Gas Co., Milk Dealers, Shoe Shine Boys, Farmers and other citizens in general.

Do Not Bite The Hand That is Feeding You

Not long ago one of our county officers ordered groceries. The order was filled with bread baked in another county. Our county officer returned the bread and told the merchant he would not use anything but ours. He also told the merchant that the baker whose bread he first received did not in any manner contribute to the salary he received at our Court House. WE APPRECIATE THE WAY HE REASONED WITH HIMSELF.

Whether you are a county officer or not the same principle applies—When you purchase bread we wish you would emphasize the fact that you want the order filled with our bread.

Market Prices

It is generally conceded the larger cities set the prices. If so then Abilene prices would prevail as a standard. Since Dec. 1st, our bread has been retailed to you at 1 cent to 3 cents, (16.2-3% to 60%) less per loaf than Abilene Bakery bread was retailing at Abilene. At the present time our bread is retailing at 2 cents (40%) less per loaf than Abilene Bakery bread in Abilene.

In Conclusion

We never advise anyone to leave here for purchases. On the other hand, we tell them they can obtain better quality needs here for less money than anywhere.

Please do not use bread made out of the county. It injures our business for you to thoughtlessly do so. Look for our bread. Insist on having no other kind.
