BEHIND THE SCENES in AMERICAN BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 17—BUSINESS—"Peace, it's wonderful." That is quite evidently America's reaction to the calmer international atmosphere and to prove it, business and industry are chalking up some highly encouraging statistics.

WASHINGTON.—With the general elections only three weeks away political interest now centers on the outcome of the contests for 435 House seats and 33 senatorships.

ON THE FARM FRONT—Many dairy farms lacking satisfactory refrigeration have been confronted with the perplexing problem of how to cool milk in preparation for shipping.

SALES TRENDS—Recent reports of merchandising activity in department stores indicate the following: Jewelry—increasing demand for heavy costume jewelry; women's full-fashioned hosiery—sales featured by popularity of subtle beige shades keyed to blend with colorful accessories; furniture—sales of mirror paneling for interior decorations and full length mirrors for doors are moving up rapidly; lamps—steady gains in low and medium priced floor lamps; toys—business about 25 per cent above year ago.

THINGS TO WATCH FOR—Less scribbling on restaurant tablecloths, because of new paper napkins with tik-tak-toe and word puzzles already printed on them.

HEADLINES IN BUSINESS—Half of America's lawyers earn less than $2,000, Bar Association estimates—100,000th ship passes through Panama Canal since it was opened in 1914—Container Corporation of America shows profit in third quarter against loss in previous three months—Home building boom under way, says FHA, predicting 350,000 new homes this year against 50,000 four years ago—Benefiting by quickened building activity, Libby-Owens Ford Glass Company earned $850,586 in third quarter compared with loss in first half, John D. Biggers, president, reports—His company also gave jobs to 1,700 men during July, August and September—Price reduced on steel used in making autos followed by price cuts on several popular makes of cars.

EXTENSION SERVICE TELLS CHEAPEST WAY TO FATTEN TURKEYS

COLLEGE STATION. — The cheapest way to fatten mature turkeys is to allow them to range on green pasture and to feed them a scratch grain mixture made up of equal parts of corn, barley, wheat, and oats, according to George P. McCarthy, poultryman of the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service.

Tests made by the United States Department of Agriculture, and proven under field conditions by Texas poultry demonstrators show this combination of pasture and mixture of whole grain will add weight and finish in plenty of time for the Thanksgiving market, provided the birds are mature and in good condition in late September.

Either white or yellow corn may be used in the grain mixture. Excess yellow corn gives a yellow tinge to the turkey skin. While the skin will remain whiter when white corn is fed, birds on white corn must have plenty of green pasture to supply the vitamin A otherwise received from yellow corn.

LIGHTNING HAS ONLY 1 CHANCE IN 300,000 TO STRIKE A PERSON

WASHINGTON.—It's a 300,000-to-1 shot that you won't be killed by lightning but don't count on these long odds to protect you under all circumstances.

Reports to the census bureau indicate that from 400 to 500 people are killed every year by lightning. Figuring the ratio of injury to deaths in regions where the latter is known, the number of persons injured annually is estimated to be about 1,300.

It isn't necessary to dive under a bed or scramble for a closet during a thunderstorm but it is a good idea to use sensible precautions, say the engineers. Here are some safety tips from the lightning experts:

Do not go out-of-doors or remain out, during a thunderstorm unless it is necessary. This is particularly advisable in rural sections where a person in the open spaces presents "ground connection" for lightning.

If staying out-of-doors is unavoidable, keep away from small sheds and shelters in exposed locations; isolated trees, wire fences, hilltops and open spaces. Seek a cave, a depression in the ground, a ravine or a dense wood.

Don't stay on a bathing beach or in the water if there is threat of a thunderstorm—a wet body is likely to be a lightning "magnet." If a bathhouse shelter is not available, lie flat in a depression in the ground some distance from the water.

If inside a building, stay where it is dry, preferably away from fireplaces, stoves or other metallic objects. Don't get too close to a window screen.

Automobiles and trains are excellent shelters from lightning, their steel bodies apparently serving as metallic shields. Airplanes are rated quite safe for the same reason.

But don't let anybody tell you lightning never strikes twice in the same place. It hits natural "targets" like the Washington monument and the Empire State building dozens of times in season, and it strikes the same tall trees and church steeples with great frequency.

Cases of injury from lightning are rare in large buildings and in dwelling houses of modern construction. They are more frequent in small, unprotected buildings of the older type.

BUNNY PROBLEMS

Six small rabbits almost ruined Australia.

A man in the province of New South Wales thought it would be a good idea to start a colony of bunnies.

So, about 1850, he turned loose three pair of common English variety.

Taking their cue from the multiplication table, these rabbits increased and spread so fast that within 10 years they had become a national pest and a menace to the agriculture of the continent.

Seven rabbits eat about as much as one sheep, and the livestock-supporting capacity of Australia was reduced by one-fifth.

Millions of bunnies threatened to drive farmers and ranchers out of business.

Enormous sums were spent in efforts to exterminate the pest.

Weasels and mongooses (not mongoes) introduced for that purpose failed to distinguish between rabbits and chickens.

Epidemic diseases, deliberately spread among the rabbits, proved equally ineffectual.

The government then offered bounties for rabbits. Men trapped rabbits, shot rabbits and poisoned rabbits, but the rodents continued to multiply and to eat grass, destroy crops and bark trees.

Woven wire fences at first were ineffective, because the rabbits soon learned to dig under or climb over them. Higher rabbitproof fences, three feet high and sunk well in the ground, were then built around individual farms and gardens as well as whole districts.

One such rabbit fence stretched for a thousand miles.

New Zealand had a similar experience. English bunnies got a foothold on these islands about 1875 and became such a pest that farmers seriously considered abandoning whole districts.

Finally the Australians and New Zealanders hit upon a bright idea. They discovered how to convert the pest into cash and began to export millions of dollars' worth of frozen rabbit meat for food and rabbit skins for clothing and felt hats.

A few rabbits placed on a tiny island in the Pacific multiplied so fast that they ate up all the vegetation and then starved to death.—Geo. W. Stimpson.

CONTOUR FARMING PERMITS MORE WORK WITH LESS EXPENSE

COLLEGE STATION. — Contour cultivation results in the use of less fuel and allows more work to be done.

"We hear a lot about terracing and contour farming saving the soil and holding the rain where it falls, and about better yields as a result," C. Hohn, specialist in soil and water conservation of the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service has commented. "If we had ever stopped and thought, and used a little common sense, we would have figured out long ago what some tests in Kansas proved, that contour cultivation also saves time and power.

"We know it is easier to walk on the level than up and down hill. It stands to reason that a team can pull a plow easier on the level, or that a tractor will do more work and use less fuel under level conditions. I imagine lots of farmers in Texas could have told us that."

The experiments quoted by Hohn were conducted by the Kansas State College, and revealed that when wheat stubble land with an 8 percent slope was plowed on the contour, 1.62 acres were turned in an hour as compared with 1.44 when the plowing was done up and down the slope. The actual fuel consumed was 11.6 pounds per acre when plowing up and down the hill and only 10.6 pounds per acre when the work was done on the contour.

Contour listing on a 6.5 percent slope resulted in covering 3.53 acres an hour as compared with 3.04 acres up and down the slope. Similar results were obtained with various implements and different degrees of slope.

"These tests showed that a man can farm on the contour and do about 15 per cent more work with about 9 per cent less fuel," Hohn pointed out. "It looks like it would pay us to work on the contour just from that angle, let alone the advantages of holding our rainfall and our soil."

THAT STILL, SMALL VOICE

When wise-cracking columnists, who earn their daily bread by merely amusing their readers, suddenly see the need of turning serious and pegging in a remark in the interest of morality, we may feel assured that the remark is most certainly a timely one.

Conscience! At times a person is inclined to wonder whether it hasn't completely lost its voice. Glancing at international affairs, our own state and federal procedure, at common business practice, we see on all sides evidence of a new standard based on selfishness and evasion of obligations.

In all walks of life one sees evidence that the still, small voice is being stifled. With such conditions prevailing, is it surprising that war clouds are gathering over Europe, that American social and economic conditions are becoming less stable, that people will brazenly loaf and demand the government to support them, that vicious "isms" built on false promises can receive a sympathetic ear.

Conscience is the same thing morally that culture is socially. It calls for an observance of the golden rule. It does not permit selfish advancement at the cost of another's rights.

The world's outstanding thinkers in every age have begged people to bring greater happiness to themselves and others by heeding the voice of conscience.

For us as individuals it is well to ponder that world conscience or national conscience depends upon each person's willingness to listen to that still, small voice.

AND NOW—BETTER ROADS

Where are the pessimists who say that the handwriting is on the wall for small community centers such as Muenster? We invite them to review with us just a few steps in community progress during the past few years, then to decide whether the possibility of building a more pleasant and more profitable Muenster isn't well within our grasp.

True, it will demand initiative and energy; but what worth while achievement, whether public or private, did not require them? Pioneers who pushed the frontier back into the Pacific were not a group of softies taking it easy.

to reach their goal. Muenster can do likewise.

Already we can look back at a splendid record of achievement. What was once a lonesome spot on the prairie is now referred to as one of the most prosperous small towns in the state.

Another goal is a system of good roads providing farmers of this and surrounding communities with a convenience that will invite them to consider Muenster rather than other towns as their trading center.

To the north wonderful possibilities depend upon plans that have not been thoroughly brought to light. A new direct trail between here and Bulcher can open that territory for Muenster.

PRINTING PAPER IS NO PICNIC

If we print jokes, people say we are silly. If we don't they say we are too serious. If we clip things from other papers, we are too lazy to write them ourselves.

few hoarders and speculators. We would have dizzy inflation like that of postwar Germany, in which a single meal or a cheap hat would cost thousands of dollars.

A LOP-SIDED COMPETITION

Just how far will government competition to business extend? There's a serious question to puzzle your mind. It appears that government competition has the power industry in this state on the run, with solicitors out trying to line up this town and that.

VISITING PRIESTS GUESTS IN ENDRES AND BAYER HOMES

Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. D. Fisch of Le Mars, Iowa, and Rev. M. F. Schemel of Alton, Iowa, visited here from Sunday evening to Tuesday noon.

Msgr. Fisch is a cousin of J. P. Fisch of this city and officiated at the wedding rites of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Endres in 1910. Since that time they had seen each other only once, five years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Endres entertained with a dinner in his honor at noon Monday. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Fisch, Mrs. Mary Lehnertz and John Lehnertz.

Father Schemel is a friend of many years to John Bayer and family having been the parish priest in Mr. Bayer's hometown of Willeytown, Iowa, before the Bayers moved to Muenster. Members of the family entertained with dinners in his honor.

The priests were enroute to their homes after attending the Eucharistic Congress in New Orleans. This is their first visit to Texas and they expressed their disappointment at finding no longhorn cattle and rattlesnakes.
