

"AM I MY BROTHERS KEEPER?"

It is with no intation of preaching a pious sermon that we quote these familiar words from Genesis. Yet there is within them a truth which might vitalize any serman.

This truth is especially valuable now. Though wealth is abundant and wealth-producing power emulates omnipotence, it must nevertheless be confessed that degrading poverty and the more degrading fear of poverty are distinguishing characteristics of civilized life. Instead of lifting all to better conditions of opportunity, man's triumph over the forces of nature enormously enriches a few at the expense of the rest. It has done little to increase the comforts of the toiling masses even absolutely, but much to diminish their comforts relatively; and their industrial independence it has positively destroyed. The gulf between riches and poverty has not been filled in; it has been widened and deepened and made more a hell than ever. So dreedful is the poverty of our time felt to be, that it has inspired all of us with fear of it; with a fear so terrifying that many more good people than would like to acknowledge their weakness look upon the exchange of one's immortal soul for fortune as very like a bargain. Such unwholsome circumstances make men ask of one another with growing eagerness: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Three answers to the question may be heard.

There is the answer of Cain as the slayer of his brother. It comes from those strenuous mortals who, denying that their brother has rights, acknowledge no duties toward him. They answer promptly and sharply: "No! I am not my brother's keeper. Let him prove his right to survive by surviving. The law of the universe is neither mercy nor justice; it is power."

Another answer is in spirit like the first; but instead of being strenuous it is hypocritical. It comes from professional philanthropists and their parasites, and from statesmen who seek conquest in the name of humanity; men who, while denying that their brother has rights which they are morally bound to accord, profess an obligation of charitable duty toward him. In oily phrase they answer: "Yes; I am my brother's keeper. It is my pious duty, a burden from which I must not shrink, to do him good or regulate his life."

The third answer like the second is affirmative. But it is not hypocritical, nor is it inspired by sentiments of conventional philanthropy. It comes from devoted men and women. Seeing and often sharing the impoverished condition of multitudes of willing workers in a society where wealth abounds and may be multiplied indefinitely, and attributing this impoverishment to industrial competition, they conceive of sacrifice for the brother as an ever present and normal duty, and forecast an industrial regime from which competition shall have been excluded.

The social ideal of the third class may be expressed in the familiar though much abused formula: "From each according to his ability; to each according to his needs." But this familiar formula is not to be interpreted in the familiar wooden way. To each according to his needs does not necessarily mean to each according to his selfish desires. It may just as well mean to each according to what is necessary for his greatest usefulness. And in some form or phrase or other, such is the interpretation which most if not all believers in the formula put upon it. The essential idea is not selfish getting but unselfish giving, not greed but sacrifice. But that ideal does not bear examination any better than its opposite.

Sacrifice is as far out of equilibrium in one direction as greed is in the other. Not sacrifice, but competition is the law—and it is a law, a natural law, a law of human nature, an expression of the law which governs all human activity, namely, the law that men seek to satisfy their desires, be they good or bad, in the easiest known way—that is the law which furnishes the only rule whereby industrial equilibrium can be produced and maintained so long as the sentiment of self-interest in a measurable degree persists in the world. Competition, if free and not made jug-handled by legislative schemes for resisting it, would maintain that equilibrium. It is truly as some has expressed it: "God's law of co-operation in a selfish world."

With competition free, everyone in normal mental and physical health who produced in proportion to his ability would share in proportion to his needs. For when we consider the principal of the interchangeability of labor no healthy man's needs can exceed his ability to produce. His desires may, but not his needs. We have heard useless and luxurious people say they were born to be served, and under a self sacrificing regime their would be no way of telling whether they might not be right. The queen bee is useful in the hive; why not they possibly in society? But free competition would furnish an infallible test. If that prevailed, they would be served in the degree that they rendered service, neither more nor less. To reflect at all upon the principle of the interchangeability of labor is to see that the relationship of ability to needs is held in equilibrium by free competition. While, for illustration, a hat-maker might be able to satisfy his legitimate needs as to shoes with his ability as a shoemaker, he would be able to do so with his ability as a hatmaker, provided exchange were unrestricted. So a philosopher, a preacher, an actor or a teacher might fall very far short of satisfying his needs as philosopher, preacher, actor or teacher, if he had to make the needed things themselves; but if he were really useful to his brethren in his own vocation, he would have no difficulty in satisfying these needs in full proportion, by exchanging his labor or theirs. His income of service would be in proportion to his expenditure of ability, and that is the industrial equilibrium. It is interference with competition, not competition itself, that unbalances industry and brings about social conditions which gives plausibility to the theory that we ought to work for one another regardless of a return of work.

From the Public.

"The golden sunshine of permanent prosperity fills the land."—Plutocrat Organ.

The land is filled with sunshine golden;

A sunshine peerless, pure and bright;

A sunshine priceless, and beholden

To God alone for life and light.

'Tis likewise filled with sunshine golden,

A sunshine dearly bought and sold;

A sunshine "cornered" and beholden

For all its worth to greed and gold.

A sunshine gold-en born of tears;

A sunshine and souls shiver under;

A sunshine booked for four more years,

And then? what then? The helpless wonder

Ordinance No. 22.

An ordinance prohibiting the obstruction of streets, sidewalks, alleys, avenues and public grounds and prescribing penalties therefor.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained by the city council of the city of Amarillo: That it shall be unlawful for any person in any manner to obstruct or encumber any street, sidewalk, alley, avenue or public grounds within the corporate limits of the city of Amarillo, or to erect any fence or building so as to encroach upon or obstruct any street, sidewalk, alley, avenue or public ground in said city.

SEC. 2. Any person violating any of the provisions of foregoing section of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars per day for each and every day such obstruction is allowed to remain on or to encroach upon any such street, sidewalk, alley, avenue or public grounds after being notified to remove the same by any city officer.

PROVIDED, That any person, firm, or corporation having any fence, building or other obstruction upon any street, sidewalk, alley, avenue or public grounds, in this city, at the time of the passage of this ordinance, shall have such time, in which to remove the same, as shall be allowed by the street committee, which shall not, however, exceed fifteen days.

SEC. 3. It shall be unlawful for any railroad employe or other person to obstruct any street, alley, crossing or other thoroughfare of said city by leaving thereon any train, engine, car or other rolling stock of such railroad company, for a longer time than ten minutes, or stop or cause to be stopped any railway engine, or car, across any street, alley, road, highway, or other public passway, in this city, for a longer time than ten minutes. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than fifty dollars.

SEC. 4. Nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to prevent any person, firm or corporation, by the consent and under the direction of the street committee from using such streets, sidewalks, alleys, avenues or public grounds, temporarily, for depositing building materials when engaged in the construction or repairing of any building adjacent thereto, nor to any such person, firm or corporation, when engaged in laying or repairing any water or gas pipe, adjacent thereto.

SEC. 5. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Passed January 10th, 1901.

Approved Jan. 10, 1901.

Galveston Storm.

Illustrated and realistic stories, written by Mr. G. M. Bailey and Dr. S. O. Young, of Galveston, who watched the havoc wrought by the most fearful hurricane ever known in America.

No fiction, but realistic, accurate and thrilling accounts of the experiences of these gentlemen and others who witnessed the horrors of the stricken city. A book containing over fifty pages, closely written, and illustrated with half-tone engravings, reproduced from actual photographs taken during and immediately after the death dealing winds and waters had laid low the once beautiful city, leaving in its path the bodies of more than six thousand dead, whose names are contained in "Souvenir of the Galveston Storm," together with a carefully prepared map of Galveston, showing the devastated district and all points of interest, now ready and on sale by all newsdealers, book stores and news agents. Price, only 25 cents. Send 25 cents for agent's outfit and samples, to J. J. Pastoriza Printing and Lithographing Co., 304 Main Street, Houston, Texas.

Mr. G. T. Whaley, living south of Washburn, was in the city last Saturday and gave account of finding an Indian chief's skeleton last week in Palo Duro Canyon. Mr. W. with his children were gathering wood and one of them, while looking through the cliffs of the canyon discovered the corner of a blanket protruding from a crevice in the rock. Mr. Whaley after removing some rocks, found the dried up and mummified remains of a man wrapped up in three well preserved blankets, with three well preserved hats and buckskin leggings, also being in a state of preservation. As an evidence of his rank was a silver medal, doubtless given to him by the president after a big powwow as on one side was the profile of President Polk and inscribed thus: "James K. Polk, President of the United States of America, 1845." On the reverse side were two clasped hands, a pipe and tomahawk, and inscribed thus: "Peace and Friendship." All of his trinkets were there, consisting of brass bells, rattlers, beaded vest and leggings of buckskin, together with two rawhide shields, and a headgear of buffalo horns. There was also a long strip of leather to which silver plates were attached, and after being fastened to his hair trailed doubtless far behind him on the ground. In the back of his head was a hole indicating that he had been shot. Mr. Whaley promises more of the particulars later on.

And now it is Vernon that looks for the Stillwell railroad, and Quanah is turning her wistful eyes toward Mangum for the Rock Island—while Amarillo waits the sure coming of the Choctaw from Weatherford, O. T.

Mr. Henry Boyce and bride, nee Miss Ollie Hughes, returned Sunday night off their bridal tour to the City of Mexico and intervening points of interest. They had a pleasant uneventful trip, and will now settle down to the sweets of house-keeping—and rustling like grown folks.

But the shape and the quality of the paper, and arrangement of the matter would indicate the mechanical part to be in the hands of a freak or a Cleveland reorganizer.

W. L. Evans and wife have returned from a long visit to Austin and Palestine, bringing back a pretty little daughter found at Austin.

A Society Attraction.

The Curtiss Comedy Co. under the management of S. M. Curtiss will play an engagement of one week at the Opera House, beginning, Monday, February 4th. This is by far the strongest attraction of its kind ever seen in this city, numbering twenty people, a first-class band orchestra, and presenting the latest dramatic and comedy successes. Remember the date.
