Curing a Drunkard.

According to an article in the "Britsh Medical Journal." it has been found by Dr. Renger that the tincture of capsicum in ten drop doses is the best remedy to counteract that craving for alcohol which is the curse of all inebriates, preventing their return to rational conduct. This remedy has been tested by other physicians, and they report very favorably in regard to it. They give several instances of men of various ages who, half-muddled, hung around low drinking saloons, or at home, and who, when the liquor was shut up, would pick the lock, or when money was taken from them tipple on credit whenever they ister this remedy is to commence with five drops in a little syrup of orange of capsicum tincture to twelve drops. idiots to men who attended to their business, and took an interest in all that was going on in the world, which they before, being confirmed drunkards did not, according to the habits of the latter class of unfortunates.

A 12,000 POUND HECK.

The hour grew late and Mr. Brand paced his chamber in moody silence. The train had come in, but his messenger had not returned, and the merchant. was troubled-troubled by a vague sort of doubt, which haunted him in spite of his faith in Lake. A merry, sober old trader of long experience had said that Lake was too young to fill the important position which he held, but Mr. Brand had never found his trust in Tom misplaced.

Having heard rumors concerning a house which he had extensive dealings with, the merchant had dispatched Lake to London, telling him to make inquiries, and in any case to get the partners of the firm in question to settle their
