Usually we average folks are not privileged to have a clear cut opinion of the nation's cabinet officers, but somehow we've had the notion for a long time that Alexander Haig is a crusty character who had a feeling he was Mister Big of the State Department. So it was not surprising last week to hear he had encounters with President Reagan who took him up on a threat to quit. All of which leads to the opinion that he did our country a favor in resigning.

Optimistic Americans can see in this event the possibility of changes for the better. This could be the occasion for our president to rebel against the liberalism that has haunted his administration for more than 18 months and put more emphasis on principles for which the nation cast its landslide vote in 1980.

Regan the candidate was a staunch conservative and a dedicated champion of the traditional American Way. Along with a sound economy emphasizing less tax and less government spending, he proposed caution in dealings with Russia, also a strong defense and a firm alliance with the country's allies. He favored school prayer, toughness on criminals, a belief in conducting government according to the laws of God.

Promptly after Reagan was nominated the country had its first occasion to be disappointed in him. He chose his running mate from the liberal side of the party, apparently giving in to the theory that a middle of the road policy would attract more votes. He chose politics over principle and disappointed millions.

In spite of that, not because of it, he was elected, and again the party liberals prevailed in the selection of administration personnel. The firmly conservative government that people voted for and expected became a watered down compromise with liberalism.

Alex Haig was an example. Whereas Reagan originally assured Taiwan that US would stand firm in its support, we soon learned that the little island republic was betrayed in our shameful decision to give in to Red China's demands. The administration, after vowing to get rid of the Departments of Energy and Education, was double crossed by secretaries who not only continued the agencies but also lavished grants and appropriations on leftist elements which opposed the president.

It has been said that changing from one administration to another is very difficult, often frustrating. No matter what policies a president tries to introduce he will find employees doing as they please. A real tragedy is that they are protected by civil service status and can get by with defying new instructions. That in itself has been very difficult, and it was made even more difficult by the presence of department liberals who encourage the old liberal ways.

Reports of the Haig dismissal indicate clashes of personality and views between himself and the president. One has to wonder whether the firing did not actually result from a build-up of friction over a long time, especially as it results from a number of occasions when official policy or personal opinion was frustrated by the secretary.

Learn to Swim program starts Saturday

Muenster's annual Learn to Swim program sponsored by the Red Cross and directed by Serena Wright and Kathy Hartman, will be held during the next two weeks in the local swimming pool.

It is divided into two classes, one being taught the week starting July 5 and the other during the week starting July 12. Instruction will be given at four skill levels: beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates and swimmers.

Registration for both classes will be held at the pool on Saturday, July 3 from 9 to 11 a.m. Students are asked to report in swim suits for skill tests to determine the level of instruction to which they will be assigned.

Minimum age requirement is completion of kindergarten, and each child will be required to have a permission slip signed by a parent or guardian. Also, all are expected to state a preference for the first or second week and for the 9, 10 or 11 o'clock class.

The 9 o'clock class of the second week is reserved for ladies and students of the swimmers level only. Children of other instruction levels will be assigned to the 10 and 11 o'clock classes.

Stenholm comes to Gainesville July 6

Congressman Charles Stenholm, now visiting with constituents of the 17th congressional district, has scheduled a stop in Gainesville on Tuesday, July 6. He will be at the Chamber of Commerce office at 2:15 p.m. Anyone who would like to "Chat with Charlie" is personally urged to attend.

"I take my title 'representative' very seriously and I pledge all my abilities toward filling this role," Stenholm said. "I ask your help in serving our area."

He will give an update report on events in Washington and cover all subjects mentioned by those in attendance.

The days got hotter, and business at the Muenster City Pool got better as the water became more inviting, promising welcome relief from summertime heat.

Young Children's Learning Center introduced to Muenster

By Mrs. August Felderhoff

We are pleased to announce the expected fall opening of the Young Children's Learning Center of Muenster. The program will be available for either a half-day or an extended day session for children ages 3, 4 and 5. The facility is designed as a learning environment which allows for a freedom of movement and choice of materials available.

The materials are separated into 3 definite areas in the primary class. The Practical Life area is structured to help the child satisfy his need for meaningful activity. The exercises are interesting and exciting to the child of 3 and 4 years of age. Carrying, sorting, pouring, scrubbing, polishing, paring; all allow the child to imitate adult activities while perfecting his coordination, lengthening concentration, paying attention to details and forming good work habits doing interesting tasks. Each of the tasks is very important since it helps the child become an independent worker, thus building self-esteem through success in work and self-discipline through choice of activity.

A second important area is called the Sensorial area. Exercises are presented to sharpen the use of all senses and to use the power of observation in developing perception for understanding the many impressions received through the senses. The sensorial exercises are the basis and foundation for development of fine motor skills. Each of the sensorial materials isolates one defining quality; color, weight, shape, texture, size, sound, smell, etc. The child of this age needs realistic sensory impressions but he needs to internalize his perceptions of the real world.

The third area encompasses all cognitive development. It is with the carefully selected exercises in mathematics, language, geography, reading, writing, history, biology, and science that the child becomes attuned to the culture in which he lives.

In mathematics, the child learns basic concepts by using concrete materials which he manipulates to show quantity as well as addition and subtraction.

Basic phonics is used in reading activities. The child learns the sound first, then sounds out words then uses the word sounds for reading. A writing - to reading approach is used and many exercises used from 3 to 4 years of age have prepared the hand and eye-hand co-ordination for writing.

Geography puzzle maps, botany puzzles, calendars, and bells give introduction into the other areas of geography, history, music, and biology.

Art is fostered through the use of many media such as clay, paint, drawing, etc.

The child has a strong interest in music and movement, another part of Man's heritage. Songs and finger plays, balancing on the line, and moving to music end the day for many classes.

One of the most important activities in the primary class is the art of listening; a quality worth cultivating for use throughout life. Many children in today's noisy environment have formed the habit of turning off their hearing. Listening attentively is vital preparation for all learning in general. Many games are used to help children focus on listening and hearing; to assist them in becoming intensely conscious of the quality of silence.

The most important of all lessons learned in the primary class has to do with respect; respect for others, their work, their bodies, and their personal goods. If a child can become aware and discipline himself to this ground rule, he should have no difficulty growing to a happy, healthy student in the elementary years.

Inquiries may be made to the director - Mrs. August Felderhoff, 759-4479.

DPS estimates 47 traffic deaths during July 4 weekend

The Department of Public Safety today estimated that as many as 47 persons could die in traffic accidents during this July 4th weekend unless drivers are exceptionally careful.

Colonel Jim Adams, DPS director, said the risk of traffic accidents will increase during the 78-hour holiday period as more drivers take to the streets and highways for the holiday.

"As in many weekend traffic accidents, alcohol, excessive speed, and failure to use seat belts are the major contributing factors in the traffic deaths," he said.

DPS statistics show that 63 persons were killed during the last 4th of July holiday and 25 of those fatalities resulted from accidents in which driving while intoxicated was a factor.

"We know that drinking may have been involved in more of the traffic deaths, but since state law does not require blood alcohol samples from traffic victims, we are uncertain how many more of the deaths may have involved drivers impaired by alcohol," Adams noted. "Additionally, 59 persons were seriously injured during the last holiday in traffic accidents."

The DPS director said additional troopers would be assigned to areas where heavy volumes of traffic are expected.

"Our troopers are working during this holiday period to assist travelers and to watch closely for drivers who may have had too much to drink or who insist upon exceeding the speed limits," he said.

The DPS says many municipal police and county sheriffs' officers will also work local traffic safety programs during the holiday period.

The DPS Operation Motorcade counting period begins at 6 p.m. Friday, July 2nd and continues through midnight Monday, July 5th. The Department will tabulate city and highway traffic fatalities and release totals three times daily at 10 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. The first report will be made at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 3.

Eighty-Two Liquor ownership changes July 1

A change of business ownership and management became effective Thursday as John and Olivia Wimmer sold 82 Liquor to Ray and Kaye Wimmer, who are now in the process of moving back to their home town from Keller.

The store's name will remain the same. The Wimmers left Muenster shortly after their marriage in 1970. Since then he has been associated with Kraft Foods for six years and Nabisco Foods for five years.

Both are Muenster natives, he a son of the Lawrence Wimmers, she a daughter of the Gene Klements, and both are graduates of Sacred Heart High, he in 1965 and she in 1969. He graduated from NTSU in 1970, she graduated from Grayson County Nursing School in 1971. They lived in Sherman for one year after marriage and after that in Dallas and Keller.

The Wimmers have two daughters, Jenny, 10 and Kelly, 8.

John Wimmer has been associated with the store for 23 years. He was an employee from '59 to '70, and the owner-operator since then.

Titus 3: 1-5

Remind your people to submit to rulers and authorities, to obey them, and to be ready to do good in every way. Tell them not to speak evil of anyone, but to be peaceful and friendly, and always to show a gentle attitude toward everyone. For we ourselves were once foolish, disobedient, and wrong. We were slaves to passions and pleasures of all kinds. We spent our lives in malice and envy; others hated us and we hated them. But when the kindness and love of God our Savior was revealed, he saved us. It was not because of any good deeds that we ourselves had done, but because of his own mercy that he saved us, through the Holy Spirit, who gives us new birth and new life by washing us.

Thanks, Donors

Still wet!!

More rain, less grain. As persistent showers keep coming the accessible wheat patches get fewer and farther between, nevertheless scattered loads are still arriving at the elevators after last week's inactivity.

Reports reaching both local elevators indicate farmers are mudding through wherever they can and yields are ranging from 10 to 40, the low yield being more prevalent, and test is deteriorating. Another difficulty is moisture resulting from vegetation juices as weeds go through the thresher. With quality already bad and getting worse from weed moisture, some are ready to quit the balance of the crop.

between Reagan and Haig was the attitude on Russia. The president was outspoken in his opinion of USSR, quoting the red goal of world domination, that Russians cannot be trusted to keep an agreement, and the possibility of serious consequences from the Yamal pipeline deal. Haig, on the other hand seemed to be inclined toward detente. As Haig makes his exit we hope it is the beginning of improvement in policy. We recall Reagan's many common sense campaign ideas followed by disappointments as his aims were entrusted to party liberals, and hope he realizes it is high time to start doing the things a hopeful America still urgently wants from him. This column admits it is an incurable wishful thinker. Perhaps it isn't too much to hope for Reagan to realize that the landslide majority which elected him wants him to choose his kind of leaders to help do his job.

SOVIET SLAVE TRADE

By Edwin Feulner

Teeth shatter at the blow of a rifle butt as a prisoner is reminded not to "misbehave." Iron bars separate men from humanity and like a noose the barb-wire madness chokes the last bit of hope. Hollow-eyed refugees with shackled limbs and crippled spirits spend their days as slaves.

Welcome to the Vietnamese gulag, born of Communist "liberation," the ultimate reality of a utopian dream. This is life inside Vietnamese "re-education" camps. For many Vietnamese, life outside isn't much better.

Reports now filtering to the West indicate that Vietnamese workers are being used as slave laborers to build the Soviet Union's 3,000-mile Yamal gas pipeline. Already, according to reports in the European press, thousands of workers have been shipped off to Siberia, where the pipeline begins, and thousands more will follow.

Vietnamese workers also have been shipped elsewhere. Exile Doan Van Toai, author of The Vietnamese Gulag, reports that Hanoi sent 15,000 "invited workers" to Bulgaria last November. The Hanoi regime claims 60 percent of their salaries, using the money to help pay off its debt to the Soviet Union. This, says Toai, kills two birds with one stone: Hanoi saves itself the cost of feeding all these people; and it eliminates the remnants of what it considers reactionary elements.

How should America respond to this "sale of the proletariat"? Until now, the controversy over the Yamal pipeline has centered primarily on the threat of the Soviets using the gas to blackmail the West. France and West Germany have rejected such practical considerations. Now the drama moves to higher ground. No longer are we talking just politics; there are overriding moral issues to consider.

While Western bankers rush to finance the pipeline and European and American companies sell the Soviets the equipment to build it, it seems that those interests are not merely supporting an economic venture (with troublesome strategic problems) but are contributing to the enslavement of thousands of innocent people.

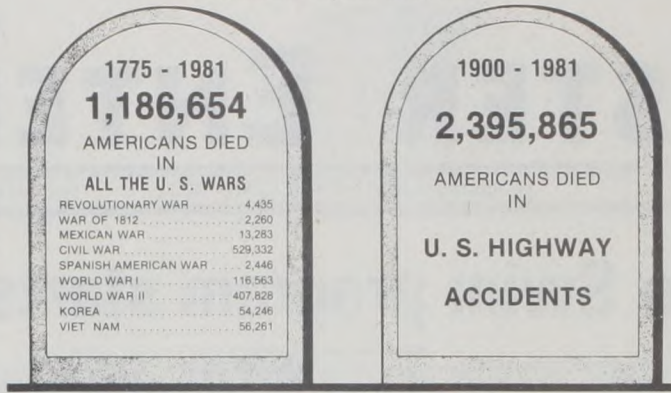

Can the West really speak out strongly about the Soviet bloc's human rights violations when dollars and cents seem to be the ultimate justification for dealing with the Soviets?

Free enterprise, like any other system of economics, can be used either morally or immorally. The business community and those in the political arena need to take a second look at our involvement in the construction of the Yamal pipeline. Aside from our strategic interests, we run the risk of helping to bankroll the Soviet slave trade.

energy answers Letters....

from the Texas Energy Extension Service

I have a sealed window in the living room that lets in moisture along the top when it rains hard and the wind is in the "right" direction. I am thinking about replacing it with an operable window. Would the new window qualify for an energy tax credit? Also, what information does the Texas Energy Extension Service have on energy-efficient windows? M. M. Austin.

In answer to your question on energy tax credits, the only type of window that would qualify under IRS provisions is a storm window. The IRS Publication 903 explains the criteria a storm window must meet in the following way:

(1) A window placed outside or inside an ordinary or prime window, creating an insulating air space.

(2) A window with enhanced resistance to heat flow through the glass area by multi-glazing. Multi-glazing is an arrangement in which two or more sheets of glazing material are fixed in a window frame to create one or more insulating spaces, and

(3) A window which consists of glass or other glazing materials with exceptional heat-absorbing or heat-reflecting properties.

The Energy Extension Service has available free a fact sheet entitled "Reducing Energy Loss Through Windows."

Several years ago, I recall being told that 6 inches of insulation was adequate for attics of homes. Now I hear people are putting in as much as 9 inches. What is the current recommendation for houses in Texas? L. K., Kingsland.

First of all, insulation is no longer measured in inches, but is measured instead by "R" value. This unit is a relative measure of an insulating material's resistance to heat transfer.

Optimum recommendations for new construction in Texas call for R26 to R30 in the attic and R11 to R13 in the walls. It is important to follow these guidelines and not over-insulate. The amount of insulation recommended for an existing home would be somewhat less. An R19 in the ceiling would probably be sufficient. (This is the insulation value achieved with a 6 inch fiberglass batt.)

A fact sheet on amounts and kinds of insulation is available free from the Texas Energy Extension Service.

If you have a question about energy conservation in the home, send it to ENERGY ANSWERS, Texas Energy Extension Service, Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843 or phone (713) 845-8025.

OLD-STYLE POLITICS THREATEN REGULATORY REFORM

This is the story of "old-time politics" 1982 style. It is the story of a small group in the leadership of the majority party in the House of Representatives which has consistently frustrated the will of the majority in both the House and the Senate to bring about meaningful reform of government regulations.

The Omnibus Regulatory Reform Act is now before the House. It passed the Senate late last year 90-0. In fact, some version of regulatory reform has been considered by Congress since 1975. The Senate passed a reform package in 1979. The legislation has had at least 250 co-sponsors each time it has been introduced in the House. Yet, to this day, the House leadership has kept regulatory reform from coming to a vote.

This year's bill could pass the House with between 275 and 300 votes, according to Capitol Hill observers. But it has not come up, and it will not come up at least until the middle of July.

It would be fair for the reader to ask why the roadblocks? The reason the leadership won't bring the reform legislation to a vote is because of a provision in the bill for legislative veto. That is a provision which would give Congress the power to reject any rule or regulation that goes beyond the original intent of the law. (Congress does not write the rules; government bureaucracies do.)

For small business, legislative veto would provide an avenue of appeal which does not now exist. Corporations have lawyers, statisticians, computers and the money to carry their cases directly to the regulators. The small-business person does not. But legislative veto permits anyone who thinks a regulation would cause undue hardship to say so — to elected representatives in Washington.

Members of the National Federation of Independent Business, in surveys dating back to 1974, have called excessive government regulation one of their main economic problems. But powerful members of the House leadership oppose legislative veto, and, thus far have successfully rebuffed attempts to bring regulatory-reform legislation to a vote.

When Congress convenes after the Independence Day recess, there will be but 10 working weeks before adjournment for elections. If the House leadership does not yield to the majority of the members and bring the regulatory-reform bill to a vote by early August, regulatory-reform legislation — and legislative veto — will have died in yet another Congress. And another sorry commentary will have been written about old-style politics.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

With these words, a band of patriots declared the formation of a new nation, the United States of America. Though today the truths stated in the Declaration of Independence are indeed self-evident to us, in 1776, they represented a new and revolutionary basis on which to form a government.

That we, and many people throughout the world, today expect our governments to work on this principle is one of the highest testaments to our nation's greatness. Ours was the first nation to hold the dignity and equality of each individual as its basis for being. We have held to that course. In fact, we understand the true meaning of the concept of equality under the law much better now than then, and we are closer to that goal than our nation's creators ever could have envisioned.

During our history, the United States has been an example to many forming and developing nations. We continue to be a beacon of hope to those who yearn for the freedoms we enjoy as a matter of course.

We did not gain, nor have we kept, these freedoms without effort.

Today, more than anything else, we seek to create a stable and peaceful world so that all nations can determine their own destiny. We work vigilantly to find ways to reduce the threat of war, without capitulating to those who would expand their authoritarian domains.

Within our nation, we remember Benjamin Franklin's answer when he was asked what sort of government the Constitutional Convention had created: "A Republic, if you can keep it."

Wherever I travel, I am always impressed with the quiet, deeply felt patriotism and commitment to our system expressed by my fellow citizens in so many ways. School groups and civic clubs begin their programs with the Pledge of Allegiance to our flag. More and more flags fly in front of private homes on our national holidays. And most important of all, there is increasing interest and participation in our system of government.

Indeed, it seems to me that the best way to practice patriotism is through this participation — by voting, by writing your representatives to express your views on issues which concern you, by working to elect people who represent your views. It is only through the broadest possible participation, the free exchange of ideas, that a truly representative government can emerge.

Traditionally, we all make New Year's resolutions. This year, I would like to suggest that every Texan make a Fourth of July resolution. That resolution would be to keep a close eye on your elected representatives at all levels of government, to let them know your views, and to cast your ballot in each election.

Rupert Hoenig joins Saudi Airline

Rupert Hoenig, one of the many who was left jobless when Braniff quit business, revealed Wednesday that he has just joined Saudi Airline and will leave on July 8 for his next home at Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. His wife and two children, Carol and Bryan will follow later.

Rupert told about this two year contract while visiting with his father, Joe Hoenig. He expects to be assigned to maintenance and inspection supervisor, which is similar to his duties at Braniff. The planes will be Boeing 747, also similar to Braniff's models and L-1011.

Rupert has been a Braniff employee 27 1/2 years. Before that he spent four years with the US Air Force, serving principally in Korea.

'81 street job gets repairs

The city has made an early start in its project of repairing and/or completing last year's paving job. The intention is to apply a layer of crushed rock over asphalt wherever it is exposed. Herbert Yosten is contracted to keep an eye on the streets and spread the gravel wherever it is needed.

The city had two problems on the original job. Cool weather came soon after asphalt was spread and the surface was too firm to allow proper imbedding of rock. Also the rock was a soft variety which was ground into dust by traffic. The city had considerable difficulty in removing the left-over rock and dust.

Now the city is applying a two way corrective measure. As soon as asphalt "bleeds", indicating a soft and sticky consistency, Yosten spreads a thin layer of crushed rock on it. Meanwhile he is using a hard, flinty rock which will penetrate and imbed itself into the asphalt surface rather than grind into dust.

125 youngsters gather here for Cooke County Cub Scout day camp

Cooke County Cub Scout Day Camp for 1982 has been judged a huge success by program director, Lupe Evans. Attending were 125 cub scouts from the Cooke County area and Saint Jo, and a staff of 30 volunteer helpers who led the daily sessions.

Many parents and friends came to the campfire closing ceremonies Friday evening, June 25. All the cubs participated and performed in the skits that they practised during the week with skit director, Patsy Bay.

The daily learning sessions were made even more interesting by a variety of noon-time activities planned by Cubmaster Jerry Bayless. On Monday two motorcycle policemen came to talk about bike safety and motorcycles. On Tuesday the EMS, who had been standing by, gave a demonstration of their newest piece of equipment, the "Jaws of Life."

It was then explained that after a flag has become torn and tattered there is a very special manner of disposition with dignity by burning.

It was also announced that plans are already underway for Day Camp, 1983.

Cub Scout Day Camps are designed for a definite purpose, the first of course being "for fun"; the second for keeping boys interested and involved in Cub Scouting during the summer months. The Cub Scout Day Camp must meet specific requirements set by the National Boy Scouts of America Council. Camp is inspected during the week of camp. Cooke County Day Camp has always been given a Superior rating.

PUC approves TP&L rate hike

The Public Utility Commission of Texas today issued a final order granting Texas Power & Light Company a $72 million increase in revenues which will mean approximately 5.8 percent increase in general revenues.

According to Tom Parsons, TP&L manager in Gainesville, the rate increase will go into effect July 1. In some cities, these rates will be placed into effect under bond in order to implement new rates at the same time throughout TP&L's service area. Parsons said the average annual residential bill will increase approximately 9 percent as a direct result of this rate increase, but Parsons also said customers' bills will rise more than 9 percent this summer because of such things as increased fuel costs and increased usage.

Small commercial and industrial customers will see from these new rates a 2.4 percent increase. Larger commercial and industrial customers' revenues will increase 3.7 percent and municipal customers, 8 percent. These percentages include the charges for fuel.

HEALTH-YOUR RESPONSIBILITY

Kathryn S. Stream, Ph.D.
Director, Medical and Community Services

If your grandmother told you to "get a good night's sleep", that was good advice then and now. A good night's sleep was one of the five health habits that correlated most highly with longevity in the Breslow studies at Stanford University.

Just what is a good night's sleep? The average night's sleep is about seven and one-half hours, but many people require less. Other people who are perfectly healthy may require ten to eleven hours. The need for sleep varies with age. Babies need 16-20 hours per day and young children need about ten hours per day. As we get older we tend to sleep less.

Although the needs for sleep vary widely from person to person, we are remarkably consistent with ourselves regarding sleep. At about the same time each night, your internal clock tells you it's time to begin the rest cycle. That internal body clock which governs sleep and wakefulness punishes us if we alter the natural pattern. "Jet lag" is a term we invented to describe the body's fight against the improper synchronization of its clock and your watch.

Sleep can be divided into four stages plus a sleep called REM, which stands for rapid eye movement. (Your Health and Fitness, May, 1982). Stage I is the transition stage to true sleep. Stage II sleep is the stage in which one spends the most time throughout the night; but when one first goes to sleep, Stage II is just a step along the way. Following Stage II in quick succession are Stages III and

IV. Both of these stages depict slow brainwaves and in Stage IV, the brain is in its lowest state of consciousness. When young children can be carried without waking up, they are in the Stage IV sleep state.

From deep sleep, Stage IV, we gradually work our way back to Stage I and then REM sleep. REM sleep includes brain waves that resemble those of an awake person. It is during REM sleep that we dream. While scientists continue to debate the association of dreams and physical health (Science News, June, 1981) most of them are in agreement that Stage IV sleep and REM sleep are essential for life and health.

If you are robbed of Stage IV sleep, you will feel tired the next day, regardless of how long you spend in the other stages. You can foul up the natural sleep process. Drugs (including alcohol and sleeping pills), food or lack of it, worry, drinks containing stimulants and several other things can alter sleep patterns. An "uncomfortable" night's sleep can result from spicy foods or an empty stomach. Stimulants including coffee, tea and cola drinks taken late in the evening often delay going to sleep. Stress, anxiety, fear, and worry not only delay sleep but also can cause us to awaken during the night.

You should be aware that most sleeping pills suppress one or more of the essential stages of sleep. That suppression results in an unrefreshed night's sleep.

Common solutions for overcoming sleeping problems are: 1) getting enough physical exercise, 2) paying attention and respecting our natural sleep cycles and 3) establishing a specific routine of activities related to preparation for sleep. Remember that it is the amount of Stage IV or deep sleep that allows one to feel rested and refreshed. A good night is necessary for a good day.

Shellie Walterscheid, Joe Hoedebeck united In SH nuptial

The wedding of Shellie Walterscheid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.J. (Sonny) Walterscheid, and Joe Hoedebeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hoedebeck, was held in Sacred Heart Church on Saturday, June 26. Father Denis Soerries, pastor officiated for their vows and celebrated the Nuptial Mass with double ring ceremony at 5 p.m.

The bride was presented at the altar by her father. She was wearing an elegant, original candlelight peau-de-soie gown designed by Alfred Angelo, more treasured because it was her mother's wedding gown. It was designed with fitted bodice, sheer yoke enhanced with lace appliques and high pointed collar, re-embroidered with pearls and iridescents. Sleeves were long and fitted. The skirt of tier on tier of crystal pleated tulle had alternate rows etched with imported Alencon lace. An attached train, completely edged in the wide imported lace, swept into an aisle-wide train.

Her three tiered cathedral length veil was held in place by a matching coronet. Her bridal bouquet was a silk cascade arrangement of candlelight roses, and gardenias, green and yellow forget-me-nots and angel lace, with an entwined rosary belonging to the bride's great grandmother, the late Mrs. Tony Fuhrmann.

A cape-length ruffle fell from the shoulders of the sheer bodice designed with a Victorian neckline. Their flowers were nosegays of yellow and mint green roses, daffodils and forget-me-nots. In their hair they wore matching flowers with white baby's breath and ribbons.

The attendants entered the sanctuary and stood at the altar, their dresses alternating the chosen colors of yellow and mint green.

A reception followed in the Sacred Heart Community Center, with catered dinner and dance, for 300 guests. Peggy Grewing and Mary Hess, sisters of the groom presided at the bride's book.

Medical card gives vital data

If you're in an accident or suddenly taken ill, what do you have in your possession to guide police, paramedics or doctors to the fastest and safest way to help you?

The National Safety Council has produced an answer to this problem - the new "National Safety Council Medical Information Card." This wallet-sized card carries vital medical data on a strip of microfilm and has a built-in lens system which allows the card to be ready anywhere. In an emergency, a rescuer need only bend the plastic card to bring the lens and microfilm together to read the accident victim's medical history on the spot. The Texas Safety Association (TSA) will distribute and market the card in Texas.

TSA President Dean Ward said a typical card contains identification information, medical data (including any complicating conditions), and a signed authorization from the card bearer allowing for treatment and surgery in case he and she is in an accident and is unconscious or unable to sign a release form at the hospital. It also contains the organ donor release.

Carriers of the medical information card are provided with a set of self-adhesive stickers that can be placed on a wallet or a driver's license. In an emergency, the stickers will alert rescuers that the accident victim is carrying a card with vital medical information. A similar sticker may be applied to the windshield of the card bearer's motor vehicle.

Dean emphasized that the first few minutes of an accident are crucial for an accident victim suffering serious injuries. The information included on the Council's card, he said, can aid an on-site rescuer and, soon thereafter, the hospital emergency team and doctors in the quickest and safest treatment of an accident victim.

For more information on the "National Safety Council Medical Information Card" send a stamped self-addressed business size envelope to the Texas Safety Association, 5014 Bull Creek Road, P.O. Box 9345, Austin, Texas 78766.

Photos from the Past

These two pictures are shared with us by Mrs. Norbert Klement. At left is a group picture of the Building Committee of Sacred Heart Grade School, when the Cornerstone was laid on December 8, 1924. Starting at the top of the picture in the back row are Frank Trachta and John Bayer. Immediately in front of them are John Meurer and Joe Wiesman. In the third row are Ben Hellman, Father Frowin Koerd and Al Richter, supervisor. In the fourth row are Frank Seyler and Henry Esker. In the front row are C.J. Fette, William Walterscheid, J.M. Weinzapfel, John B. Klement and August Hellman. The young man at right, holding the Texas flag is Adolph (Shorty) Herr, and holding the Stars and Stripes is Ben Voht.

The second picture is a view of church dignitaries and parishioners attending the ceremonies relative to laying of the cornerstone on December 8, 1924.

Trip to Hawaii is surprise birthday gift

Mrs. Richard Cain was a very surprised "early birthday honoree" at a dinner party held at Garcia's Banquet Room in Fort Worth on June 19. She went to the party under the illusion that she was attending a silver anniversary party for her daughter and son-in-law, the Bill McCollums of Dallas. As it developed, both honorees were surprised. There were two decorated cakes for the two events, the silver anniversary and Mrs. Cain's with the lettering "Happy 39 to a special mother."

During dinner a Spanish guitarist serenaded them. Biggest gift was a trip to Hawaii, accompanying LaQueta and Bill McCollum and daughters Kelley and Tracey. Plans are to leave DFW on July 14.

Attending the silver anniversary-birthday party were the McCollum family, the Wendell Richeys, the Chris Cains, Queenie Walterscheid, the Nick Walterscheids all of Muenster; the Jim Christians and Biff Whites of Springtown; the Dickie Cains of Ardmore, the Gene Hartmans of Denton; the Don Volkman and John Volkman of Burleson; Charlie Rhone of Bellevue and a number of members of the Rhone family; the Lloyd Hefners of Amarillo; the Pete Smiths of Lubbock and a number of members of the Hogan family.

An evening at Billy Bob's of Texas followed. Sunday's activities included a luncheon hosted by the Don Volkman, where the group enjoyed swimming, tennis, music by the Cherry Rhones of Wichita Falls with group singing. Steve Rhone sang the song he composed for his mother Leona Rhone who passed away April 18.

The group saw films of the Hogan reunion held September 1981.

INTRODUCING HOSPITAL CARE WITHOUT HOSPITALIZATION

Outpatient Surgery Can Save You Both Time And Money

Westgate's new outpatient surgery department, Surgery Today, is designed to keep you out of the hospital overnight. Routine x-rays, lab tests, physical therapy, cardiac care, respiratory therapy, nuclear scans, even emergency treatment, and surgery need not require a disruptive overnight stay, if you have access to the right facility. Surgery Today is a state-of-the-art center for medical and surgical treatments not requiring hospitalization.

A Concept Whose Time Has Come

In the accelerated pace of developing medical capabilities, more than technology has advanced. We have come beyond thinking that all surgery is by definition inpatient surgery. Many surgical procedures can be done just as well, just as safely, on an outpatient basis.

The Safety Of A Full Service, Modern Hospital

Outpatient surgery can be done even more safely at Surgery Today because it is housed in Westgate

Medical Center Hospital. Patients enjoy the security of knowing that they have immediate and direct access to all of Westgate's comprehensive medical facilities, including the Coronary Care and Inpatient Surgical Units which are adjacent to Surgery Today.

Convenience And Quality

Surgery Today fits the care to the need, both for the patient and the physician. The center is a doctor's dream. Everything your physician could conceivably need to diagnose and treat you is at his or her disposal - the latest, most sophisticated equipment - experienced, superbly trained personnel - with everything centrally located.

Time Efficient And Cost Efficient

Surgery Today represents Westgate's newest method of insuring top quality medical care at the lowest possible cost. You schedule visits at your and your doctor's convenience, not the hospital's. Total treatment time is reduced. You avoid overnight room and board expenses. Lower costs for us, lower costs for you. As much as 50% can be saved over comparable inpatient surgery.

Where Care Is More Than Clinical

At Westgate, the quality of patient care is primary. The Medical Center is more than just buildings and high technology medical machinery. It is people caring for people. Westgate's high standards of care have been recognized through numerous patient care awards. This high level of caring is at the heart of our commitment to the patients we serve. It is evident in Surgery Today, and it is evident throughout Westgate Medical Center.

Turkey Deli Slices Voted Tops In The Sandwich Sweepstakes

A "Dagwood" sandwich filled with turkey deli slices is sure to get your vote.

Sliced turkey luncheon meat is a real winner in every way. It's higher in protein and lower in fat and cholesterol, but the flavor comes right from the corner delicatessen.

With turkey ham, turkey salami, turkey pastrami and turkey bologna to choose from, you can easily rev up a fat "Dagwood" sandwich with all the trimmings. The flavor is a product of the curing process, so you get the nutritive benefits of turkey with deli flavor and aroma. If you prefer a more traditional turkey flavor, smoked turkey breast and oven-roasted turkey breast also come sliced and ready for that special sandwich.

These sliced turkey luncheon meats are wrapped in a neat, see-through package and provide a high-protein sandwich filling that blends well with tomatoes, onions, cheese, lettuce and a variety of savory sandwich spreads.

Pick your favorite spread or "mix and match" and spread generously on each sandwich.

Any kind of floating object can help a drowning person

A thermos bottle or ice chest could save a drowning person's life this summer, a Texas Safety Association officer said recently.

Many drownings which occur close to the shore can be prevented by quick action, even if the rescuer has no lifesaving training, according to TSA's Vice President for Home and Leisure activities, Nelson Mueller.

"This Fourth of July weekend, while many families are enjoying water sports, drownings can be prevented by action of those on the shore," said Nelson Mueller, safety and Health Administrator for ALCOA in Rockdale.

"Persons on the shore can help swimmers in trouble by providing them with flotation devices," Mueller said. "It only takes 12 pounds of buoyancy to hold a 180 pound person's head out of water," he said.

"When you see someone in trouble you can throw him or her your coffee thermos because it adds buoyancy which could save a life," Mueller said. Other items likely to be near in a Fourth of July outing like a closed fishing tackle box or an ice chest can also be used to save a life. And, of course, a pair of long pants inflated and tied off at the legs and waist can also provide lifesaving buoyancy.

These lifesaving tips come from the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary in Texas as a reminder that those on the shore need not stand idly by while a swimmer or boater drowns close to shore.

Auto tips from Mobil, the detergent gas that helps save engines.

Improve Your Car Trip Planning And Save Gas

Sometimes it's not the way you drive that wastes gas. It's when you drive. Here are some hints you might consider before getting in your car on the spur of the moment.

Short trips are costly in terms of gas mileage. For instance, if you start your car cold and drive for four miles, your miles per gallon could be very low. But if you drive 15 miles, you could be averaging 50 percent more mpg.

Combine short shopping and commuting trips to reduce the miles traveled for each action.

So try to consolidate your driving. Combine short shopping and commuting trips to reduce the miles traveled for each action. Join a car pool for commuting to and from work.

Pre-plan your trips by figuring out which route requires the least fuel. Maybe you can travel during off-peak hours—or by freeway instead of in heavy city traffic.

If you have more than one car, use the one that is the most fuel-efficient whenever you can.

energy answers

from the Texas Energy Extension Service

I am interested in earth sheltered construction. Can you tell me how these homes are heated and cooled? W. R., Denison.

Theoretically, earth sheltered homes are supposed to require minimal heating and cooling other than by natural means. The objective in this type of structure is to maintain a stable temperature in the home year round; however, that stable temperature may not be the ideal comfort level for the occupants. Thus, heating and cooling systems are normally the same as those used in conventional homes.

Central heating and cooling units are often used, although they may be sized much smaller and used less frequently, primarily as back-up systems (financial institutions normally require these systems to insure resale value). Wood stoves, solar greenhouses, heat pumps, and ceiling fans are popular devices for heating and cooling earth sheltered homes.

The typical earth sheltered home is often built for the northern climate where the primary concern is for heating; however, in Texas we are primarily concerned with designs for cooling.

My wife and I are considering building an earth sheltered home near Borger. We would like to know the types of concrete shell structures that can be used and the pros and cons of each. R. C., Borger.

Basically, the two types of concrete structures that can be used are precast and cast-in-place. The preferred method of cast-in-place, reinforced roof slabs is more expensive than the precast plank method. Because of cost, they are limited in span to the twenty-foot range.

On the other hand, cast-in-place is entirely flexible, able to assume nearly any shape, slope, or thickness. This method offers a monolithic roof that can even be poured at the same time as the walls.

Precast roofs are generally assumed to be less expensive, providing there is a reputable concrete plant in the vicinity willing to accommodate a small order. This method presents more difficulty with logistics. Monoliths must be easily transported to the site. A crane is required to lift the planks off the truck and place them on the roof. These extra services will add to the expense. Some earth sheltered builders feel this is an inferior roof, acoustically, aesthetically, and structurally.

Information on earth sheltered construction is available free from the Texas Energy Extension Service. Please specify whether you want general or specific information. If specific, list the topics desired.

If you have a question about energy conservation in the home, send it to ENERGY ANSWERS, Texas Energy Extension Service, Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843 or phone (713) 845-8025. Funds for this program were made available from the U.S. Department of Energy through the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council (TENRAC).

Growing Child

How many kinds of movement are there? As adults, we often think of movement only in terms of standing, sitting, walking and very occasionally running. But children have all sorts of different movements. They love locomotor movements such as running, rolling, hopping, skipping, sliding, galloping, jumping, creeping, and crawling.

They adore nonlocomotor movements like swinging, stretching, bending, turning, twisting, and climbing. And they are challenged by manipulative movements that require the use of the hands—pushing, pulling, lifting, catching, throwing, striking, and hammering.

A child will acquire rhythm, good body image, and spatial organization by practicing these basic movements, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter. Parents can easily help their children turn random activity into creative movements that teach thinking, listening, and exploring in space and time.

How? By pretending! Here are some sample activities that may be done solo or in groups. What is especially nice about these activities is that everyone is a winner because there is no "right" way. These are all challenges and not commands. (1) Walking. "Show me how a giant walks, a midget, a fairy, a soldier, a robot." "How can you walk using tiny steps, huge steps, walking on your toes, your heels?" (2) Running. "How would you run if a monster was chasing you, if you were a baby, a very old person?" (3) Rolling. "Can you roll to the wall, going fast, going slow?" (4) Hopping. "Show me how a rabbit hops, a kangaroo, a mommy, a daddy." "Can you hop on one foot, now the other foot?"

(5) Skipping. "How does a Princess skip, a hippopotamus?" "Can you skip in a circle?" (6) Galloping. "Can you gallop for boys below school age?" (7) Sliding. "Can you slide to the door with your eyes closed?" "How would you slide if you held a broom in your hand?" (8) Jumping. "How does a pony gallop, a cowboy, a rodeo leader?" (9) Creeping or Crawling. "If you were a soldier, how would you get under this barrier without making any noise?"

(10) Swinging. "Show me how a leaf swings in the breeze, a tree." (11) Stretching. "How tall can you make yourself?" (12) Bending. "Pretend to pick a flower." "Can you show me how a very old man walks?" (13) Turning or Twisting. "How would you pilot a plane to get away from lightning?" "How would a top go around?" (14) Climbing. "Show me how you would climb to the stars, to the top of a bank building carrying a sack of potatoes." (15) Pulling. "How will you pull in a 20 pound fish?"

The Growing Child newsletter follows a child's development month-by-month. For more information on the social and physical development of children from birth to six years old, write to Growing Child, PO Box 620N, Lafayette, In. 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter costs $11.95.

Air Ionizers Combat Pollution In Home

I'm often asked what food we should avoid to feel better. Yet we let something else enter our body, besides food, that has just as much influence on our health. It's the air we breathe.

Each day we inhale about 2,500 gallons of air to survive. When it's polluted with dust, pollen and smoke, the air is harmful and can make us feel irritable and stuffy.

Avoiding bad air though is difficult. Pollution is everywhere, from the countryside to our office, and it strips the atmosphere of the negative air ion which science has shown to be vital to life and health.

Now, however, ion generators have been developed to stabilize the air by discharging millions of negative ions into a room. Several models are on the market and our research shows that any priced below $100 are not usually effective.

You can pay up to $300 for some excellent units, but for normal office or personal use such expense is not necessary. One, the Home-Ions from Paradise generator is mid-priced and has been written up in several consumer and scientific journals. It looks to be the best of all.

To get more information on it, contact the company at 1461 N. Daly, Anaheim, CA. 92806. (714) 635-1423.

Make every pasture acre count.

Broadleaf weeds can turn grass pastures into weedy wastelands fast. That loss of forage for your cattle means loss of profits for you.

Weedmaster® Herbicide can turn around weed-infested pastures. Weedmaster cleans out broadleaf weeds — even tough-to-kill bitterweed and musk thistle.

Weedmaster is economical and easy to apply. With weeds out of the way, grasses have a chance to bounce back and your cattle will have more, higher-quality forage.

Make every acre of your pasture count toward better profits. Ask for Weedmaster Herbicide.

A First Texas 80's Report: On Investments.

First Quarter Comparison, 1982

■ Average annual yield of First Texas Daily-Rate Money Maker Security
 ■ Average annual yield of all national money market funds
 ■ Average annual inflation rate

"Money Maker Securities-They beat money market funds and inflation."

Some people think money market funds are the only way to beat the 80's. But at First Texas, they have better ways to make the most of your money.

Take their Fixed- and Daily-Rate Securities. Both are proven winners you can get only at First Texas, and both outperform the funds with the high interest you need today to beat inflation. In fact, in the first quarter of 1982, the average annual yield of the First Texas Money Maker Daily-Rate Security was higher every month than the average annual yield of the money market funds. Plus, the First Texas yield also beat the 1981 inflation rate of 8.9% by 63%. That's right: 63%!

Not just a better investment. A safer investment.

The First Texas Money Maker Securities are also a safer investment than the funds because both your principal and interest are backed by the strength of First Texas and a trust arrangement. So you know your money is secure. But with most money market funds, your entire principal is at risk.

Immediate access to your money.

With Money Maker Securities, you also have immediate access to your money. So if you should need your investment back quickly, for whatever reason, you can get it immediately with a cashier's check on the spot at over 70 locations statewide. Compare that to the funds. And with the First Texas Daily-Rate Security, there's no penalty for early withdrawal.

So if you want to make a sound investment with high interest, see First Texas. They can make the most of your money. And that's what beating the 80's is all about.

Minimum deposit: $2,000. Money Maker Securities are repurchase agreements which are secured debts of First Texas, collateralized by government securities. However, these repurchase agreements are not insured or guaranteed by the federal government or its agencies.
