Winners In Better Lighting Contest Receives Awards

Awards totaling $50 this week were delivered to three Baird homes by L. F. Foster, local manager for the West Texas Utilities Company, following a 60-day home lighting contest which resulted in greatly improved lighting conditions in over a hundred residences here.

First award of $25 went to Mrs. R. C. Corn; second award of $15 to Mrs. W. O. Wylie Jr.; and third award of $10 to Mrs. Ace Hickman. (Mrs. Annie L. Pretz, Mrs. E. H. Adams and Mrs. Earl Johnson received honorable mention.)

Winners were selected by three judges named by the Baird Parent Teachers Association. Judges visited each home entered in the contest. They reported lighting improvements as being so marked that decisions were close for all three awards.

Mr. Foster expressed appreciation for the assistance of city and county officials, residents and particularly the P. T. A. for the co-operation which made the campaign a success.

"Our goal was to demonstrate the value of good light as a means of conserving eyesight," he declared. "I believe we have accomplished this."

According to R. R. St. John, head of the company's lighting department, Baird homes set a model for other West Texas towns. The photograph of Mrs. Corn, showing a section of her well-lighted living room, is being sent to every newspaper in the territory, he said. A news story will call attention to Baird's generally improved lighting conditions.

Hundreds of demonstrations were conducted in homes here, showing that "quality" of light is even more important than "quantity". The dangers of glare and sudden contrasts in light as effecting the eyes were pointed out by lighting advisors, headed by T. J. "Bud" Gavin.

Foster said the "story of good light" will be continued here "until every resident has had an opportunity to improve his seeing conditions, with or without expense

There are 1623 farms and ranches in Callahan according to the 1935 census. A minimum of one man for each ten has been requested as the county quota.

The Hindenburg sinks into a flaming inferno after explosion which cost 36 lives at Lakehurst, N. J.

ZEP CRASH KILLS 36 AT LAKEHURST

20 Passengers, 44 of Crew Survive As Hindenburg Explodes.

THIRTY-SIX persons were killed and many injured as a series of explosions shattered and burned the German dirigible air liner Hindenburg when she attempted to moor at Lakehurst, N. J., at the end of her first trans-Atlantic crossing of the season. The catastrophe began with an explosion of the highly inflammable hydrogen gas with which the ship was filled, in one of the rear gas cells.

There were 97 on board. Forty-four of the crew of 61 escaped with their lives and 20 of the 36 passengers survived. One member of the ground crew died of injuries received as he was trying to aid in bringing the great silver liner to earth.

The morning after the disaster smoke was still curling from the mangled skeleton of what had once been the world's largest flying vessel. There were still a few bodies unidentified or unaccounted for.

In a section of the crew's quarters in the hangar which had hastily been transformed into a morgue, a small group of men and women filed past the charred remains of 28 of the victims in an attempt to identify them. Other detachments of sailors guarded all approaches to the wreck of the airship and all information was refused.

Inquiries Under Way
Three inquiries into the tragedy were to get under way. Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper was expected to be on hand to take charge of an investigation by the bureau of air commerce.

Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the United States navy, arrived to head a separate naval inquiry. Hans Luther, German ambassador to the United States, flew in and immediately went into conference with officials of the American Zeppelin company.

All this official activity, however, attracted little notice, for the mind of everyone is still concerned with the horror of the tragedy and in the ears of those who witnessed it still echo the screams of the victims as men were blown through the heavy glass window of the ship's observation room.

What caused the explosion probably never will be known to a certainty. And as to exactly what happened—the beginning and the end of the event were so closely merged together that even here the versions vary.

Even Capt. Ernst Lehmann, veteran of ten successful round trips on the ill-fated Hindenburg, could only mumble, as he fell into the arms of an American friend: "I don't understand. . . I don't understand."

The following, however, is the story as related by E. W. Kirkpatrick, one of the ground crew who was standing directly beneath the huge silver bag when it burst into flames.

Describes Liner's Arrival
The Zeppelin was scheduled to have been moored at 6 p. m. There were several hundred persons on the edge of the large landing field waiting to cheer the successful end of her first trip across the Atlantic this year. Among them were several holding tickets for the return journey, for after a quick refueling and inspection the Hindenburg was to have started back at midnight.

It was first seen over the field at 4:12 p. m. (eastern daylight time) after making its customary cruise over New York. There was some electrical disturbance and a steady rain was falling. The lightning, however, was not considered by those on the ground as sufficient to be dangerous. Nevertheless the Hindenburg circled around the field and disappeared. More than an hour later its engines were again heard, but the ship itself was out of sight because of the rain. It did not appear again until about five minutes after seven, flying low and passing to the northwest. Just at this time, it was explained, there was a shift of the wind from the south-southwest to southeast, which made it necessary for the Zeppelin to come down to the field from the northwest. After maneuvering for 15 minutes it swung low over the field at an altitude of from 150 to 200 feet and at 7:20 the mooring lines were dropped over the side. Two hundred men of the ground crew rushed in to grab the lines and start the 100-yard pull to the mooring mast. It was not two minutes later that there came an explosion from the stern of the ship, followed almost instantly by another, and another, forward.

Almost immediately, several witnesses declared, a blinding sheet of flame enveloped the entire ship.

Confused Nightmare.
So quickly did it happen that the covering was entirely burned off and the bare skeleton of the ship's duraluminum ribs was visible behind the sputtering flame and smoke before it touched the ground.

What happened next is just a confused nightmare to those who watched it. Miraculous though it seems, those who were literally blown from the ship can thank the force of the explosion for saving their lives. The ship by that time was not far from the ground.

There was a rush toward the scene then, as though everyone was drawn by an invisible magnet. Men from the quartermaster corps who had been standing by ran for a ship. Three trucks, a four-seater airline bus and several private cars were driven quickly across the field.

Men jumped to the ground, tearing their way through the bursting flames, and were dragged to safety.

The heat from the flaming ship was so intense, however, that rescue work was prevented for several minutes.

All those minutes are nothing but the reaction of confused impression by those who were there. And probably scores of acts of heroism will go unrecorded and unpraised—both on the part of rescuers on the ground and of the passengers.

Rosendahl Acts Quickly.

This chaos, however, did not last long. Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl, in charge of the naval airport, was standing beneath the spreading stations of the mooring mast. It did not take long for him to galvanize into action. A cordon of men was thrown around the burning mass to keep back the crowd. Other men were dispatched to rush through calls for nurses and doctors and ambulances from surrounding towns and villages. Meanwhile the injured were rushed to the emergency hospital on the field and given first aid for their burns.

"I was standing directly beneath the ship when the first explosion came," Kirkpatrick said. "All of us in the ground crew were reaching for the ropes and were ready to haul her across the field. With that first explosion—it was like a huge puff of igniting gas that sometimes happens when you open a furnace door—we all ran back. From there I turned and saw the fire leap out. Another explosion came further forward. By that time the whole ship was in flames. It didn't come to the ground with a crash, though. It just seemed to sink down easily, like a floating fire balloon on the Fourth of July. I don't even remember hearing any crash even when it hit, though I suppose there was one."

Mrs. Margaret Unger of Maywood, N. J., was one of those waiting to make the return voyage on the Hindenburg.

"It was the most horrible thing I ever saw in my life," she said, still white and trembling from her experience. "I wanted to look away but I couldn't. I didn't hear any explosion because I was too far away. But I saw the ship start to sink, and then a huge burst of flames. It seemed to sweep over the airship all at once, and I saw three, maybe more, exploded out of the windows."

Ship Out of Control.
Ames Camp of Lakewood, N. J., another witness, said the ship "appeared to yaw as she dropped her mooring lines. It swung almost a full half circle and seemed to be extremely hard to manage."

"Then came the flash and I didn't wait to see any more. I ran toward the ship with the rest of them."

Although the Zeppelin continued to burn for several hours and was still smouldering at daylight, it took only a matter of seconds to render it a skeleton of wreckage.

Late arrivals among the army of newspaper men, photographers and radio men found the roads blocked with cars and had to race back to Newark and return by plane.

Search for bodies of the victims continued by the light of the huge navy field floodlights. Work was later postponed until daylight, partly because the metal embers were still too hot to allow the searchers to make any progress.

Speculate on Cause.
There was much speculation as to what caused the explosion. Naval experts offered a possible explanation that it might have been caused by the grounding of wet ground lines, causing a spark which ignited "free gas."

F. W. Von Meister, vice president of the American Zeppelin company, offered two theories—the first that it had been caused by an electric current induced by static; the second that the gas was set off by sparks from the exhaust when the engine was throttled down for a landing. This, he said, seemed plausible, as the ship was valving gas gently as she came on the field, tossing over ballast to reduce her altitude.

"Ordinarily," he said, "she would have been expected to be perfectly safe the moment she dropped her lines."

Report by Rosendahl.
Commander Rosendahl forwarded a complete report both to the commandant of the fourth naval district in Philadelphia, his immediate superior, and to headquarters of the navy department in Washington.

His explanation of what happened tallied in the main with that of unofficial witnesses. According to his report, however, it was four minutes after the giant ship had made contact with the ground that the flames burst out.

"Four minutes later," he states, "fire broke out aft, working progressively forward. The ship settled to the ground tall first and was completely on fire by the time the ground was reached. The fire burned for several hours and was finally extinguished by chemicals."

"Out of 97 on board, 64 escaped alive, including 44 of the crew of 61 and 20 of the 36 passengers. Two of the 20 passengers, however, are seriously injured. Twenty-six bodies have been recovered, of which nine are still unidentified."

GEORGE VI, ELIZABETH CROWNED

Five Million Voices Cry, "God Save the King!" as Guns Boom Glad Tidings From Historic Tower of London.

London, England.—"God save the King!"

As the great guns of the Tower of London boomed forth the news that the Archbishop of Canterbury had placed the weighty Crown of St. Edward, the Crown of England, upon the head of George VI, the cry came forth in a mighty swell from five million throats as from the throat of one man.

This was the climax of the greatest show on earth, a show for which a generous share of the throng which lined the six and one-half miles of the processional route had waited without moving from their places through the dampness of a London spring night and, indeed, through part of the preceding day.

Those of the King's subjects who had not been able to afford $2 to $250 for a seat that would assure them a glimpse of their new monarch on his proudest day began marking off space along the curb on the afternoon of May 11. Smart alecks who thought they could put off their vigil until sunrise of Coronation Day were doomed to stretch their necks an inch or two in twelve hours of straining to see over several rows of earlier arrivals.

"A Quiet Empire."

It was a heavy day of work at the end of many back-breaking weeks of preparation for the 9,000 gentlemen and ladies of the peerage whose rank and purse entitled them to sit for an entire day in 10 to 25 pounds of clothing per capita, on a hard seat 19 inches wide without ever moving. But it was a magnificent show.

"The Lord give you fruitful lands and healthful seasons," said the archbishop in the benediction which followed the crowning of the King. "victorious fleets and armies, and a quiet Empire. . ."

No one in Britain could deny that in a time of world-wide unrest, a time of urgent necessity for imperial strength and unity, the political expediency of "a quiet Empire" prompted the government to make of this the most splendid coronation in all history. The government expense in the crowning of George VI has been estimated to be double that in the coronation of his father 26 years ago; its backing of the dazzling pageantry required expenditures of $2,620,000 of public funds, not counting an estimated $500,000 spent by the royal household in entertaining royal and foreign guests.

In the vast coronation pageant the government hoped to lend new emphasis to that sentiment which is the real bond holding the empire together, and which is symbolized by the crown and the man who wears it. There is still an undercurrent of dissatisfaction over the abdication of Edward VIII. The new King and Queen must be popularized to the fullest possible extent. The coronation was an opportunity to accomplish this, and the government could afford to let none of it slip past.

The show and the crowd lived up to all advance billing. It was estimated that there were 300,000 visitors who had to cross the ocean. All London's 12,000 hotel rooms were sold out. Souvenir manufacturers and vendors did the expected land office business. The drink bill for toasting the new King was guesstimated at $10,000,000.

Queen Goes First.
Pomp and regal solemnity were byword of the day from the time the King and Queen boarded the coronation coach at Buckingham Palace in mid-morning. Eight magnificent cream-colored horses drew the ancient four-ton vehicle down the streets it has traversed since 1761, when it was built for Queen Anne. In its heavily ornate gold and jewels it carried the spectators back through the pages of history to those days before the American colonies had revolted and prevented the British Empire from including the lion's share of North America.

The ancient coach, a tradition at coronations, bore the royal couple down the mall to the Abbey, where the Queen's procession left the King to enter first, so that she could stand and wait for him by the chairs of state, or recognition chairs, in front of the royal box where the other members of the royal family were seated.

Peers and peeresses were in their places before the central figures of the coronation drama arrived. And before them the real martyrs had assumed their positions. These were the eight newspaper photographers the government had permitted to be present.

Abhorring the thought of flash bulbs marring the solemnity of such an occasion, but still anxious that pictures be taken, officials hit upon a solution. They provided camouflaged quarters for camera men in false pillars and other positions which blended into the background of the Abbey. Narrow slits in the walls of these refuges enabled the cameras to peer out at the spectacle. But the poor "photogs!" They had to be "set up" before anyone entered the Abbey and maintain their cramped positions for eight or nine hours. They were not permitted to withdraw until everyone else had left.

History's Greatest Gem Display.

A general color scheme of blue and gold with rich, soft velvet hangings made a brilliant background for the cast and for the spectators in their gorgeous uniforms and gowns. Peeresses wore robes of crimson velvet, trimmed in ermine, unless they happened to be of royal blood, in which event they were required to don the purple velvet of royalty. The court gowns worn underneath were of white, cream, silver or gold. Fashion experts estimated that the most economical of them cost at least $1,200. Uniforms of the men started at about $600 and went up from there.

This did not, of course, include the jewelry of the coronets. The cheapest coronet could hardly have been purchased for less than $100. The total of all the rings, bracelets, necklaces, etc., worn by the 9,000 present must have run into the millions, and was probably the most costly and magnificent display of gems ever worn in one place at one time in the world's history.

The Crown of St. Edward, or Crown of England, made for Charles II in 1662 and worn, because of its excessive weight, for but a fleeting moment by George VI during the coronation ceremony.

Rank of the members of the nobility was indicated by the amount of ermine on the robes of the women and the length of their trains. A duchess was marked by four rows of ermine on her robe, and a train two yards long. A marchioness was permitted three and one-half rows of ermine and a one-and-three-fourths-yard train; a countess half a row less of ermine, half a yard less train; rank was further graded down at half a row and half a yard per classification.

The head of the procession, which had included a great list of dignitaries, the King's representatives and royal persons with their families from all over the world had been waiting at the west door of the Abbey, and as the royal coach approached, filed in to await their monarch. Following them came the chaplains, deans and officers of Westminster, then the archbishops with the Queen consort and the ladies and gentlemen of the court.

Noblemen close behind bore the staff and the sceptre, with the cross and the golden spurs, and the three swords which signify mercy, temporal justice and spiritual justice. These were the trappings of St. Edward, with which English kings are invested.

Then came more dignitaries, and the King's sceptre with the dove symbolic of mercy and equity; the King's gold and diamond orb, surmounted by the Christian cross; the crown of St. Edward, the patent and the chalice and the Bible.

Then entered George VI in the crimson robes of state, to join his Queen, and march through the choir and up the stairs to the theatre. Passing the thrones, they then knelt at the faldstools before the recognition chairs to offer prayers. Next they proceeded about the Abbey to all four sides before the view of the assemblage. The King went to his chair and once more faced each side of the Abbey as the Archbishop, in loud tones, announced him.

After the regalia had been brought and placed by the dean of Westminster upon the altar, the Archbishop asked the King, according to ritual, "Sire, is your Majesty willing to take the oath?" and the King answered, "I am willing." He gave his oath to govern the peoples of the British Isles and the Empire according to their laws and customs; to maintain the profession of the Gospel and the Church of England. After he had kissed the Bible and signed the oath, the King repeated and subscribed to the declaration required by parliament and, with the assemblage, prepared for the communion service.

Following this lengthy service, the King, having first removed the cap and robes of state, ascended to the throne of St. Edward, the ancient chair which contains beneath its seat the historic Stone of Scone upon which the kings of Scotland sat as they were crowned a thousand years ago. After a silken pall had been put over the King, the Archbishop anointed him upon the hands, breast and face with the holy oil, and he was ready to be presented with the spurs and the sword.

King Receives His Crown.

These given, George VI removed the pall and was clothed for the first time in the royal robe of purple. The orb and cross were brought from the altar by the Dean of Westminster and placed in the King's hands by the Archbishop. He was next invested with the ring and the sceptres.

Then as the King bowed his head the Dean of Westminster brought the Crown of St. Edward, and the Archbishop, receiving it from him, held it but momentarily upon the head of the King (its weight is terrific).

This was the signal for the trumpets and the guns in the Tower of London, for the peers and peeresses to cry "God save the King!" and for the millions who, along the processional line outside, had been waiting for that moment, to toss their hats in the air and cry likewise, "God save the King!" The peers were now allowed to put on their coronets.

There followed more religious ceremonies of great length and solemnity, and then the coronation of the Queen, following which the peeresses cried, "God save the Queen!" and donned their coronets.

Still more long hours of ceremony. Then, in the early evening the King's coach at last passed once more down the processional route, and the millions who had waited all day for the sight went home happy. © Western Newspaper Union.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Humane Fox Hunting.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.
—In England it has been decided that fox-hunting is humane. This opinion emanates from the hunters. The foxes have not been heard from on the subject.

Maybe you don't know it, but there's a lot of fox-hunting among us, especially down south. Being but a lot of stubborn non-conformists, southerners do not follow the historic rules. A party at large wearing a red coat, white pants and high boots would be mistaken for a refugee from a circus band. And anybody blowing a horn as he galloped across hill and dale would be set down as an insane fish peddler; and if you shouted "Yee-hoo, halloo! Tantivy, tantivy! Yoicks, yoicks!" or words to that effect, they'd think you were a new kind of hog-caller.

Down there they've chased the fox until he's wise. The foxes have learned that the hounds can't follow trail on a paved highway and so quit the thicket for the concrete when the chase is on. A fox has been sitting in the middle of the big road listening to the bewildered pack.

On second thought maybe Brer Fox isn't so smart, after all—not with automobile traffic what it is. 'Tis a hard choice—stay in the woods and get caught or take to the pike and get run over.

Courageous Republicans.

WHO, besides the writer, can recall when the Democrats held their jubilation rallies the night before a presidential election and the Republicans the night after the returns were in, when they had something to jubilate over? Now the situation is just the other way around. The Literary Digest poll was practically the only thing the Republicans had to celebrate during the entire fall season of 1936.

Still, we must give that diminished but gallant band credit for courage. Here, in an off-year, they're spiritedly planning against the next congressional campaign.

English Recruiting.

THE English are still having trouble inducing young fellows to join the colors. First, the government tried to increase enlistments by giving every recruit a giddy new blue uniform, absolutely free of charge, and still the lads refused. So now, as an appeal which, 'tis believed, no true Britisher can withstand, the military authorities announce that, hereafter, Tommy Atkins will have time off for afternoon tea.

This may be a new notion for peacetime, but, during the great war, the custom was maintained, even up at the front. Many a time I've seen all ranks, from the brigadiers on down, knocking off for tea. However, this didn't militate against his majesty's forces, because, at the same hour, the Germans, over on their side of the line, were having coffee—or what the Germans mistake for coffee. And the French took advantage of the lull to catch up with their bookkeeping on what the allies owed them for damage to property, ground rent, use of trenches, billeting space, wear and tear, etc., etc.

Did it ever occur to our own general staff that guaranteeing a daily crap-shooting interval might stimulate volunteering for the American army?

The Job of Censorship.

ONE reason why moving pictures are so clean is because some of the people who censor them have such dirty minds. To the very pure everything is so impure, is it not? That's why some of us think the weight of popular opinion, rather than the judgment of narrow-brained official judges in various states, should decide what should and what should not be depicted. Anyhow, there are so many movies which, slightly amending the old ballad, are more to be pitied than censored.

Sponsors of radio programs also lean over backward to be prudishly proper. But without let or hindrance the speaking stage, month by month, grows fouler and filthier. Suggestive lines once created a shock in the audience mind. The lines no longer suggest—they come right out and speak the nastiness. Since for the goose isn't sauce for the gander, 'twould seem—or may be, after the reformers got through saucing radio and screen, there wasn't any left over for the so-called legitimate stage.

BITTERLY does Miriam Hopkins regret the day last year when she told an interviewer that her judgment on screen stories for herself was infallibly bad.

Whenever she gets balky about working in a picture selected for her, Sam Goldwyn reminds her of her own admission.

Recently she completed "Woman Chases Man" and at the preview the audience roared with delight so continuously that it was necessary to take it back to the studio and insert some scenes to slow up the action so that laughter would not drown out the good lines.

If you have ever wanted to be a screen star, if you have ever even longed to visit Hollywood, then "A Star Is Born" is a picture you will adore. It is so ingratiating, it is so interesting, it is so hard to imagine anyone who would not enjoy it.

Only the three or four ranking stars in any studio are given little portable bungalow dressing rooms parked right at the side of the set where they are working.

When Lanny Ross abandons the "Show Boat" program shortly, Charles Winninger, the original beloved Cap'n Andy, is expected to return, but Eddie Cantor thinks that Winninger will be much too busy making pictures.

James Stewart is so worried for fear M-G-M will change their minds about lending him to RKO to play opposite Ginger Rogers that he has stopped having the phone answered at his house, and spends most of his time in a far away corner of the RKO lot where they are unlikely to locate him.

ODDS AND ENDS—Warner Brothers wouldn't ask Bette Davis to take a supporting role in "Gentleman After Midnight," the new Leslie Howard-Olivia de Havilland picture, but she surprised them by asking for it.

John Real recently rented the house formerly occupied by Charles Laughton in Hollywood, but didn't get around to explore the cellar until recently. He thought he might find mementoes of some of Laughton's horror roles, but confronted by weird sounds and a pair of flashing eyes, all he found was a mother cat with a list of kittens.

WITH BANNERS

By Emilie Loring

Brooke Reburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane.

Failure of breath alone stopped Brooke's tirade. There was plenty more she could say, she was apt to be good when she started. A laugh twitched at her lips. The two men facing her couldn't have looked more stunned when she made her theatrical entrance had a hold-up man with leveled gun suddenly stepped from behind the hanging.

"Sorry, Miss Reburn. Didn't know you'd come. I'll slit the throat of that secretary of mine for not telling me. So you two have met before? That's a coincidence."

MISS REYBURN

Brooke looked up in surprise as they waited for the traffic light at the corner to change to red and yellow. "Don't bite. Do you know him, Jerry?"

CHAPTER II

From the lighted stage Brooke Reburn looked into the auditorium of the department store in which she had worked for four years. She had begun by modeling sports clothes, and because she had loved her work and had given it all the enthusiasm and drive there was in her she had been promoted steadily.

CHAPTER III

Brooke blinked and swallowed. "Okay, Jerry, from now on I go straight ahead like an army with banners, but straight ahead doesn't mean teating and dancing with you tonight."

"No, thanks. I am going home to plan with the family about moving, and to plot the curve of our domestic future."

"I shall miss you, Mme. Celeste," Brooke's voice was none too steady. "Perhaps you won't have to long. In this here-today-and-gone-tomorrow age, money doesn't stay in one pocket. Remember, cherie, whenever you want a job, come to me. You'll be needing one. Au revoir!"

CHAPTER IV

"Do you dislike Mark Trent?" "Don't dislike him. Just don't want to think about the man, that's all. My sister Daphne went cack-eyed about him and he turned her down hard. Like a perfect gentleman, of course, but it got my goat."

CHAPTER V

"You're not bad yourself, Brooke. Why didn't you take to acting?" "I ought to be good. We children were raised on dramatics and quotations. It was Father's habit to orate when he was shaving, and we could spout Shakespeare before we could spell. Besides being a publisher, he was a playwright for amateurs, but Sam is ambitious to write for the professional stage; he has one three-act comedy finished, that is, as finished as a play can be until it is put into rehearsal. That is why he is acting, that he may know all there is to know of stage technic."

Ironmonger-Statesman.

NEW YORK. — Posterity has been pretty much left to shift for itself in the scramble out of the depression. It may be just around the corner, as Kaufman and Connelly had it, but Neville Chamberlain is the only top-bracket statesman who has given it even a wig-wag lately.

Emphatically, raspily even, he tells the house of commons that England must pay as she goes; that future generations must not be crippled with debt; that "we cannot put the cost of rearmament on posterity."

Britain's ironmonger-statesmen of Birmingham, old Joseph of the orchid boutonniere, and his sons, Sir Austen and Neville, all practiced easy conformity in non-essentials and stubborn dissent when it seemed important to disagree.

It was thirty-one years ago that Joseph Chamberlain was politically sidetracked by the tariff issue—he fought throughout his life for high tariffs. It was in 1932 that his son shoved through his tariff policies. They are a persistent breed, with no Galsworthy at hand to write their family saga.

* * * * * LISTEN FOLKS * * * * *

By Jim Ferguson

JIM FERGUSON
 Senator Nelson from Lubbock is one of the new senators now serving his first term. He is only 36 years of age, but is highly educated and is ambitious to render public service and appears to have a good supply of common sense. While he has been active in support of the bill for repeal of horse racing, he appears to be more interested in the change of our present constitution so as to provide a one house (unicameral) not pass at this session, yet it has received much attention and received favorable minority support.

Senator Nelson's contention is that a one house legislative procedure. He may be right or he may be wrong. His plan may be correct and yet his idea may never become a law. Time will tell. But he has raised an important issue.

We can never have economy in government until we have efficiency in the legislature. This session is about to adjourn and I am afraid the legislature is about to lay it self open to the charge of indefensible extravagance. I do not think I have an enemy in either the House or the Senate, and in the hope of preventing a mistake by my friends I am writing these lines. Stop boys, stop. Let me call your attention to what you are about to do. If your record would warrant you in laying claims to efficiency or economy, you might be justified in extending your term of office and raising your salary and doing the same for the other departments.

If you do not liberalize pensions you already have 112,000 on the roll, and at $180.00 per year the sum will exceed 20 millions. In one afternoon the Senate appropriated for just three departments 53 millions. Add to these sums the 17 million dollar deficit, growing every day, thus on 3 fingers you are spending 90 million dollars. How much is 90 million? It is 15 a year for every man, woman and child, white and black, in Texas with its 6 million population, or $75 average for every family of five in our state for every year.

I mention only 3 items for quick calculation and illustration. Millions more will have to be added if present estimates and proposals are voted by this legislature. The totals will finally run over 125 million dollars. 20 dollars for every man, woman and child, and $100 for every family for taxes. Stop Boys, stop. I plead with you not to adjourn this term until you make some provisions to reduce this enormous tax burden and pay the balance. While every body should pay something to the support of the government in proportion to their ability to pay yet you, the legislature, should be anxious to provide the tax demanded is no more than is absolutely needed to run the government economically administered.

This is the reason why I so earnestly urge the sales tax, because it requires everybody to pay only in proportion to their ability to pay and no more. It is truly a poor man's tax, the amount of which he can regulate by his own economies. But whether you agree with me or not as to how the tax is to be collected, this legislature should be careful not to adjourn until provision is made to pay the state's debts. If the legislature does any less, it can not lay claim to either economy or efficiency, and you will not have exercised any more discretion than would a colored man with an open credit account in a general merchandise store. Again I repeat: Stop Boys, stop, because I love you and I hope you don't make a mistake which will not be good for you or for the state.

* * * * * County Agent's Column * * * * *

By Ross B. Jenkins, County Agt.

Jenkins Column
SODIUM NITRATES SHOW EQUAL COTTON YIELDS
 From time to time different sources have made claims that various sodium nitrates are more beneficial for soil fertilization of cotton than others. Since farmers in Callahan County are now beginning to think in terms of more yields and less acres the county agent thought that the listing of three commercial fertilizers and their pounds as worked over a six year period from the South Carolina Experiment Station might be of interest. Two plots each were carried on as an experiment from 1930 to 1935 and a record of the yields of cotton obtained per acre as shown with the name of each fertilizer given.

Arcadian sodium nitrate produced 1891 lbs. per acre.
 Champion Brand Chilean produced 1888 pounds.
 Old Style Chilean produced 1883 pounds.
 From these production records it is clearly seen that there is no difference in the production as obtained from the uses of these fertilizers. Each of these produced more than a bale of cotton per acre.

TRUCK FERTILIZER
 A discussion of fertilizer at this time relative to sweet potatoes, watermelons, and vegetable crops would necessarily need to be confined to the sandier soils. It is generally recommended that sweet and Irish potatoes, watermelons, cantaloupes and most all garden vegetables make economic gains from moisture of 6.12.6 fertilizer. This means six parts of potassium, 12 parts of nitrogen and six parts of phosphorus for each 100 pounds of the mixture.

From time to time the county agent has recommended to the growers of tomatoes that they use an extra fertilizer for those plants that refuse to fruit. Many times tomatoes will grow a rank stalk but refuse to fruit. This may be remedied in many instances by the application of about 2 tablespoons full of super phosphate per vine or about 100 pounds per acre. Tomatoes sometimes, however, refuse to fruit even with this fertilizer, due, it seems, to dry hot winds that dry the pollen before it has time to fertilize the flowering plants. This can be remedied to a marked degree by erecting over the rows a screen that will shut off about half of the sunlight. This may be done by stretching sacks or bagging over trellis work built six feet from the ground. Then on small patches, if water is available, a light spray near sundown will allow enough moisture to hang over the plants during the night and early morning to set quite a lot of the pollen.

AJAX SEED EXHAUSTED
 Some years ago the county agent induced some farmers in this county to plant Ajax, believing that it was a coming crop especially suited to the needs of West Texas. Since then it has proven to be one of the heaviest producers of grain and forage of any of the known grain sorghum crops.

Mr. T. N. Minix of Denton reported that more than two tons per acre were cut from his plant ing last year and that his seed have been exhausted. The Experiment Station of Chillicothe was contacted and they, too, report they have no seed. John Gorham & Son of Waco also seed producers write the following letter: "Dear Mr. Jenkins: We have your request for Ajax seed. Our supply was very limited this season and we have sold what we had. We have found it the most profitable grain sorghum for Central Texas."

Those who were fortunate enough to save their Ajax seed from last year should keep this in mind and store plenty of seed for sale next year since the demand for another year will still be great.

RECORD ACREAGE SIGNED UNDER CONSERVATION PROGRAM

When the sign up started for including the ranchers with the farmers it was predicted by some that farmers had tired of help from the Federal Government and would not sign to cooperate this year. Work sheets signed in the office today do not verify this statement because the greatest number of acres are now signed for Callahan County than ever before under any and all programs combined. The personnel in the office has had to be increased in order to take care of the extra amount of clerical work incident to the sign up. Practically every farm of any importance in the county is signed up to cooperate for 1937. It is estimated now that there will be some 400,000 acres under a sign up before the closing date, Saturday, May 15th. There are only 521,000 acres in Callahan including waste land, rivers and roads. During the past week many farmers have signed a work sheet that have never before entered any of the programs. This program is a soil conserving measure designed to improve the fertility of the soil not only for this generation but for those to come.

Any farmer is eligible to sign the conservation program whether or not he has ever been in a program heretofore. May 15th is the closing date for receiving work sheets for this year's program.

* * * * * NOBODY'S BUSINESS * * * * *

BY JULIAN CAPERS, JR. Special Correspondent

Austin—Veto by Gov. Allred of the commercial carrier bill, written by the legislature in an effort to permit private business concerns to deliver their products in their own trucks without qualifying as common carriers, and a revival of the oft repeated rumor that Gov. Allred will receive appointment as a federal judge and resign the governorship, were the outstanding developments of the week in Austin.

The federal judgeship rumor which has been bruited about for more than a year, appeared this time to be backed by significant circumstantial evidence. Although Allred has maintained discreet silence, his close friends say he is exceedingly anxious for the job. There is before the house judiciary committee in Washington a bill creating an additional judgeship in South Texas (Houston) district. Inside information from the national capital indicates it probably will be passed at this session of congress.

AGREEMENT REPORTED

Best information here is that Senators Sheppard and Connally will endorse different candidates, neither naming Allred. That would put the decision up to Vice president Garner, who has always been Allred's close political friend. Garner is known to be willing to go a long way to prevent Allred becoming a candidate against Connally in the future, and the current story here is that he has definitely decided to back Allred for the judgeship. In the event, Allred would resign. Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul automatically becoming governor for the remainder of Allred's term.

Friends of Col. Ernest Thompson and Atty. Gen. William Mc. Craw, who will both seek the governorship in 1938, are said to have used their influence to prevent this program working out in the past, because they feared that Woodul would feel obligated to seek election as governor, thus complicating the situation next year for their favorites. But close friends of Woodul have recently declared the lieutenant governor would far rather be attorney general of Texas—an ambition to which he has been pointing his whole political career for years and that even if he served out Allred's unexpired term, Woodul probably would then continue with his present campaign for attorney general next year. Upon this assurance, friends of the other two candidates apparently have waived their opposition to Allred's appointment, and the thing appears more likely to be worked out on this basis now than at any time since the rumor originally started.

ALLRED VISITS ROOSEVELT

Two visits by Gov. Allred one official, to welcome the president to Texas, and the other with an apparent effort at secrecy this week lend some credence to the reports. The governor's mysterious "trip to the country" to take a rest is reported here to have been an unheralded visit to the president near Galveston.

Knowledge of this situation is credited by many here with the policy of the group of senators who have blocked action of many important legislative measures supported by Allred including the race repeal bill. Nobody knows when the Allred appointment will go thru if it does but Sept. 1 is the date most frequently heard here in discussion of the subject.

EIGHTH VETO ANGERS HOUSE

Veto by the governor of the bill adopted to permit privately owned trucks to cduise the highways at will drew fire in the house which quickly passed the measure over the veto, with many Allred stalwarts favoring the bill. In the senate, anti Allred leaders, such as Frank Rawlings of Fort Worth and Clint Small of Amarillo, rallied to support the veto, and the bill failed of enactment over the veto by the narrow margin of two votes. The governor explained in his message that the bill was so poorly drafted it virtually threw the highways open to trucks without regulation and raised serious legal questions as to the validity of the whole common carrier truck laws now in effect. The governor took the position that the private trucks ought to be under strict regulation, and that the present good system of regulation for common carriers should not be jeopardized or impaired. Senate action probably killed further commercial truck regulation for this season.

THOMPSON FAVORS ADVERTISING BILL

Rallying to the support of Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul's constitutional amendment to permit the state to advertise for tourist and industrial business, Col. Ernest O. Thompson of the railroad commission pointed to Amarillo, the city of which he formerly was mayor, as having proved the value of community advertising by doubling its population within a few years thru advertising. He also cited California campaign, which has raised the per capita income of the state to twice that in Texas, brought millions of visitors and permanent residents there and drawn millions of dollars of industrial capital to the coast. The amendment resolution has passed the senate, is threatened with death in the house. It may get final house test this week.

SESSION END NEARING

Although neither house had acted definitely at the weekend an adjournment date May 22 was most frequently mentioned by senate leaders as the probable time. That would cause solons to work about 10 days at $5 a day, and would probably enable passage of the regular appropriation bills, upon which the house is busily engaged this week. Whether the chief bone of contention the race horse betting repeal bill will get up remains doubtful, with the decision apparently resting in the hands of the senate minority group which has buried it on the cal-today, Rawleigh's, Dept. TXE-38-endar. S. 22.1tp.

Teacher Brings Apples to Pupils!

STAYING after school used to mean either a birch rod or a lengthy lecture. But Rose Kohout, senior co-ed at Lewis Institute, Chicago, doesn't seem to mind. She and her home economics instructor, Miss Katherine Hayes, indulge in a little after-school munching of big red apples from Washington State. Instructors at Lewis upset the old tradition—pupils bring apples to teacher—by serving apples to the pupils. In the springtime, when other fresh fruits are scarce, apples are found to be an excellent antidote for spring fever.

UNCOMMON AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson
© Western Newspaper Union

Father of the Dime Novel
A FEW years before the opening of the Civil war a printer in Buffalo, N. Y., began issuing a magazine called the Youth's Casket and a little later another, called the Home Monthly. Neither was much of a success. More successful was his brother who ran a newsstand and began selling songs or single pages in much the same fashion as the ballad-hawkers of an earlier day. Then the printer brother published a number of these songs in a pamphlet called "The Dime Song Book" and it sold so well that they decided to move to New York city and publish other books for ten cents.

Thus it was that a great American institution was born, for these brothers were Erastus F. and Irwin P. Beadle and they were the "Fathers of the Dime Novel." They took into partnership another native of Buffalo, Robert Adams, and for the next three decades there came from the presses of Beadle and Company and Beadle and Adams a perfect flood of little books (the Pocket Library, the Half-Dime Library and the Dime Library) to thrill the souls of American boys and to fill the hearts of American parents with fear that their sons were being corrupted, beyond all hope by these "yellow-backs."

How groundless that fear was is shown by the fact that some of the most distinguished Americans of today grew up on a reading diet of Beadle's dime novels. Exciting and thrilling those stories may have been (opening, as so many of them did, with "Bang! Bang! Bang! Three shots rang out and another redskin bit the dust") but they were also highly moral. For the villain was always foiled, Virtue always triumphed and it is doubtful if a single boy ever was ruined by reading one of them.

Irwin Beadle retired from the firm in 1862. Robert Adams died in 1866, and his two younger brothers, William and David, succeeded him. With them as partners Erastus Beadle carried the dime novel to the heights of its success. He continued in the business until 1889. Then he retired with a fortune built up by the dimes and nickels of Young America. He died in 1894—too early to realize that certain of the little "yellow backs" which he sold for a dime would later sell for hundreds of dollars because they are "Americana" and "collectors' items".

She Wanted to Be President

SHE wanted to be President of the United States but if ever there was a forlorn hope it was that ambition of Victoria Clafin Woodhull.

She started under the handicap of being born in Ohio to a family that was not only poor but disreputable. And neither she nor her sister, Tennessee Clafin (or "Tennie C." as she wrote it) ever tried to retrieve the family reputation. Instead, both of them added several shocking items to Puritanical America's low estimate of the Clafins. For one thing they went in for spiritualism and, what was worse, they became free love advocates.

Victoria first married Dr. Canning Woodhull but soon discarded him for Col. James H. Blood, a handsome and distinguished Civil war veteran and a kindred spirit, whom she later married. Tennessee went to New York and won the admiration of Commodore Vanderbilt who set her and her sister up as brokers. Having thus entered the business world, the sisters set out to prove that women were just as capable as men in other lines of activity.

They began publishing Woodhull and Clafin's Weekly and with it Victoria started her own "boom" for President. She ran for that high office on a platform of women's rights—and kept right on running for many years. She went to Washington and appeared before the judiciary committee of the house of representatives to demand the right to vote. Of course, she failed to win that right just as she failed to get anyone to take her Presidential candidacy seriously.

So she finally gave up the attempt, discarded Colonel Blood and went to England where she acquired another husband, as did her sister. Then both of them disowned free love, won their way into English society and for many years published a magazine devoted to advanced views on many subjects. Eventually Victoria settled down into a placid existence as the Lady Bountiful of a small town in Worcestershire and became known as "a social reformer who suffered for views now generally accepted." When she died in 1927 at the age of ninety, the vicar who preached her funeral sermon told his hearers, "We have been privileged to have had one of the world's greatest personalities among us".

NEIL STAFFORD
Takes the Dog Along

"What's that?" I asked. "Our new dog," said she.

By NEIL STAFFORD

I HAVE been looking into the statistics, Department of Commerce, tourist and dog division, and come upon the following reports. Out of every 25 touring families, including those in trailers, 24 of them leave the family dog at home and write back asking how he is. The other family takes the dog along, thus storing up plenty of trouble for everybody.

We were half way through our last and most recent motor tour, the missus and myself and had about 3,000 miles to go and at that point, we carried no dog. Our regular dog was safely at home, waiting for us to return. Out of a clear sky, the missus decided she was lonely and wanted a new dog and before you could say Doberman Pincher, she bought one and appeared with it on her arm. It was an underslung Peke, eight weeks old, eight inches long and one of a litter of four.

How We Got the Pup.
"What's that?" I asked.
"Our new dog," said she.
"Well, it's too young, as anyone can see. You take it back to its mother and sisters. Otherwise it will die of loneliness."
"You know nothing of puppies," explained the missus and she definitely refused to take it back. So we have a new pup, eight weeks old.

"Is it your intention to try and take that pup home with us in the motor car?" I ventured to inquire.
"Certainly."
"Three thousand miles!"
"A Peke doesn't care where it is. Pekes like motor cars. You drive and I will take care of the dog."

Rolling Stones Gather Moss.
That was an idle dream. At once I began to discover why sensible persons never tour with a young dog in the car. My own luggage consisted of a kit bag, a golf bag, two small zippers and a typewriter in its modest case.

The missus had a couple of bags and a couple of boxes and that's all, there being excess space in the back of the car. But after we started rolling west, we commenced adding items and the car slowly filled with strange objects, none of which had any real part in a motor trip. First, we had to pause in a large city and buy a dog-basket made of wickerware.
"What for?" I naturally inquired.
"A small puppy cannot sleep in that tin box. No air. The dog would choke."
"Well take her out then," I said, "and let her sleep on the floor."
So we at once bought the wicker dog-basket and it took up space. The rear of the sedan began to take on a crowded look. We next were forced to purchase two thermos bottles—not one—two. By this time, the dog had a name—Scooby.

"We must keep Scooby's milk warm," the missus explained. "The other bottle is to carry fresh water. You cannot give a puppy just any kind of water. Some of the drinking water in these places is full of germs and would kill anybody."
Scooby Gets Out.
We roared steadily across the broad land. There is another irritating feature about traveling with a young dog. You have to stop the car. I mean, you have to stop the car so often you would scarcely believe it. You are whirling along the highway at a pleasant 60 miles per hour, trying to reach Sandusky or somewhere by supper time and the missus leans over and says: "We'd better stop. Scooby has to get out."

So you pause by the side of the road, and all the devilish trucks which you have just defeated in a brisk brush, rush sneeringly by you at 45 and you know you have to pass them all over. It appears that if you do not escort a very young Peke into a vacant field and let him or her gambol on the green, the doggie will get sick and have stomach trouble. Sometimes I personally led Scooby into strange meadows by the roadside and on several occasions, the owners asked me what was I doing on their property and would I mind leaving.

Likewise, you must feed a small dog on a motor trip, just as you would a small baby, and in passing, I may say that a small baby isn't a lick more trouble than a small Peke. They require the same foods, the same recreations, same sleeping hours, same holding on your lap, the only difference being that you do not have to change diapers on a Peke.

Peke Disrupts Everything.
I gradually began to grow rather irritated, though I am an amiable and cheerful person under normal conditions. I like to make time in a car, four or five hundred miles a day, and you cannot do that with a pop-eyed Peke on the rear seat. You have to stop too many times and go walking in fields for exercise.

It got so I couldn't get back into the car, once I stepped outside. The sedan filled up, owing to circumstances over which I had little control. For example, we had to buy Scooby a rubber chewing bone, although she has only baby teeth and they're coming out anyhow.

We bought three red balls and I'll never know why. Then we had to purchase a small stove, so we could heat Scooby's meals on the run. It was a tin-can stove with some stuff inside looking like jellied tomato juice, to which you applied a match, and after that you walked away and sat under a tree.

Scooby's Necessary Baggage.
We bought a large bag of dog-crackers, greenish in color, with enough crackers inside for 32 police dogs and a horse, and they were of little use to Scooby, she having no teeth to mention. We therefore had to break up these crackers, buying a hammer. At first we desiccated them on the car floor, but with poor results. Later on we stole a large, flat rock from a farmer and used that.

Our next purchase was six cans of dog food, in case we motored into some rough, uncouth country where they had no dog food; a mechanical mouse, with clock-works inside; a non-mechanical mouse with a whistle in its stomach, a rubber dog, a red blanket, a pink cat made of wool and a sleeping bag. By this time, nobody could get in or out of the car and Houdini would have stuck in the door.

When we rolled into Chicago, I was slowly cracking up and decided to strike. I said:
"No matter what you think, I am not going to drive this pooch clear to California. I am already worn to a frazzle. Either the pooch quits or I do."

"I believe," said the missus eagerly, "that you had better quit. You are not very much use and if you will kindly step out and take a train home, I shall be much obliged and will be able to go ahead in peace."
"You mean that?"
"I surely do."

Without another word, I drove hastily to the railway station, leaped out, seized my bags and went home on the train in comfort. Western transcontinental railway trains do not stop anywhere for the purpose of feeding or watering pooches or letting them run around in fields in the name of exercise.

Parading the Fashions

A STYLE show De Luxe for De Ladies on this De Lightful Spring day!

Betty Ann feels just a bit the most elegant of the three for her housecoat is superlative. She has "skirts" like the ladies in the feminine yesterday; her basque is form-fitting; her sash has a bow, and her sleeves puff. The illusion is so perfect that she is about to reach for smelling salts or a sprig of old lavender.

Matrons Have Vanity, Too.
Mama, very young for her years, can not resist styles that bring more compliments her way. The no-belt feature of this one is definitely new, and does wonders for the figure a bit past the slim stage. The continuing collar, which in soft pastels is always flattering, gives the break required by the all-in-one waist and skirt. The fitted top and flaring bottom make for style plus comfort, a demand matrons, even though youthful, always make.

Parties and Picnics.
Winifred on the left is privately making up her mind to have a housecoat, too; though she is mightily pleased with the way her print has turned out. She chose this style because the fitted, broken waist line and front seamed skirt are so very slenderizing. She's on her way to the 4-H meeting now and has only stopped to remind Betty Ann of the picnic "The Jolly Twelve" are having on Tuesday.

The Patterns.
Pattern 1285 comes in sizes 12-20 (30 to 40). Size 14 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material.
Pattern 1282 is for sizes 14-20

(32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. It requires 2 1/2 yards of ribbon for the belt.

Pattern 1983 is for sizes 36 to 50. Size 38 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. With the short sleeves it requires only 5 yards of 39 inch material.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adierika. Adierika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adierika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adierika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adierika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. At all Leading Druggists.

Begin Whaling Mellon Trust

F.D.R. Takes Down T.R.'s Big Stick; Aluminum Company Is Object of Determined Attack

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON.—Shades of old Theodore! This new Roosevelt takes down Teddy's big stick and begins whaling the aluminum trust, which believed it had a lease of uninterrupted life now that its best known stockholder, Andrew Mellon, has given the nation a $75,000,000 art collection. At the same time this attack is made on the trust which manufactures and sells America's kitchen pots and pans. Attorney General Homer Cummings writes a letter to the President saying that the whole business of trust-busting must be studied all over again because there seems to be grave doubt that courts anywhere at present would put a trust in the dog house, or any trust official in jail. In effect, Mr. Cummings is setting out to nail the aluminum trust's hide to the barn door, while he thinks other trusts might successfully defend themselves against prosecution.

Why is this? The answer is that official Washington believes that the Aluminum Company of America is a trust beyond all doubt. No matter how the courts have eviscerated the other trusts, and drawn the government's teeth one by one, the aluminum trust apparently is a complete monopoly.

Behind this surprise move against the Mellons is the change of attitude toward prices and monopolies. The depression, which bred NRA and its support of high prices, is behind us. Trusts got into good graces during the life of NRA, although it was not so intended. But if high prices to cure depression and spread wealth ever were justified (and many economists believe the opposite) they are apparently no longer in favor with the New Deal, which is hinting that markets in every commodity are too high.

There is a new day dawning in Washington, economically speaking. It looks back to the time when the federal trade commission had sharper teeth than it has today and bit a huge chunk right out of the aluminum trust—a bite that made even the cautious Coolidge wince. That bite was a report from the federal trade commission to congress, signed by all the members of the commission, Republican and Democratic alike. The thing disturbed President Coolidge, and it is reported that he took steps to see that nothing ever came of the report. The event made a nine days' wonder in the newspapers. Andrew Mellon, who was then secretary of the Treasury, pooh-poohed the whole thing, and congress, completely Republican, refused to accept the report as anything but a political effort on the part of Democrat Chairman Huston Thompson. But there was one man in that administration who wanted to do something about it. He was Attorney General Harlan F. Stone. He wanted to prosecute, but as he was getting ready to launch an attack, President Coolidge appointed him to the Supreme court. Should the government now go ahead with a suit it might at least settle the pending question whether or not this huge business combination is in violation of the laws prohibiting monopolistic restraint of trade and the fixing of prices.

The information already brought to light many times, shows that the Aluminum Company of America controls the mines producing the minerals which make aluminum; that it makes 95 per cent of sheet aluminum; owns more than a third of the largest manufacturer of aluminum products (mainly pots and pans), owns all the stock of the second largest manufacturing concern; and nearly all the stock of still another corporation in the same general line.

With all of this information nothing ever happened until the establishment of NRA, when the Aluminum Company of America sought certain privileges under the Blue Eagle on the ground that it was a monopoly for, under NRA monopolies had an inside track. Whereupon, with this admission in the open, a certain rival concern promptly sued the Aluminum Company of America, charging that the Mellon monopoly had hurt the plaintiff's business. It looked as if the question of the aluminum trust would be settled right there, but before the final court could be reached the dispute was settled privately, and the legal question still remains.

Nearly fifty years ago the government began to agitate against the large groups of corporations which combined to kill competition by making it impossible for smaller concerns to compete in the open market. That agitation resulted in the Sherman anti-trust law, which prohibited combinations "in restraint of trade" and agreements between corporations to control prices. Those were the days when "Uncle Trusty" of the cartoons used to indicate just how much more money he wanted to squeeze that day out of the little average common man's household budget. Yet that same thing is going on today, in the steel business and in other heavy commodities. The government itself cannot get competitive bids for the construction of its public works in more than one line. There is no way, apparently, to prevent all of the steel companies in the country from figuring identical prices on steel jobs everywhere, yet it is almost impossible to prove collusion. The small steel concerns merely follow the leadership of the large concerns, which announce a price. The smaller concerns use the same figures, knowing that otherwise they will be in for a commercial licking.

The government had the trusts of 30 or 35 years ago almost ready to quit, when none other than the late Chief Justice Edward White of the Supreme court, kindly old conservative that he was, came to their rescue and perpetuated trusts from that day until now. In one famous opinion he propounded what has since been called "the rule of reason" which allowed some trusts while it forbade others. This gave rise to the idea of "good" and "bad" trusts. A good trust is one which has established itself and has a place in the social and economic background of the country. The Supreme court practically ruled "You will disturb business if you break up this combination." That was the end of the trust-busting of the early 1900s. The curb which Chief Justice White then laid upon the anti-trust laws still remains.

If this government actually intends to break up trusts and prevent price combinations, the officials involved should make up their minds that they will be mercilessly attacked in a large section of the press. Those who can be bought off will retire from public life to handsome private salaries; the others will find their business careers are hampered, if not ruined.

Big business has great power to smear. In the Harding administration the government went after the meat packers, who resisted the attack with unsuspected power. The anti-trust section of the government was successful in interfering with the large packers' piracies to the extent that in a single year 30 per cent of the big packers' business was going to the independent packers where it belonged. Then the big packers showed the methods employed by them to control government. They lobbied through congress the repeal of certain laws and the enactment of others which put control of the packers under the Department of Agriculture, where everything was hunky-dory under the benign rule of Secretary Wallace, father of the young man who now has the same job—but diametrically opposite ideas.

The Supreme court showed common sense and statesmanship (but by a hairline majority of five-to-four) when it freed a young negro communist sentenced to 20 years in prison under a rickety Georgia statute of the reconstruction days. This negro, Herndon, had been convicted in Georgia of the high-sounding crime of inciting a rebellion. Actually all he had been doing was trying to scrape up a few votes for the Communist party which, throughout the whole country, counted only 80,000 ballots for Earl Browder, its candidate for President. This tiny vote, in contrast with 27,000,000 for Roosevelt and 17,000,000 for Landon, is unimpressive, and Herndon's party was quite inconspicuous, but a negro agitator in Georgia certainly has little chance to begin with.

This brings up the subject of communists, who are always moping around Washington, trying to pick a row with the police so they can be arrested and complain about denials of free speech. Yet, what they are working for is a form of government like Russia's, where free speech is denied to anyone out of sympathy with the ruling administration.

If the negro Communist Herndon had been returned to the Georgia jail by the Supreme court he would have been the prize exhibit for American communists for years to come, and professional agitators could point to his case as the supreme example of American injustice. As it is Herndon goes free, and the agitators will have to look for another martyr.

When the court refused to, o. k. Herndon's sentence it was in effect pointing out that this country is not like Italy, Germany or Russia, where political disagreements will land one in jail or against a firing wall with little or no trial. The present American method of combating revolutionary and radical measures is the common sense regime of liberal policies, rather than repressive measures such as Georgia would have inflicted on this man Herndon.

There is much in the idea of Colby Chester, who says the success of our democracy is largely dependent upon the consumers having a large enough purchasing power.

The secret of the New Deal was to liberalize life and processes to an extent that would prevent radical agitators from getting anywhere. One of the tough things we had to stand was the way the Supreme court for two years thwarted the achievement of that ideal, but it seems now that under the leadership of Chief Justice Hughes, the court is definitely headed toward a policy of showing that the Constitution can be made to work for the lasting good of the American people, and the expansion of our democracy to meet the changing needs.

Lesson for May 16

THE FORBEARANCE OF ISAAC

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 26:12-25. GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God. Matthew 5:9. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Wouldn't Quarrel. JUNIOR TOPIC—Was Isaac a Hero? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Prevent Quarrels. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Promoting Peace.

In a world largely dominated by the philosophy that might is right, and in which men are urged to assert themselves and demand their rights, exacting them even by lawless and violent methods, it is increasingly difficult to proclaim the truth that meekness is not weakness and that the Christian virtues of patience and long-suffering are not simply outmoded theories which do not fit our modern world. Men will marvel at the thundering waters of Niagara and will forget that in the noiseless solitude of the forest the trees are raising water, not lowering it, in far greater quantity and for an infinitely more useful purpose. The blustering north wind has far less power than the gentle spring sun.

The story of Isaac, the second of the patriarchs, is instructive from beginning to end. The five chapters preceding our lesson merit careful reading. Isaac had come through many blessed experiences and had also sadly tasted the defeat of unbelief and sin before we reach the time of our lesson. Fearing a famine, and evidently not being certain that God would care for him, he had gone down from the promised land, and was dwelling in the land of the Philistines. But God had not forsaken him, and even there he blessed him.

I. Peace, Prosperity, and Envy (vv. 12-17).

Isaac was at peace although he was in the enemy's territory. God had given him great prosperity with the result that the Philistines hated him. Times have changed, but men are the same. Many are they who will not have the Lord Jesus Christ to rule over them, but who cast envious glances toward those who because they have honored God have been honored by him with peace of heart and have prospered in whatever they do. (Read Psalm 1.)

Note that Isaac's testimony is strengthened by his willingness to yield even what was his right, rather than cause contention. Undoubtedly there are times when one must defend his name and his possessions, but all too often those who "stand up for their rights" have wrecked homes, churches, and nations, and have gained nothing but an empty victory.

II. Peace in the World Is Temporary (vv. 18-21).

Isaac moved on and dugged more wells, and for a time he was again at peace, but not for long. He was still in the land of the Philistines. We are in the world. We long for peace, we would throw all our influence on the side of peace. But let us not be misled, for as long as sin is in the world there will be strife and war. James asks, "Whence come wars and fightings among you?" He rightly replies that the "lusts," the sins of men, bring them about.

Many noble Christian men and women have permitted their God-given hatred of war and killing to mislead them into support of unscriptural and impossible peace programs, often to the loss of their interest in the preaching of the gospel and the winning of souls to Jesus Christ.

But is there then never to be "peace on earth"?

III. Perfect Peace in the Presence of God (vv. 22-25).

When Isaac came up into Canaan, the land which God had promised him, he found permanent peace and renewed fellowship with God. Even so, the Christian man and woman who will step out of a spiritually-destroying fellowship with the world and will come wholly over into the spiritual Canaan will find true peace and delightful intimate communion with God.

A broader application of the same truth brings before us the teaching of Scripture that when the One who has a right to reign, the Lord Jesus Christ, returns to take his throne, then and not before, will peace cover the earth. In the meantime those who bear the beautiful name Christian, who are true followers of the Prince of Peace, will give themselves to such patient, loving, and long-suffering testimony to Him that their personal influence will be toward peace in the home, in the church, in the community, in the earth.

Always remember that God's Word, the Bible, is our guide. Let us read it diligently, intelligently, prayerfully. To help the reader to do this, the writer of these notes will be glad to supply without cost or obligation a Bible-reading calendar with a workable plan for reading the blessed Book through in a year. If possible enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope with your request.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Outer Leaves of Lettuce—The outer leaves of lettuce, often trimmed off and thrown away, are more than 30 times as rich in vitamin A as the inside leaves.

Boiled Whitefish—Clean a whitefish. To sufficient water to cover add salt and vinegar and a bunch of parsley and a quartered onion. Cook until the flesh separates easily from the bones. Drain and place on a hot platter, garnished with parsley and serve with a sauce.

Removing Mustard Stains—Mustard stains can be removed from table linen by washing in hot water and soap and rinsing in warm water.

Hanging Pictures—Never allow picture frames to touch the wall if it is damp. The frame will soon become damaged. With a small tack or gramophone needle, attach two small corks at the bottom of your frame. These will keep the frame off the wall.

Soaking Salt Fish—When soaking salt fish add a small glass of vinegar to the soaking water and it will draw out more of the salt.

With Fancywork—Before starting to draw the threads on linen for hemstitching, wet a small brush, rub it over a bar of soap until a lather is produced, scrub the threads of linen that you wish to draw, and they will pull out easily.

Butter Layer Cake—When raspberry jam that is not of firm consistency is to be used for filling a sponge sandwich cake it is advisable to butter the inner surface of each layer before spreading it with jam. This will prevent the moisture from soaking into the cake and making it sodden.

Beef Juice—To make beef juice add 1 pound of fresh, raw, finely chopped round steak without fat to 6 ounces of cold water. Add a pinch of salt, put the beef and water in a glass jar and stand it on ice, over night. Shake and strain it through coarse muslin, squeezing hard to obtain all the juice.

Tomato and Lima Bean Casserole—Drain the liquid from a No. 2 can of green baby lima beans and combine the beans with a can of tomatoes. Add a little butter and seasoning, then mix. Place in buttered casserole. Cover. WNU Service.

With Baird Baptist
Our meeting closed Sunday night with the baptizing. We had a real good meeting. Bro. Sheppard did a good work among us, his sermons were fine and every one appreciated them. The preaching was excellent, with the children he is great. He had a Boosters board of about 50 and my how they can sing. He encouraged our work and especially did he help the Sunday School. Soon after school is out we will have a training course. We will use the book entitled "The School in Which We Teach" We will expect every officer and teacher of the Sunday School to attend and take the course, which will be five night long beginning June 13 and through the week to the 20.
There were 20 additions to the church and 17 of these by experience and baptism and one came for membership in the Methodist church.
Now we shall expect everyone in his place next Sunday, all of our regular services and lets make them good by all doing their bit. Give me your support dear people and I will lead you out of the brush into the field of real service for the Lord, but if you stay to criticize and find fault, then as far as you are concerned the wagon will stick in the mud of your own non-corporation spirit and the effort be lost. Come and pull, you know a mule even cant pull when he is kicking. Let us be pullers.
Our Workers meeting this week with Atwell church was a good one, the next meeting will be with the Clyde church.
Joe R. Mayes.

What is the "Low-price Field"?

YOU hear a lot about "the low-price field" these days. A good many cars claim to be in it. So whenever the low-price field is mentioned, remember:
Until Ford came, no average American could own a car.
Today all Ford prices are still low — with the prices of the 60-horsepower Ford V-8 $30 to $60 lower than those of any other car of comparable size.
But with Ford, "low price" doesn't merely mean low figures on the price tag. It means much more than that. It means low prices and low costs all the car's long life. Low prices for service — for parts — and, above all, for operation.
Both Ford V-8 engine sizes are economical to operate. The 85 horsepower gives greater gasoline mileage this year than ever, and the "60" delivers the highest mileage in Ford history.
Private owners, cab companies, fleet operators all report that the "60" averages from 22 to 27 miles per gallon of gasoline.
Check and see how much Ford saves you.
