Young Joseph Weldon Bailey, Jr. has formally launched his campaign for United States Senator, and a cursory examination of his platform and opening speeches does not indicate to us any reason for his election, other than that he wants Tom Connally's job. And from our point of view, Senator Connally is giving eminently satisfactory service, both to the state and the nation.

No Change Is Needed

On the basis of the value to Texas, up to now, of the two men as individuals, there can be little choice but to support Mr. Connally. His long service in the lower house and his six years as junior senator from Texas are to his credit. And while his course may not always have been that which we would have preferred to have seen him follow, his service has been most acceptable.

Mr. Bailey is making much of the fact that he is an advocate of repeal, now that the wet vote apparently is in the majority. But we do not recall this crusader having much to say on the subject when prohibition was popular among the voters. On the other hand, Mr. Connally has been consistent, to say the least, for a year ago, when Texas voted on submission, he announced that he would vote against it, realizing that this was an unpopular view.

Mr. Connally's support of the Roosevelt policies have reflected credit on the state, and have won for him a high in the councils of the party. Mr. Bailey was an opponent of the Roosevelt recovery program, voting against the recovery projects supported by the Administration in the early trying months of a year ago. The Connally prestige at Washington would be lost through a change in Senators at this time.

There are many other reasons why Mr. Connally is preferable, from our standpoint. And we believe that Texas voters will be loath to make a change, just to satisfy the ambitions of an individual.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace came to Texas a week ago, and Texans knew him as the head of far flung government agencies that have increased the price of farm products during the past year in some instances as much as 400 per cent. He left with many shrewd observers stating that he is the brainiest members of the President's cabinet. These observations are not new, but they come first-hand to Texans for the first time.

Wallace Visits Texas

His visit occasioned The Dallas News to say: "Chief among the impressions left by the Secretary of Agriculture... was his long range vision. Unequivocally on the side of 'planned economy' enthusiasts, he made it clear that in his opinion America has not yet begun to plan for permanent prosperity."

That the Secretary believes practically all recovery efforts thus far, particularly in agriculture, are temporary and emergency only, was emphasized in both public addresses here. This applies to the cotton control program as well as agricultural credit. He warned Texas and the Southwest that it must decide within two years at the utmost what its permanent plan for agriculture will be.

Senator George Purl of Dallas raises a point that should be given serious consideration by voters prior to the coming elections. He points out that the major planks in most of the platforms of those offering for Governor call for tax reduction and new features in governmental activities, and Senator Purl wants the voters to find out just how and where the cuts are to be made.

Reduce, But Where?

We have heard much, every two years, about reduction of governmental expense, and yet each year sees the cost of government increasing. No doubt most of those running for office are serious gentlemen, who are sincere in their intention of helping out the poor taxpayer. But we do not recall any in recent years who have done much about it after they once were in office.

Senator Purl states that an analysis of the State tax dollar shows that any appreciable cut in expenditures must be in the highway or educational funds. He does not feel that State taxes can be reduced without abolishing some of the existing departments, and then not appreciably.

It is easy to make promises of reduction, but very difficult to put them into operation. Organized minorities can be found that will fight to the last ditch the elimination of any department or a serious reduction in any appropriation that carries a pay-roll. And organized minorities speak loudly when aroused.

Tax reduction is important, and it is to be hoped that it will be effected some time. Promises of reduction, without a workable plan for putting them into effect, are of little value to the taxpayers.

Although our assistance in running down code violations has not been sought by the government, we are willing to point out one. That is the cut-rate price quoted by the government for printing stamped envelopes. We are not the first to point out this incongruity of the government, it having been mentioned in no uncertain language by several state press associations.

Here's A Code Violation

It is a rather ridiculous situation, however, the government prescribing what price may be charged for printed matter by any printer "or anyone in competition" with printing establishments, and then goes into competition with printers by quoting a price under that set by the code.

It is bad enough for the government to sell printing below cost of production in competition with printers who are struggling under a heavy tax burden; but it is even worse for the government to set up a price standard with heavy penalties for violation, and then to be a consistent violator of that code.

It was customary in the early days of Texas to call cows and calves 10-dollar bills, and hogs and chickens chance.

An early Texan colonist in distress dared not, under penalty of giving offense, offer to pay for relief in personal help.

Upon his capture by General Sam Houston, Santa Anna said, "You can afford to be generous, you have conquered the Napoleon of the West."

Those who regard patriotism as nothing better than public selfishness cannot appreciate the Texans of the early Colonial period.

Custer Disaster Messenger.

IN the gray twilight of the dawn of June 28, 1876, the men on the steamer Far West, tied up on the banks of the Little Big Horn river in Montana, were awakened by a splutter of rifle fire. As they rushed on deck, they saw a horseman galloping furiously up the valley, turning now and then in his saddle to fire back at the whooping Indians who were pursuing him. When the redskins saw the steamer, they gave up the pursuit and the lone horseman dashed up. Springing from his saddle, he staggered on to the Far West and gasped out: "Custer and all his men have been wiped out by the Sioux!"

He was "Muggins" Taylor, a scout attached to General Gibbons' command, on his way to Fort Ellis with dispatches from his commander. Discovered by the Indians he had been forced to run for his life and only the lucky chance of his finding the Far West where he hid, saved him from death at the hands of the savages. To the men on board the boat he gave the first authentic account of the disaster that had befallen the dashing leader of the Seventh Cavalry.

Two days later Taylor left the Far West when it steamed out of the Big Horn into the Yellowstone and set out on his long, lonely ride of 175 miles to Fort Ellis. A hundred miles from his starting place he reached an old stage station on the Yellowstone where lived Horace Countryman, an old scout and Indian fighter. Taylor was so exhausted that he was unable to go on, but the next day, accompanied by Countryman, he set out on a fresh horse and reached Fort Ellis, where he again told his tragic story to a group of horrified listeners.

In the meantime Countryman had continued on to Bozeman, where he expected to be able to spread the tidings of Custer's fate over a government telegraph wire. But on his arrival there he found the government wire down and useless, so he continued on to Helena which he reached about noon on July 4. There he told the news to Andrews J. Fisk, an Associated Press correspondent, and that afternoon Fisk flashed to the world the first news of the disaster on the Little Big Horn—a feat made possible by the daring ride of "Muggins" Taylor.

After the Indian wars were over Taylor became a peace officer in Montana and was killed in the town of Conison in October, 1882, by a drunken ne'er-do-well named Lump or Lemp who shot Taylor down when the deputy sheriff attempted to arrest him.

Application blanks will be furnished to them from the Scout Office.

—and They Still Call It a Light Bill

MOST of the Twenty Million families totaling Ninety Millions of our people who live electrically still call their electric service bills "Light Bills"—although the light that Thomas A. Edison brought to them in such abundance at so little cost now represents a small part of the average electric service bill.

Today's light bill is an "Electric Living Bill"—the only bill that a housewife pays that has shrunk steadily for each different service that it brings into her home.

ELECTRICITY is Today's Greatest and Cheapest Single Service

When you sit by your radio—your fan blowing a refreshing breeze, and a glass of electrically cooled beverage in your hand, remember that you use electric service to do more things for you than any other service you can employ—and that you pay less of each service than you pay for any other comparable service you enjoy.

Carl Runge of Mason Announces For Congress

The name of Carl Runge of Mason, former District Judge of the 33rd Judicial District, will be found in the announcement columns of this paper as a candidate for Congress. Judge Runge is 42 years of age, is well and favorably known throughout the District and other portions of the State, being a native of Mason County and a member of a pioneer family which has been a resident of the District for eighty years. He is a grandson of Doctor William Runge, who settled in Kendall County in 1854 and a son of Judge Rudolph Runge who as a youth in 1867 helped erect the first saw mill on the Concho river which sawed timbers preparatory to the construction of Fort Concho—now San Angelo; and a son of Mrs. Threse Runge nee Marschall of Gillespie County. He married a daughter of Thos. Murray, pioneer ranchman of Mason County and a sister of A. T. Murray who was murdered in 1929 while Sheriff of Mason County. He is the father of two sons aged ten and twelve.

Ranchmen, Farmers and Business Men Requested Him to Run.

A petition bearing the signatures of 222 McCulloch County ranchmen, farmers and business men, was presented Judge Runge requesting him to make the race for Congress. McCulloch County is not in the 33rd Judicial District, where he was Judge. The petition set forth that Judge Runge "has always been closely identified with the livestock, farming and business interests of this section and has an adequate and sympathetic understanding of the legislative and economic needs of this District. He has been an outstanding civic leader in the development of this section and we recommend him as an honest, capable and efficient representative to the people of the 21st Congressional District." After receiving the above petition and numerous requests and assurances of support from all over the District, Judge Runge decided to become a candidate for Congress. Thereafter he received petitions from the Counties where he serves as District Judge bearing the signatures of about two thousand persons endorsing him, for Congress.

Not a Professional Politician. This is his first race. He has never before run for public office, but twice the voters of Mason County wrote his name on the ticket for County Attorney and he held that office for two terms. Shortly thereafter upon the death of Judge McLean, he was appointed District Judge of the 33rd Judicial District and although apparently assured that he would have no opposition he was not a candidate to succeed himself.

Successful Record as Judge. During the time that he was District Judge, he tried several cases that attracted statewide attention, among them the Ferguson suit against the State Highway Department tried at Austin where he was sent to sit for Judge Moore who was sick. The decision in this case, like most other tried before him, was affirmed by the higher courts. Because of the correctness of his decisions and the dispatch with which he transacted business, he kept the court costs at a minimum and saved the tax payers money.

Educated in Texas. He is a graduate of Mason High School and attended the University of Texas from 1909 to 1912 and from 1913 to 1915, graduating from the academic and law departments of the University of Texas and receiving both the B. A. and LL. B. degrees. While at the University of Texas he helped defray his expenses by working in the Co-op Book Store, doing student assistant work in the Academic Department and being Quiz Master in the Law Department. He also played on the football and track teams.

Also Taught School. At the age of sixteen he taught a country school in Mason County and five years later taught in Seguin.

Services as Lawyer and Citizen. He was admitted to the bar in 1915 and is a member of the State Bar Association and is licensed to practice before all the courts of Texas, the United States Supreme Court, Inter-State Commerce Commission and several other Departments and Bureaus of the Federal Government. He organized the Mason National Farm Loan Association so that farmers and ranchmen could secure loans from the Federal Land Bank and continued to practice law in Mason County until 1917 when he enlisted in the Signal Corps and became an instructor in the Air Service. After the war he re-engaged in the practice of law in Mason in 1919.

As County Attorney he helped prosecute numerous cattle, goat and sheep theft cases. He has always been a booster for good roads and as Secretary of the Puget Sound to Gulf Highway Association he helped secure the designation of State Highway No. 9, Federal 385. As Director of the Gulf & West Texas Railroad Company, he represented San Angelo, Brady, Mason, Fredericksburg and San Antonio before the Inter-State Commerce Commission at Washington. With Elgin O. Kothmann, the owner of the Premier Ranch and producer of registered Hereford cattle, he is the builder and owner of the Fort Mason Hotel—a modern 54 room fire proof structure in the town of Mason.

He was chairman of the Mason County Relief work until he was announced for Congress and with his assistants rendered splendid service in behalf of the unemployed of Mason County. He is past president of the Mason Chamber of Commerce and of the School Board. He is a member of the Fort Mason Post of the American Legion.

Easily Accessible. Because of his residence in the central part of the District he is most readily accessible to all of the citizens of the District. Besides knowing the needs of the District from actual experience and education, he has the ability and moral courage to properly represent the same.

Platform. Judge Runge said: "I believe in proper respect for duly constituted authority and observance of the principles laid down in our Constitution, a common sense but rigid enforcement of the law and a closer co-operation between the law enforcement agencies of the State and Federal Government so that lawlessness may be suppressed. The great livestock and farming industries and kindred interests of this District should be represented in Congress by a man who from experience and training understands their needs. I have no extended platform and no promises to make except that, in the event of my election, I will attend strictly to the duties of a Congressman from this District and will try to take care of the problems of the District as they arise. We are living in an extreme abnormal time and such sudden and radical departures from the recognized fundamentals are taking place that no sincere man can advocate a program with any hope of fulfillment other than as above set forth."

TEXAS OUTLOOK FOR CROPS FAIR

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its May 1 crop report said growing conditions were favorable in most sections of the State during April.

"With the exception of the extreme western part of the State and a few localities elsewhere, moisture supplies were ample," the report said. "The condition of the wheat crop on May 1 is below average, but considerably better than that of a year ago. The oat crop is reported better than usual. The pasture condition is good. The potato crop is about average and the outlook for peaches is better than usual."

"The condition of Texas wheat on May 1 was reported at 56 per cent of normal compared with 48 per cent a year ago and 75 per cent the 10 year average (1922-1931). The estimated abandonment of acreage prior to May 1 was 30 per cent of the 4,087,000 acres sown last Fall, which leaves 2,861,000 acres for harvest this year. The May 1 condition of 56 per cent indicates an average yield of nine bushels per acre, which applied to the acres remaining for harvest forecasts a total production of 25,749,000 bushels, compared with 18,022,000 bushels produced in 1933, and 39,653,000 bushels the five-year average production (1927-1931).

"Moisture conditions have been unfavorable in the western portion of the Panhandle, particularly in the extreme western tier of counties. Conditions are more favorable in the eastern half of the Panhandle and to the eastward. If sufficient rainfall is received during the remainder of the growing season some sections of the wheat belt should have good yields."

"Texas oats condition on May 1 was rated at 74 per cent of normal compared with 55 per cent a year ago and 71 per cent the eight-year average (1924-1931). Rains came too late in some sections of the State materially to affect the outlook for yields, but taking the State as a whole, prospects are favorable."

"The conditions of the tame hay crop in Texas on May 1 was 74 per cent of normal, compared with 68 per cent a year ago and 86 per cent the 10-year average (1922-1931).

"Stocks of hay on farms in Texas as on May 1 were 12 per cent of last year's production, compared with 21 per cent a year ago and 16 per cent the five-year average (1927-1931). Dry weather during the winter resulted in heavy feeding of hay to livestock and supplies are lower than usual."

"The outlook for the Texas peach crop was favorable. The condition on May 1 was 60 per cent of normal compared with 25 per cent a year ago and 55 per cent the eight-year average (1924-1931). Production is forecast at 2,940,000 bushels, compared with 782,000 bushels a year ago and 1,384,000 bushels the five-year average (1927-1931). Production in the ten Southern States is forecast at 18,556,000 bushels, as against only 12,326,000 bushels last season.

"The condition of the Texas Irish potato crop on May 1 was 71 per cent of normal compared with 69 per cent the eight-year average (1924-1931). For the ten Southern States the May 1 condition was 76.9 per cent, compared with 75.9 a year ago and 76.5 the eight-year average. These figures relate to the combined farm and commercial crops."

Early Military Training. In the early days of Ohio, law required every able-bodied man between the ages of eighteen and forty-five to arm himself with rifle, bayonet, knapsack, ammunition, and two extra flints and meet at least four times each year with his company for training and once each year with his regiment.

Under varying conditions the moon appears to be of different colors. It has never appeared to be of a blue color and hence "once in a blue moon" may be taken to mean that the occurrence referred to in the expression will most likely never happen.

Science of Chemistry
The science of chemistry had its origin in remote antiquity. Many of its earlier secrets form the basis of modern knowledge. Early chemistry developed from gradual findings usually relating to the extraction of various metals from ores. Modern chemistry had been largely developed along industrial lines during the Nineteenth century, and since the World war enormous progress has been made.

RUNNING WATER MAY BE HAD EASILY ON MOST FARM HOMES

By TERRY LANDSEER,
In The Semi-Weekly Farm News
The luxury of a bathroom on the farm and the labor-saving features of running water and a sink in the kitchen are easily appreciated by those who have once used them. But too many are inclined to feel that almost the sole advantage of a water closet in the house is its convenience.

All such persons overlook the fact that the chief use of farm plumbing system is sanitation—prevention of spread of disease. It is insufficient to have sanitary sewage disposal for only certain members of the family, or certain persons on the farm. Seasonal farm workers—extra hands—are as likely, if not more likely, to have typhoid fever or other diseases that can be transmitted to healthy members of the family through contamination of drinking water, flies, or otherwise. If the farm is worked partly by hired labor, there should be, for protection of the family, provisions for sanitary sewage disposal at the barn, as well.

Farm sanitation means, first of all, pure drinking water. This is by no means always as simple as it seems. Many a crystal-clear spring is unfit to drink from because it contains colon bacilli (typhoid fever germs), picked up near by or at a greater distance. Any suspected spring should not be used until samples of the water are submitted to a chemist or bacteriologist for study. It may mean life or death to members of the family.

For the same reason, water in dug wells is not necessarily pure. Likewise, water taken from the roof and run to a barrel or tank may contain typhoid fever germs, but is more likely to contain dead birds, bird lime, or dead insects, including spiders. The least that can be done for insuring purity of water taken from a roof is to screen the gutters and valleys on the roof, and clean the screens once a month.

Filtering Drinking Water.
A far better means of purifying or keeping water pure taken from a roof is to let it discharge into a hoghead or other receptacle, then flow into a sand and charcoal filter at the ground level, and from that into a buried cement reservoir from which it can be pumped into the house where needed.

The minimum number of pieces of plumbing that can be called a sanitary unit are a kitchen sink, a toilet combination, and a bathtub or shower, or both. These may be as simple or as elaborate as you care to make them, but in any event they ought to be new and the pipes and fittings should be new. To use old equipment is to invite endless trouble. A really complete plumbing system calls for a hot-water heater, also, or farms, a tank-type heater with circulating water is much to be preferred to an instantaneous or intermittent heater.

The kitchen sink may consist of one piece and have above it a cold-water faucet. But a sink is much improved by having a drain board at each end, on which to set dishes while being washed, and after. Almost as important is a hot-water faucet. There are sinks with backs, sinks with drain boards built to them, sinks with two compartments, and so on. Any plumber or plumbing house will be glad to show you samples. The sink is the cheapest of the ordinary pieces of plumbing and the one which means the most to the housewife. No farm wife who has running water available should let her husband rest until he installs a sink.

Three Types of Bathtubs.
Bathtubs are of three types—leg tubs, base tubs and built-in tubs. The leg tub is the cheapest but the hardest to clean under and behind. The base tub costs a little more. Since it rests on the floor, it doesn't have to be cleaned under but it does have to be cleaned behind. The most expensive and most satisfactory tub is the built-in tub. It doesn't have to be cleaned under or behind, because it is set into the wall and dirt is cemented out.

Toilets are much the same, except in design and style. Those equipped with siphons are less noisy than the ordinary types. See them all before you buy. Toilet fixtures necessarily have traps to seal out noxious gases that otherwise would arise from the drain pipe. Bathtubs and sinks also should have sediment and gas traps, but this is not vitally necessary. Likewise, toilet fixtures must be vented with a stack thru the roof, and tub and sink also should be.

It is because of the necessity of avoiding clogged pipes and shutting out the insidious and deadly carbon monoxide gas that is likely to arise from drain pipes that plumbing fixtures should be properly installed. The simpler systems can be installed by any handy man who will study a few directions. More complicated ones can be installed by a good farm mechanic. But it is better to employ a plumber, if you can.

If necessity compels you to install your own plumbing, write to the United States Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletin 941, Water Systems for Farm Homes; 1226, Farm Plumbing, and 1227, Sewage and Sewerage for Farm Homes, and inclose 25c to pay for them. Learn to recite the contents of these bulletins backward and forward, and I'll venture to say you can pass any examination for a plumber's license.

Septic Tanks.

Merely getting the water into the house and getting the sewage and waste water out is not all there is to a plumbing system. There must be final disposal of the sewage. If you live near a river or other stream that does not pass through anybody's land for hundreds of yards after passing you, you can discharge your sewage directly into the stream, the law permitting. But generally you will be forced to build a septic tank or a cesspool. A cesspool serves only until it fills, then another must be dug. But a septic tank disintegrates the sewage, making it safe to discharge it into any small stream or underground on a hillside, away from the home water supply. Underground irrigation from a septic tank is helpful to field crops, but is hardly advisable for gardens.

In planning your home plumbing system keep it in mind that the big idea is sanitation, rather than convenience; that the work should be well done, and that the better the fixtures and the better pipe you buy, the greater will be your sanitation and your satisfaction.

TEXAS FARM NEWS

Franklin — Another peach crop is expected this year by Calvin Petty, a Robertson county orchard demonstrator in the Henry Prairie community who now has 500 bearing trees. Developed from a small start several years ago in cooperation with the county agent, Mr. Petty prunes and disprays his trees regularly. "Many failures that are ascribed to unsuitable soil, nematodes and other so-called incurables are really the results of farmer neglect," he says. "Failures due to freezes and other weather conditions can often be avoided by using an assortment of varieties, so that at least a part of the fruit will reach maturity each year," he adds.

Memphis — Three Hall county farmers are reported by James A. Jackson, county agent, to be developing a system of level terraces turned up slightly at each end to catch and hold run-off water from adjoining pastures, fields and roads. The idea is to avoid the danger of damage from flood waters and also to give the fields free irrigations to insure crops in dry years.

Falfurrias — Cull market beets fed to a herd of 40 Jerseys increased butterfat production 8 pounds per day and saved two-thirds of the ensilage ration furnished the cows by Clarence Burdett, Brooks county dairyman. He grew a field of beets for market and after picking it over found that many beets remained. The beet ration is good in every respect, the county agent reports.

Fredericksburg — Preparing wax cloth for distribution to Gillespie county farmers who bud native pecan trees to improve varieties has been a hobby of County Judge Herman Usener of Gillespie county for ten years. Every year he has prepared enough cloth to protect 25,000 buds. As a result of this service in connection with county agent work, every community in the county has improved pecan trees coming on. The total runs into the thousands.

Roby — Five hooked rug demonstrators of Fisher county have developed the art of making hooked rugs in their homes for market purposes and find it to be a very pleasant and profitable home industry, valuable to them and their families, according to the report of Miss Velma Heald, Fisher county home demonstration agent. These women have organized a hooked rug and mat association for the purpose of improving the quality of rugs and to further the marketing of the products. Since organizing the association they have made 61 rugs valued at $488. Thirty-one of these rugs have been sold for $263.50, 18 have been given as wedding and Christmas gifts, 10 rugs have recently been completed for sale and four other rugs are under construction. Now markets are being located by the association at local furniture and department stores. Up-to-date rugs have been sold to department stores and to individuals in Abilene, Anson, Roby, Brownwood and Longworth.

Mrs. Robert Scott of Newman has made and sold 16 rugs at a $112 profit which she used to buy a washing machine, to pay a dental bill and to buy part of her daughter's graduating clothes. Mrs. G. F. Hood of Sylvester has sold 14 rugs at $93 profit and used it to buy bed linens, clothing, permanent hair waves for herself and her daughter and to pay for a set of teeth. She also financed a trip to the College of Industrial Arts with rug profits.

Mrs. Sim Chapman of Sylvester says, "I find rug work to be very fascinating. Since I have been studying color harmony and designs for my rugs I find beauty in everything about me. I even have my family interested in looking for designs and they often help me criticize my rugs." Mrs. Chapman has made 10 rugs. She used the profit from three of them to pay fare for a trip to visit her daughter and her only grandson. She has bought clothing with other profits from her rugs.

Vernon — By using her imagination, a small amount of lumber, two extra windows, and some paint and wall paper, Mrs. Etta Randel, bedroom demonstrator for Farmers Valley Club, has enlarged a

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES? HERE'S HOW!

CANNING LATEER USE STEAM PRESSURE COOKER FOR BEST RESULTS — THE TENDEREST AND SWEETEST PRODUCTS KEEP THE FLAVOR LONGEST

When you are canning fruits or vegetables or both, the first thing you should have ready is all the necessary equipment. What the equipment is, and how to use it most effectively in putting up your preserves, is described by Mary Dague in the accompanying article, the series on canning.

BY MARY DAGUE

Whether you are canning fruits or vegetables or both, the first thing you should have ready is all the necessary equipment. What the equipment is, and how to use it most effectively in putting up your preserves, is described by Mary Dague in the accompanying article, the series on canning.

It's wise economy to have your own or to go to a big truck garden to know exactly how fresh fruits and vegetables are. I emphasize too strongly the value of freshness in fruits and vegetables, particularly vegetables, for canning purposes. Furthermore, the stage of ripeness of all produce is most important. Remember that canning preserves a fruit or vegetable as it is at the time you want to can it at its sweetest if you want to keep this quality for your winter.

Canning Equipment. You must buy your vegetables in a way of knowing how they are, it's not only a matter of time, money and material, but a risk to health as well. If you are in a hurry to can, then you must determine what you are going to do first of all. BE READY. Buy cans, tops and rubbers and your canning equipment in the house ready to use. Your canning equipment will depend on what you can. Fruits and tomatoes may be canned in several ways successfully. The hot-water bath canner, a "waterless cooker," a steamer or a heat-controlled oven and the hot-pack method of canning insure good results. The hot-water bath canners, steamers and "waterless cookers" can be bought in most house-furnishing stores and are available in various sizes.

The home-canning of non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans, corn, spinach and so forth involves a situation to which you should give considerable thought. It is almost impossible to effect adequate sterilization of these vegetables by ordinary methods of canning. State universities all over the country as well as the United States Department of Agriculture recommend that all vegetables canned at home—with the exception of tomatoes—be canned in a steam pressure cooker.

Having necessary equipment on hand, as shown here, is the first essential of successful canning.

However, if you do have your own garden and want to can these so-called non-acid vegetables and you feel that you can't invest in a steam pressure cooker, you can use the hot-water canner providing you take certain precautions. It has been found that the addition of a little acid aids in the preservation of these vegetables without seriously affecting the flavor of the canned product. From one to two teaspoons lemon juice added to each pint jar of asparagus, string beans, peas, greens and corn makes it possible to can fresh perfect vegetables without danger of spoilage. Corn requires two teaspoons lemon juice to a pint. This gives a slightly acid flavor when the jar is opened for serving, but 1-8 teaspoon soda added with the seasoning when the vegetable is reheated neutralizes the acid most satisfactorily. The other vegetables, which do not pack as closely in jars, require less lemon juice and the flavor cannot be detected.

Successful canning depends on the principle of sterilization. Food which has been made sterile must be kept so and the efficiency of these processes is the answer to the canning problem. In addition to the necessity of a temperature which will kill germs and perfect, complete sealing to keep out germ-laden air, several other factors must be considered in the work of canning.

Pick Sound Materials.

I want to repeat that canning does not in any way improve the quality of the product canned. Fruits and vegetables which were old and tasteless before canning will be just that way after canning. Produce which is bruised or specked has begun to be attacked by bacteria which is not destroyed in the sterilization of canning. Consequently only sound, fresh materials should ever be canned.

Fruits and vegetables canned in glass should be stored in a dark place. Light will cause the foods to lose their color, which of course detracts from their appearance when served. The temperature at which canned vegetables are stored is also important, since it has a pronounced effect on the keeping qualities. Store them in as cool a place as possible, preferably between 45 and 60 degrees F.

A canning budget will help you to decide how much to expect from a bushel of fruits and vegetables and how much you will need. Unless you can buy shipped foods during the winter months, you will have to rely on canned products to a great extent. This will determine your needs:

Production Chart.

- One bushel berries should yield 18 quarts or 36 pints.
- One bushel peaches, 18 quarts or 36 pints.
- One bushel pears, 18 quarts or 36 pints.
- One bushel plums, 20 quarts or 40 pints.
- One bushel beans (lima unshelled), 10 quarts or 20 pints.
- One bushel beans (green or "string"), 15 quarts or 30 pints.
- One bushel corn (husked), 8 quarts or 12 pints.
- One bushel peas in the pod, 10 quarts or 20 pints.
- Fifteen pounds spinach, 5 quarts or 10 pints.
- One bushel tomatoes, 16 quarts or 32 pints.

MAKING Smart CLOTHES

Bless the ingenious designer who first thought of dresses with matching—or harmonizing—jackets! Smart women have found that a simple little jacket adds so much to the wearability of an outfit. This season jackets are much more interesting. They do bright, whimsical things. They become part of the dress design. Look at this one. It is cut away in front to show the bodies of the dress, and the three-quarter sleeves give town formality to the costume. When you get to the office or to your bridge party, you can remove the jacket and be cool-as-a-cucumber in a smart little short-sleeved dress. Make this in pastel printed silk, oringham, or any one of the attractive novelty cottons. It will be a grand asset in your wardrobe. This is a Butterwick Pattern and may be bought at your favorite department store.

FARM ASSOCIATION MEETS AT SWEETWATER

H. G. Lucas, president of the Texas Agriculture Association, has called a regional meeting of the association at Sweetwater for Friday, May 25, this being the first of eight regional meetings planned by the state organization. The purpose of the meetings will be to perfect plans for the organizations of county agriculture associations throughout the state.

Functions of the TAA are similar to the Farm Bureau in other states but, according to Mr. Lucas, it is further advanced. The TAA works with the farm credit group, the AAA and the extension department of the United States Department of Agriculture. The chief aim of the TAA is to better farm conditions in the state.

"I put in over 600 feet of concrete sub-irrigation tile and I wouldn't take $50 for it," declares S. P. Crawford of New Port community in Archert county. He is only one of many "satisfied customers" in that county, the home demonstration agent reporting that 5550 feet of this tile have been paid this season, three times as much as in all of 1933.

But Who Believes It?

There is a myth that there flies through the heavens a bird, which on account of its immense size darkens the sky, the flapping of whose wings causes the thunder, the winking of whose eyes creates the lightning, the shaking of whose feathers scatters the rain, and the velocity of whose body produces the wind.

Early Sundials

The early English sundials were made of stone, and often with elaborate carving on them. They adorned not only the walls of churches where they had survived from earlier periods, but also the gateways of monasteries and cathedrals, castles and public buildings.

A Movie Wedding, But Real Just the Same

Just like in the movies, though it was real, and very much in earnest, was the wedding of Carmelita Geraghty, film actress, to Carey Wilson, scenario writer. Here are the flower-decked bride, left, and bridegroom, with Jean Harlow, right, who was matron of honor.

FARM INCOME CLIMBS UNDER FIRST YEAR OF ADJUSTMENT ACT

Cash income of American agriculture increased more than 39 per cent during the year which ended May 1, 1934. This marked improvement was cited by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration last week in a general summary of the first 12 months' operations under the Agricultural Adjustment Act passed May 12, 1933.

Estimated farm income, exclusive of the value of products used on the farm, was $2,979,000,000 for the year ending May 1, 1933. For the year just ended the cash income was estimated at $5,530,000,000. The increased income was more than one and one-half billion dollars. Rental and benefit payments to farmers who cooperated in adjustment programs accounted for more than 12 per cent of this increase.

At the close of the first year under the Adjustment Act, farmers have signed more than 2,860,000 contracts to restrict acreage. In addition about 800,000 farmers are benefiting from marketing agreements put into effect during the year.

Definite progress has been made toward "parity" for farm prices, which is the object of the Adjustment Act. A year ago the ratio of prices the farmer received to the price he paid was 52. It now has advanced to 62.

BROWNWOOD VOTES WET, BUT COUNTY REJECTS 3.2 BEER

In the special beer election held last Saturday, the voters of Brown county decreed that the sale of 3.2 beer within the confines of the county shall remain illegal. The majority against the legalizing of the 3.2 beverage, said by the United States Congress to be non-intoxicating, was 580, almost two hundred votes less than the margin registered by the dry forces last summer.

Unofficial returns from Saturday's election were, for beer, 1,400; against beer, 1,588. The total vote of 3,396 was about sixty per cent of the county's voting strength, this being based upon paid poll taxes, 5,322, and estimated exemptions of 800.

The city of Brownwood polled a 57-vote majority for the legalizing of 3.2 beer but the overwhelming dry vote of other towns in the county and the rural boxes soon overcame the slight advantage given beer in Brownwood. Two of the city's four wards voted for the sale of beer and two registered majorities against the sale of the 3.2 beverage. Williams and Elkins also voted for beer with Brooksmith voting 24 for beer and 24 against.
