

NO PWA FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR SEWER PROJECT

Application On File, Awaits Appropriation

Representative McFarlane Submits Information Received From PWA

Inactivity in PWA circles regarding a Federal grant for Muenster's proposed sewer system has been explained by lack of funds, it was disclosed here this week in a letter from Congressman W. D. McFarlane to Herbert Meurer.

Shortly after the bond election in which Muenster citizens voted to carry their share of the expense provided a PWA grant could be secured, Herbert Meurer advised Congressman McFarlane that no response had been received from PWA, and requested that McFarlane use his influence in behalf of Muenster. McFarlane was informed that no action was taken because the full year's appropriation had been exhausted.

In submitting the information to Muenster he pointed out, however, that the application remains on file and will be eligible for consideration if and when another appropriation is made.

Nothing concerning the project has been received from PWA by Mayor Endres. In accordance with his instructions he wired returns of the election to headquarters as soon as the polls were closed on September 30 and has received not so much as a confirmation of his wire.

When told of McFarlane's letter he registered no surprise. He said that communications in September intimated the funds were running low. He added that lack of official action indicated a probability that nothing could be done and the application was simply pigeon-holed.

Rumors that a letter charging dishonesty in the election had been sent to Washington are not taken seriously. While it seems possible that a complaint may have been registered, it is taken for granted that officials would require more concrete evidence, such as contesting the election, rather than the opinion of an individual.

Proponents of the sewer are glad to note that the 30 day limit for contesting has passed, and with it has passed the chance for a long unnecessary delay pending court proceedings.

Muenster's application is now in order in every detail and is due for approval as soon as sufficient money can be secured to reach its place on the waiting list.

HALLOWE'EN SPOOKS ARE KIND TO CITY IN THIS YEAR'S ATTACK

Halloween spooks were on their good behavior Monday night. All over town they scattered evidence of a very active excursion, but their pranks were not the kind that result in personal losses or serious inconvenience.

Their best was to push an old broken down Model-T in front of J. B. Wilde's garage, turn it on its back and drape over it the large new streamer for '39 Chevrolet.

Across the street they left Hale Neathery in a predicament. Coming to work Tuesday he found his door blocked with cans and ripe vegetables, and nailed shut.

Other activity around town consisted of such stunts as moving signs putting benches on top of roofs, marking show windows, and pushing people's cars into alleys.

LINDSAY CYO GROUP INVITED TO ATTEND MUENSTER'S PROGRAM

Members of the Lindsay unit of the Catholic Youth Organization are invited to join Muenster members at their program in the parish hall next Monday evening. Father Francis Zimmerer, sponsor, revealed Wednesday afternoon.

Special preparations have been under way for several weeks to make this event, the first sponsored by the local group, an outstanding success to encourage a series of future activities.

The evening will begin with a one act comedy, "Hey Teacher," for which nineteen members have been rehearsing the past three weeks. Following that will be a refreshment course and dancing.

PRESENT REPORT ON RAILROAD WAGE CUT

TURKEY MARKET OPEN TODAY, PICKING WILL BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Friday, Nov. 4, is the opening day of this year's Thanksgiving Turkey program at the Farmers' Marketing Association. At that time Roy Callahan, representing Wilson and Company of Oklahoma City, will arrive to make arrangements for picking and packing, which will begin next week unless a sufficiently large number of birds is received to justify starting this week-end. The buying market opens Friday.

Because of recent changes in the Gainesville Hatchery, Roger King will not be back this year as grader. His place will probably be taken by Roy Callahan.

"Spot" Minter, in charge of clerical work last year, is expected to be back at his post again.

DALLAS DISTRIBUTOR BIDS HIGH, RECEIPTS FALL IN FMA PLANT

The most recent development of grief at the Cheese Factory is the competitive bid from a large milk distributor in Dallas. Rudy Hellman stated Wednesday that local receipts had fallen off about 1,000 pounds a day, the losses being sustained among customers in the south part of the county.

While admitting that the decreased patronage is definitely felt, he does not regard the situation as alarming, but rather as an emergency measure on the part of the Dallas distributor to relieve a shortage resulting from the current drought. As soon as production picks up he predicts that the premium prices, which now offset increased transportation cost, will be discontinued and patrons will return to Muenster.

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORY

Within a comparatively short time Muenster will have a new telephone directory to replace the one that has been in use for about two years. Two men preparing copy for the book were active here and at Gainesville during the past week-end.

John Herr and Herman Swirczynski took a truck load of cheese to Houston Monday.

EX-SUMACS LOSE BY LOP-SIDED COUNT TO JUNIOR COLLEGE FIVE

The Ex-Sumacs appeared as full fledged "Has Been's" in their first return under the old colors on Wednesday night of last week. They went down 42 to 14 before the vicious attack of a speedy smooth clicking club from Gainesville Junior College.

Taking the floor without a single practice session, the boys showed typical early season weakness in every detail of the game. Shooting and ball handling were as poor as defensive work.

Coupled with their own weakness was the fact that they were facing what is probably the best array of basketball talent ever assembled in Cooke County. Stars from last year's clubs at Era, Hood, Calisburg, Valley View and Slidell are there to make up a formidable starting lineup with a reserve strength almost equally as strong.

Pat Stelzer, speaking for the Ex-Sumacs, said they will try to average one game and one practice session a week. Because of conflicts with their jobs they will not be able to meet more frequently. Furthermore they prefer to avoid a hard schedule. They intend to play only for the pleasure and exercise they will get.

MEMORIAL SERVICES SUNDAY WILL HONOR DECEASED KNIGHTS

Deceased members of the Muenster Knights of Columbus Council will be honored Sunday afternoon, November 6, at 2 o'clock, when members will assemble in the K of C Hall for their annual memorial services, it was announced in the order's regular meeting Wednesday night.

All local members, reminded of the time when their names will be listed among those absent, are urgently requested to appear promptly at 2 o'clock for the ceremony, and for benediction, which will follow immediately thereafter in church.

SIX ON HONOR ROLL

Students at the Muenster High School meriting a place on the honor roll for the first six-weeks period are Montez Carter, Helen Marr, Anselma Pagel, Edna Lee Carter, Bertha Jane Hoehn and Leonard Knabe.

SLOW RAIN STARTING EARLY THURSDAY A.M. MOST WELCOME HERE

A most welcome response to prayers and hopes of recent weeks came early Thursday morning in the form of a slow rain that penetrated as it fell. As this issue goes to press the total rainfall amounts to about a half inch and prospects for more are encouraging.

Farmers are most anxious that this shower will be a real soaker. Back as far as the beginning of September the ground was so dry that small grains failed to sprout. Since then almost all of the grain has been sowed locally but very few of the fields show the slightest evidence of plant life.

Livestock too has been retarded for lack of moisture on grazing lands. A good rain now would be helpful to increase milk and beef production.

GAINESVILLE TO GET MYRA RURAL ROUTE AFTER NOVEMBER 15

In accordance with a recent change made by the Post Office department, mail now delivered by rural carrier out of Myra will be delivered by a Gainesville rural carrier after Nov. 15. Official notices were sent during the past few days to each box holder on the route.

It was disclosed here that Roger Townsley, the present carrier for the route, will be retained on the job. However, circumstances will make it necessary for him to change his residence from Myra to Gainesville.

Herbert Meurer, Muenster postmaster, said that the route change had been in prospect for some time and that efforts were made to have the route transferred to Muenster rather than Gainesville.

No change was announced concerning the Myra post office.

COWTOWN COPS HERE TUESDAY TO PROMOTE BENEFIT HORSE SHOW

The pretty white horse that drew all the admiration from crowds on Main street Tuesday afternoon will soon belong to the person who can give him the best name. He is destined to be given away as a prize as one of the features in a horse show at Fort Worth, Nov. 8 to 13, at the Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum.

Three members of the Fort Worth police department, V. O. Cox, T. M. "Fudge" Woods, and C. E. Smith, were here Tuesday boosting the show. The police department is sponsoring the event and will receive 50 per cent of the proceeds for the Police Benevolent Association insurance fund, which was set up to assist injured officers and their families.

In addition to the white horse, a shetland pony is being offered to the boy or girl under 16 who chooses the best name for it.

EDGAR FETTE GETS HOTPOINT DEALERSHIP

Looking forward to the time when electrical current will be available in local farm homes and there will be a definite increase in the demand for electrical equipment, Edgar Fette recently accepted the dealership for Hotpoint appliances.

His first samples, a range and a refrigerator, arrived late last week and are now on display at the Hirsby Bakery. Fette states that he will bring in more appliances as he finds it convenient to haul them from Dallas.

Electric Co-op To Release Official Instructions For Wiring Early Next Week

SCOUT HIKE FRIDAY TO END WITH OUTING NEAR SAM BASS CAVE

The Sam Bass cave near Leo is the destination of the season's first hike and the scene of the first all night camp for Muenster's boy scouts this week-end. Virgil Lee Welsh, scoutmaster, stated that the boys will leave Friday afternoon as soon as possible after school is dismissed and return late Saturday afternoon.

Sixteen boys, those who previously belonged to the troop and several others who passed tests for tenderfoot ranking, are eligible for the trip. All committee members have been invited to join.

Mr. Welsh said that the troop will ride in a truck to a point about three miles from the cave and proceed from there on foot. Preliminary work at the cave, such as cleaning it and an adjoining spring, was completed during the past two week-ends under Scoutmaster Welsh's supervision.

Attendance at the scout regular meeting last Monday night suffered as a result of falling on Halloween. The older boys, knowing that the meeting would be occupied chiefly with tenderfoot tests elected to join the spooks.

Three boys, Andy Stelzer, Bill Bowling and Ray Schumacher were admitted and seven failed to pass all necessary tests but are being given another chance before the outing. Two more boys are waiting for their twelfth birthdays to be admitted to the troop.

BARN DANCE IN K-C HALL THURSDAY TO BE ITS LAST THIS YEAR

The last dance sponsored this year by the Knights of Columbus will be a full fledged barn dance on the night of Thursday Nov. 10, Roy Endres, chairman of the K of C dance committee, announced this week.

Overalls and gingham will be considered the height of fashion for the event. The Walterscheid Band has been requested to brush the dust off their old numbers. Old favorite diversions such as "Paul Jones" and "Ladies' Choice," and, if performers can be found, perhaps a square dance or two, are expected to revive some of the spirit of yester-year.

Mr. Endres called special attention to the fact that this dance is in accordance with local custom no public social events are sponsored during the season of Advent, the four weeks preceding Christmas. The annual Thanksgiving dance in the parish hall is considered the headliner for the last week of this month.

PAROCHIAL CAGERS ANXIOUS TO MIX IT WITH COUNTY'S BEST

Basket ball stock at the Parochial School is going up. Commenting on the 26 to 28 loss sustained by his boys at Myra last week, Father Francis, coach, expressed confidence that they will be able to make a creditable showing against most quintets of the county, especially after hearing a report that the Myra lads are ranked as leading contenders for this year's county banner.

Investigation has shown to Father Francis that his charges, since they are not enrolled in a public school, will not be permitted to enter the annual interscholastic league tournament. "But that does not prevent us from playing any team in the county," he said. "We hope to develop a good club and match games with the county champs as well as other good clubs." He and his boys are looking forward to an interesting series with Myra.

Other games planned for the near future are with Father Brady's quint at Saint Mary's High School in Gainesville. In all probability the Muenster-Gainesville affairs will be double headers with the girls' teams providing half the show in volley ball.

HUMPTY DUMPTY

Word received from Subiaco College early this week disclosed that Tommy Weinzapfel is still in bed but recovering rapidly from injuries received in a bicycle tumble Sunday, Oct. 23. He had been riding around the edge of a building, about 15 feet off the ground, and came down with the bike on top of him.

Homes Must Be Wired Before Lines Are Built To Them, REA Demands

Thought Necessary as Last Assurance That Member Will Use Current

As the first few miles of proposed electrification line are being staked, J. W. Hess, manager of the local co-op, is preparing to send official wiring instructions to all members who can be reached by the proposed line.

This action, he said, is required by REA headquarters as the last official hold the company has on its prospective consumers. By going to the trouble and expense of wiring his home a person definitely shows his willingness to accept current when it is made available. Without such assurance to indicate that the necessary revenue is forthcoming, the co-op would not be justified in building a line. He also said that the failure of any person to observe this last requirement would result in the elimination of his line from the project.

At the same time Mr. Hess cautioned that no one should begin wiring until he receives the official REA instructions. Not only is there a possibility that some person not on the line would spend his money needlessly, but another, with assurance that he will be served, might fail to comply with the rigid REA wiring specifications. Once a person has received official notice he is urged to arrange for wiring at the earliest possible date so as not to delay the contractor in line construction.

To date no official word has been received from Washington approving J. E. Morgan and Son as contractor. Considering, however, his record on other projects and the fact he was accepted by consulting engineers, Wm. Morrison and the Washington representative, A. C. Hagan, it is taken for granted that all is in order. After the contractor is advised by REA headquarters he is permitted a reasonable time to order materials and move his equipment to Muenster. Local officials are still confident that construction will begin between November 15 and 20.

In the meantime the surveying crew under the direction of J. H. Flood continues to stake out an average of about 5 miles a day. They started last Thursday at the intersection of highway 82 and the crossroad about 4 miles east of Muenster and, until Tuesday night, had finished about 20 miles to the north and west of town. Those working on the crew are resident engineer J. H. Flood, Weldon Blanton of Gainesville, Tony Wimmer, Emmet Fette, and Lawrence Rogberg.

Preliminary plans have also been made for the construction of a sub station at the crossroad where staking began.

The most important detail, that concerning the co-op's funds, has also been taken care of. Mr. Hess advises that the full $178,000 loaned by REA has been deposited for the co-op at Washington and local officers are at liberty to draw on it at any time.

A contract to supply meters and meter bases for the project will be let in a special meeting of the co-op officers Friday night.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO SING AT O'DANIEL'S INAUGURATION JAN. 17

Thousands of school children will be on hand to sing "Beautiful Texas" on January 17 when W. Lee O'Daniel is inaugurated as governor of Texas. Plans for the event resulted from an invitation given by O'Daniel and heartily endorsed by State Superintendent L. A. Woods.

Every school of the state has the privilege of sending children to Austin on that day. It is understood, however, that individual pupils or their schools will take care of their own transportation and expenses.

Teachers of Cooke County meeting in Gainesville last Saturday voted to participate in the movement and hold a special rehearsal as a County wide sing-song in Gainesville some time in December.

Mr. Welsh stated that a list of songs has been ordered for the Muenster school. A series of practice sessions will begin as soon as they arrive.

PAYING THE FIDDLER

A queer trait of human nature is its anxiety to believe almost anything that pleases its fancy. Schemes to get rich quick, quack treatments to remove physical ailments or to preserve youthful charms, easy ways to become powerful and influential, all of them can find a sympathetic ear at any time. Too many people hearing fantastic ideas cloud their minds so thoroughly with impractical hopes that the light of sound reason has no chance to penetrate.

This is the predicament of several thousand people who are now clamoring for old age pensions. "Thirty dollars every Thursday" has become the chorus of California visionaries. Many in our state are making great plans for the easy money Biscuit Pappy O'Daniel is supposed to pull out of the hat. The rest of us are wondering—and so is he—how he will get the money in the hat. Other states are facing the same predicament.

To explain in detail that the idea just will not work out is not our purpose here. Sound economists have already written volumes on the subject. We will contend ourselves with the statement that the California pension would cost every normal wage earner about one-third of his salary. Let him who is interested check on the number of people over 50 and on the number of working people under 50, then try to solve this ridiculous riddle.

The pension plan is only one of the several economic nightmares now leading to the most chaotic mess our nation has yet experienced. Grants of billions, along with graft and inefficiency, have plunged us so hopelessly in debt that the prospect of recovery becomes ever more remote. Our credit has been most severely strained, some day it will reach a breaking point. Then, when the dancing is over, who's going to pay the fiddler?

Of course there are some administration supporters, some who are growing fat on this borrowed prosperity, that would label these sentiments as pure treason. Nevertheless, what's the answer?

Raising money to pay our debts will require tremendous taxes. If normal people cannot pay them what will happen? Will the debts be repudiated, or will private property be confiscated? We shudder to think of either, but one of them seems to be inevitable.

TRY CURES, NOT "SHOTS"

A plea for a change in our social and economic policies is no longer "a voice in the wilderness." Thinkers all over the nation are agreed that we are headed for a very unpleasant day of reckoning unless common sense makes an eleventh hour stand against the ever growing forces of extravagance, waste, and destruction. Experience has shown repeatedly that the kind of principles we now embrace as a nation inevitably bring defeat to private enterprise. If given a free hand they will bankrupt our country as well.

All this muddle brings to us the picture of a very sick man. He is Uncle Sam. Hovering over him is the ever solicitous family doctor, who admits that his condition is most critical but at the same time assures a group of friends that "while there is life there is hope." It seems that a lot of new fangled cures have aggravated rather than relieved his malady. As a last resort he will try a few of the old remedies that have been used with success down through the ages. With a confident smile he tells the patient that a hard fight lies ahead but the prescription, if followed faithfully will bring his recovery.

What is the prescription? The same that Uncle Sam followed from his birth in 1776 until he entrusted his health to the care of quacks only a few years ago. Now the old, trusted family doctor is back, prescribing honesty, courage, industry, ambition, personal pride, and the other traits that make up real manhood.

The person who does not have confidence in these ingredients is invited to consider the symptoms in our patient's illness. Racketeers, dishonest politicians, greedy industrialists and men in dozens of other walks of life have been preying on the general public with plain thievery. Softies, afraid of every little difficulty, ask the Federal government to shoulder their responsibilities. Loafers are thinking not of what service they render but how they can get the most pay for the least effort. Thousands are not ashamed to subsist on public relief even when they find an opportunity to become self supporting.

Regardless of what the wise guys say, the prescriptions used to date were not remedies for the patient's real trouble. They were just shots in the arm to relieve the pain.

We've reached the point now where we can't get along without a little of the stimulant. But why doesn't our nation start prescribing a little real remedy and ease up a little on this wasteful sedative?

—BY HELPING OURSELVES

While we of this community have ample reason to carry our share of the national worry, we will do well to remember that the nation is made up of individuals, and that its progress cannot be any greater than the combined progress of its many communities. We can help our country by helping ourselves.

The present outlook here is really most encouraging. Within a few months several hundred rural families will enjoy the pleasures and conveniences of electrical service. Residents of our city have bright prospects of improving their comfort and health standards with a modern sewer. Improvements to our road system are pointing the way to better business and greater convenience. Possibilities of industrial development hold a bright promise for the future of young men and women. Other worth while programs are the improvement of our school system, a more general practice of soil conservation, city and rural beautification, and other projects without end.

For us it is a matter of personal pride as well as enhanced welfare to carry on the good work that was begun here a half century ago. Pioneers did a splendid piece of work in starting this community, we can follow their good example only by developing it. Their achievement was to break the prairie and convert it to more productive soil. Our achievement, which is only partially completed, is to preserve the productivity of that soil and to provide the best possible living for sons and daughters of the pioneers. They worked hard to reach their mark of progress, we will have to work as hard to advance their mark.

We measure our ancestors' success by the value of their services to the community. Future generations will measure our worth according to the same pattern.

War creates standards of honor that are as false as those which supported dueling many years ago.—William J. Bryan.

The question facing us is no longer one of establishing democratic institutions but of preserving them.—Charles E. Hughes.

BRINGING UP THE REAR

A study recently completed by economists of the Southern Division of the AAA shows that the percentage of farm families having automobiles and enjoying modern improvements in their homes, such as telephones, electric lights, and bathrooms with running water, are far below the percentage for all other states or the United States as a whole.

The 10 states included in the study are Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas.

The figures reveal that of the 2,740,000 rural farm families in the group, 39 percent had automobiles, while 79 per cent of the farm families in all other states and 62 per cent of the United States as a whole had automobiles.

Only 11 per cent of the farm homes in the 10 states studied had telephones, while 47 per cent of the farm homes in all other states had these instruments.

Only 3 per cent of the homes had electricity, while 18 per cent of rural homes in all other states had this convenience.

Five per cent of southern farm families had water systems and only 3 percent had bathrooms with running water as compared with 22 and 12 percent in all other states.—Extension Service Farm News.

HONK! HONK!

It is nearly four years since Benito Mussolini, annoyed by the blaring of automobile horns on the streets of Rome, ordered silence. He is said not to have intended complete abolition of honking, but his command was taken literally and put into effect immediately.

"The silent circulation of automobiles," they call it, and it seems to be just that. According to an article in Public Safety, an organ of the National Safety Council, the effort has succeeded. The writer says that during two weeks in Rome he never heard a single honk. The cars seem to have horns as usual, but the drivers control themselves or turn off the current.

What is the result? The peace in Rome is wonderful. Moreover, there is general acceptance of the principle, though not so strictly applied, in other Italian cities.

No less wonderful is the effect on traffic accidents. Instead of more collisions and fatalities, there is a big decrease. Apparently quietness also means safety. Nearly all the tooting that Americans are accustomed to may be not only unnecessary, but worse than no tooting at all.

In cities and towns of the United States much of the noise nuisance does not come from the use of auto horns as warning signals, but from incessant honking to attract attention. Honk! Honk! (Here we are.) Honk! Honk! Honk! (Come on out.) Honk! Honk! Honk! Honk! (Hurry up.) Then intermittent repetition until somebody comes to the door. There are many other circumstances under which automobile horns are put, other uses than that for which they originally were intended. All add to the din which makes urban life a constant strain on ear drums.—Texarkana Gazette.

Confetti

They say that no matter how cheery a fellow gets something will happen sooner or later to take the starch out of his collar. We agree. After laboring on this sheet for almost two years we were beginning to think that our establishment was a fairly nice business and a credit to the town—until we happened to find a person (one of our subscribers, too) who did not know that Muenster has a printing shop. "Oh, I thought you had it printed in some other town."

That might go down as our most embarrassing moment of recent weeks, but it is no better than the experience of our town "heavy" at a football game last week. Having a heart that matches his bulk, he decided that his neighbors would be much less crowded if he bought two tickets instead of one. His embarrassment was to find that the two seats were not together, they were on both sides of the aisle.

As a contestant for the title of "world's unluckiest man" we nominate the guy in Fort Worth who stepped outside to smoke a cigarette and missed $1500 at a theatre drawing. He had a little time to spare while the management was preparing things, but not as much as he used talking to a friend who just happened along. He did not know that his name was called until it was too late for him to claim his money. "The most expensive cigarette he ever smoked," he said.

You and I thought a long time ago that this theatre bank night scheme had been banned as lottery. This little episode and more like it show that there are devious ways of getting around the law. Show houses are not permitted to give away money, but they can draw numbers to decide who is lucky enough to get a good sized wad for a handkerchief or some other object of insignificant value. Of course that puts the transaction on a sound business basis.

In theatre bank nights we cannot see such great harm in getting around the law, however it serves as just another example to show that people can do almost anything and get away with it so long as they do not violate the letter of the law. It stands to reason that if a 10 cent article is "sold" for $25.00 the business deal amounts to a dime whereas the lottery deal amounts to $24.90. It also stands to reason that many a "legitimate" business deal is plain stealing. When a $25 horse is misrepresented in order to sell for $50, the deal is half business and half stealing. Honest men agree in that viewpoint but the world has an over abundance of self termed wise guys who believe that the trusting and less alert were made to be shorn, not to be respected and protected. We like to imagine how much nicer our existence would be if all law books were scrapped and the two slabs of the decalogue with a just tribunal made up every court. It would be even more pleasant if every man tried to remember the commandments and permitted his conscience to act as his private judge.

"A person pays for every thing he does." Only brief reflection is necessary to see the truth in that remark. Here and there we find what appear to be exceptions, but a moment of infallibility would probably reveal that they too are paying. Yes, it would be a much finer world if we wise ones would follow a higher standard than our own.

Probably you and I will never have to worry about it—but supposing we wished to send a bundle of paper money by insured parcel post, we'd find that the insurance fee certainly does not suit us, also that we couldn't do anything about it. A solution to this problem was offered by an errand boy in a large bank that wanted to send worn bills back to the treasury for exchange. He suggested cutting the bills in two and sending in separate packages. As worthless scraps of paper neither package demanded a high fee. When they reach their destination numbers can still be compared and checked on treasury records.

If skunks are as plentiful this winter as they are now a lot of boys will be making a lot of extra money at trapping. Hardly an evening passes but a person finds one or more on the road. Driving seems to be just the passage of one whiff to another. Are there so many of them or do we happen to see more this year? That is the question.

Dry weather has been mentioned as the reason that we see more of them. Without water to drink in creeks and branches the polecats are forced to crash the sanctum of civilization to quench their thirst.

Not only that, they have taken to living in civilized areas. Many a dead chicken bears the skunk's trade mark. Many a person has seen the same kitty in the same place more than once. We know of one man who's deciding on a name for his boarder, says he will probably use the one his wife gave it the other evening when she pulled it out of an egg nest. She thought she was going after a cat but froze stiff when she found out what she had. No ill effects though. The skunk was probably too much amused to take advantage of her.

Discovered a new pet aversion the other day. A big strong man admitted he doesn't have what it takes to bite into a peach if it still has the fuzz. That feeling on his lips does things to him just like pulling a tobacco sack shut with my teeth does things to me, or scratching on a blackboard does things to you or one of your friends. Funny how certain noises, or feelings or sights simply go against our grain. Think it over and you'll probably be able to name a list of pet aversions—with tickling under the feet very likely to be one of the leaders. If you were to name things that suit you just right, betcha you would include "somebody scratching my back."

YOUNG CROWD ENJOYS HALLOWEEN PARTIES

Hallowe'en parties were the center of interest for members of the school-age crowd during the week-end. On Friday evening little Misses Johnnie Anne Seyler, Juanita Weinzapfel and Alma Marie Luke were hostesses for the 7th grade Parochial girls when they entertained with a masquerade affair at the Ben Seyler home.

Hallowe'en decorations were featured in the party room and the guests enjoyed Hallowe'en games and contests. Refreshments carried out a color scheme of black and orange, and noise-makers were given as favors.

On Thursday afternoon a Hallowe'en party for pupils of Sacred Heart High School was headlined with the initiation of the freshmen by the seniors. This was followed by the serving of refreshments to the pupils and their teachers, Sisters Angelina, Theresina and Amora. The affair took place in the parish hall.

Sunday evening the Barney Wilde home was the scene for a masquerade party for the 8th and 9th grades of the Public School, with Miss Dorothy Pette and Miss Mary Barker as special guests. Following a series of games appropriate for the occasion the group enjoyed refreshments around a bon fire in the yard.

A treasure hunt was given on Saturday evening for the pupils of grades, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of the Public School, with their teacher, Miss

They chartered a plane at Billings, Mont., and flew to the province of Alberta. Dr. Brown said the expedition would last about six weeks.

The party began at the school and followed clues that took them over a long route from the cemetery to the depot and back to the school where the "treasure," noise-makers for the group, was found. Later refreshments of sandwiches, lemonade and cake were served.

LORA LEE WILDE HAS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Honoring Lora Lee Wilde on the occasion of her 10th birthday, her mother, Mrs. J. B. Wilde, entertained with a delightful party at the Wilde home Sunday afternoon.

Informality was the keynote of the affair, the guests enjoying out-door games and a delicious lunch served "ho-bo" style from paper bags in the back yard.

Twenty-nine little girls, each of whom remembered the honoree with a gift, enjoyed the afternoon.

The Lord Helps Those---

"The Lord Helps Those . . ." by Bertram B. Fowler is a story of changes wrought by adult education among the farmers, fishermen and miners of Nova Scotia. This book tells how even the most impoverished were fired with a desire to help themselves by "Father Jimmy" Tompkins and his little band of extension workers from St. Francis Xavier University who believed in "the ability of the common people to remake their surroundings."

Fishermen along the bleak coast are described as "share-croppers of the sea." They were in debt to the merchants for their boats and nets and had no choice but to sell their catch to these same merchants at whatever price was offered. Farmers were losing their homes because of high interest rates, low prices paid for farm produce and exorbitant prices charged them for supplies. Illiteracy was common and increasing and a sullen hopelessness was settling over the country.

Father Jimmy set about to raise these people out of their economic and spiritual bankruptcy. He began with small study groups, in the homes, along the fishing wharves and wherever he could get a few people together, he planted the idea of self help. "Ideas have hands and feet. They'll go to work for themselves," he said. He led them to see some of the reasons for their plight.

RECORD RUN

CARTHAGE, ILL.—Small Charles Hopson, Metropolis, Illinois, on small Carthage College grid team chalked up what is believed to be the longest run made so far this season on the nation's football fields. The 128 pound sophomore halfback ran 103 yards for a touchdown starting from behind his own goal line.

He challenged them to start from where they were to do something to correct the situation.

The farmers and fishermen quickly recognized credit as the tool used to enslave them and began saving very small amounts which they pooled in credit unions, or small co-operative banks. Little by little they began to pull themselves free from their exploiters. The fishermen ventured a direct shipment of lobsters to market and could hardly believe their eyes when they received 20 cents per pound for lobsters which they had been selling for 5c per pound. With their own hands the fishermen cut logs and quarried rock to build their first cooperative fish canning plant.

Eight years after the launching of this program of adult education, there are in eastern Nova Scotia 22 cooperative fish and lobster canning plants, 142 credit unions and 26 co-operative stores. Cooperative saw mills have reduced the price of lumber from $37 to $7 per thousand, making possible new homes and boats. Farmers are improving the quality of their produce and marketing it cooperatively. Encouraged by their success at helping themselves the study groups go on, attacking one problem after another.—Extension Service Farm News.

Voters! Protect Your Interest

All men and women in Cooke County, both old and young, who are qualified to vote, ought to be interested in sending an able and highly qualified man to represent them in the State Legislature. To do otherwise, is a waste of time and a waste of money. An unqualified man can do the people no good at all.

Let us all get to work and send a man to the Legislature who can and will do the people some real good—a man whom the people of the county will be proud to have represent them at Austin.

We have such a man in Cooke County—a man of ability and experience—a man that can and will work for the people—and that man is W. S. MOORE.

On Tuesday, Nov. 8, you should go to the polls and elect him to the Legislature. You can do that simply by drawing a pencil line through the name of JIM PACE, whose name appears on the ballot as a candidate for Representative in the Legislature, in the left hand column of the ballot, and then WRITE IN the name of W. S. MOORE with a pencil, under the words, "State Representative," on the extreme right hand column of the official ballot.

You should do this as a matter of duty to the county, to yourself and to the State.

W. S. MOORE is in no sense a candidate. It is simply looking after the county's best interests to elect him. This movement to elect W. S. Moore to the Legislature is just an effort by the people of Cooke County to do something for themselves, that they ought to do. The matter of W. S. Moore's interest has nothing to do with it. This is but the act of an awakened public to its own welfare.

Let's send a Representative to Austin that Cooke County will be proud to send there. Read the instructions above, once more. Mark out Jim Pace's name in the left hand column, write in the name of W. S. MOORE in the right hand column.
