More Check Than Balance . . .

It is difficult to decide whether the august Supreme Court of the United States, beyond which, appeals can be made only to God (of Whom, it seems not to approve), does more damage to the nation it is supposed to protect when it sticks its nose into police court matters such as the trespass convictions of Maryland sit-in demonstrators, or when it decides that Communists should be as free to travel as loyal citizens.

In the Maryland sit-in case, the High Court might well have ruled on the Constitutional question of whether the state could properly support the discriminatory acts of a businessman. But it didn't. It ducked this issue to quibble about a state law.

In ruling that members of the US Communist Party have as much right to travel as anybody the Court lopped an arm off of the 1950 Internal Security Act which had, up to now prohibited these characters from getting passports to travel outside of the Western Hemisphere or to Cuba. The Court objected to the Government's "presumption" that the Com-mies, if given passports, would use them against the interests of the US. Whence it would seem no one has yet told six of the Justices what Communism is about.

It might be noted for what comfort it offers that three Justices dissented in each of these cases. Justice Black, speaking for the dissenters in the sit-in case declared that trespass laws "have been, and doubtless still are, important features of any government dedicated as this country is to a rule of law."

In the travel case, Justice Tom Clark termed some of Justice Goldberg's comments in the majority opinion as "irrational imaginings," and declared that "Congress had ample evidence that the use of passports by Americans belonging to the world Communist movement is a threat to our national security."

These decisions coming on the heels of the Court's ruling that seats in both houses of every state legislature must

It's the Law in Texas

What if some glib salesman signs you up for an encyclopedia, or a set of pots and pans. Next day you change your mind. Can you cancel the order? Chances are you can't.

The typical pattern runs thus: the salesman fast-talks poor Joyce Jones into signing an order for a set of cooking ware, silver, or what-have-you. She pays a nominal amount down, the balance to be over a long term. The price is high enough, plus a big carrying charge, but the installments run for a long time and at first look reasonable. When the shipment arrives, Joyce decides she doesn't want it, and can't afford it anyhow, so she refuses to accept it and tells the company she is cancelling the order.

But poor Joyce is out of luck. The company promptly tells her that they "sold" her investment contract to a bank or financial institution, and she must now deal with them, not the company. The company thus got its sale price in full, the salesman his commission, and the new owner of the contract expects his money in full. Sorry, but it is too late to cancel the order. This is not at all like buying from a local store, where you can usually return the goods if they are unsatisfactory or if you change your mind. If Joyce ships the merchandise back, the company will most likely refuse to accept it.

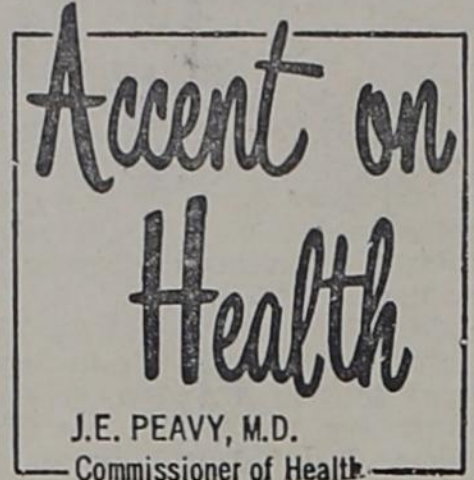

Moreover, the companies buying such contracts are hard-boiled about collections. If Joyce doesn't pay, they will be apportioned by population (we wonder how they happened to overlook the U. S. Senate), leave just one cheering thought. The noble justices have now adjourned to rest until fall. They will do no more damage until October.

not hesitate to report her to a credit rating agency, or even sue.

The moral is, be sure you know who you are dealing with, and be sure you know what you are signing and the consequences.

AUSTIN Have you ever heard of phenylketonuria?

It's not nearly as well known as, say, mumps—a disease that almost everyone will have at one time or another. Phenylketonuria isn't catching, and only about one in 8,000 to 9,000 is born with it.

What is this disease with the long name? It is an inborn metabolic error, called PKU for short. It occurs because of the body's inability to metabolize a substance called phenylalanine into tyrosine for the body to utilize.

Instead, the phenylalanine floods the body. Large amounts are excreted in the urine—providing a simple way to detect the disease. Still other large amounts are sent to the brain, causing mental retardation.

Skin pigmentation and other growth processes may be interfered with in a phenylketonuric.

A rare combination of genes from ordinary unsuspecting parents results in a phenylketonuric child. Chances are that not every child of such parents will be affected, but about one out of four will have PKU and two out of four will be carriers.

The gratifying picture today is that PKU can be detected early by simple urine tests or blood tests, or both. And if dietary regulation and control is begun early enough, the effects of the disease—retardation for example—can be avoided to a large extent.

Your local health department and the Texas State Department of Health are working with physicians and hospital staffs across Texas to make PKU tests available in the hospitals where affected babies might be born. To be effective, the test must be administered several days after birth. The metabolic error does not show itself until the infant has been on protein (milk) long enough for excesses to show up.

The Texas State Department of Health recommends that all newborn babies be tested for PKU. True, chances are only one in 8,000 to 9,000 that the infant will have this particular inborn metabolic error. But why take that chance?

Why gamble a simple test against a lifetime of sorrow?

Exhibits Asked For Oil Museum Planned at Ranger

Ranger — Texas' first oil museum will soon be opened in Ranger, site of one of the most highly-publicised discoveries in the history of the petroleum industry.

W. T. Eaton, president of Ranger Chamber of Commerce and Chairman of a recently-formed Oil Museum Committee, reports that members of the group already have begun the task of collecting items and relics of the fabulous oil boom era. Several initially adequate buildings have been offered to house valued artifacts and mementoes, he added. Eaton is local distribution manager for the Lone Star Gas Company.

Individuals, firms and corporations having old oil field equipment, relics, articles or items of any and every description, regardless of size or location, are urged to contact the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, P. O. Box 57, Ranger, Texas, telephone Area code 817, Mitchell 7-1411. Financial contributions are also being accepted. Checks should be made payable to "Texas Oil Museum Fund."

NOTICE Due To Various Reasons There Is A SHORTAGE OF COINED MONEY

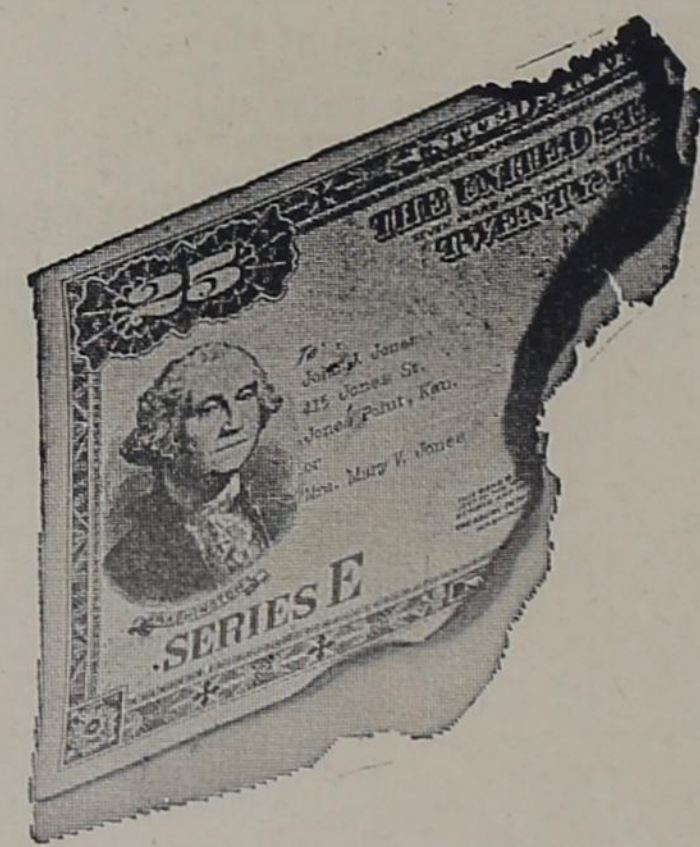

This bank is having difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply of coins for its customers' use.

We respectfully urge business men and our customers generally to use their coined money in the operation of their business affairs, and not to deal with out-of-town coin collectors or others who hoard coins and keep them out of circulation.

Our order for coins from the Federal Reserve Bank was not completely filled this week, due to this shortage.

Help your business and your bank by keeping this coined money in circulation by using coins for business purposes only.

Fire can destroy the Bond... but not your savings

All that the owner of this charred U.S. Savings Bond has to do is mail the remains to the Treasury Department, with as much more information as he can give—serial number, and date and place of issue. He'll get a fresh Bond to replace it. No charge.

The Treasury has grown accustomed to providing this sort of service. In the past 20 years it has replaced over 1,300,000 Savings Bonds that have been lost, stolen, burned or mistakenly tossed out with the trash.

Every U.S. Savings Bond sold is registered in the name of its owner, and a microfilm record made. So the government can check when, where, and in whose name a Bond was purchased—even if there isn't a burned crisp to send them.

This assurance against loss is another of the many reasons why Americans now hold over $47 billion in Series E and H Savings Bonds. The money they're saving is providing for their personal security. And it's also helping to build the strength of America at a time when the enemies of freedom are stronger than ever.

U.S. Savings Bonds are a good way to provide for your future. Buy them where you bank or work.

Keep freedom in your future with

Deferred Grazing Part of Good Range Management, Says Soil Technician

By Joe Scasta
Rising Star SCS
Deferred grazing is the practice of delaying grazing on a portion of the rangeland. It is generally done for a prescribed period of time during any growth period of the year. This practice is applied for several reasons and there are distinct advantages of this "rest" period.
The beginning date of deferment should be about the time new growth begins. The "rest" should be continued until frost or until the seed has matured. By following this practice the desirable grasses can be favored and allowed to set a seed crop. In addition to the seed crop perennial grasses obtain more vigor. Young plants also benefit from a deferment by becoming established over the area.
Deferred grazing following other range management practices has proved to be beneficial. A full growing season deferment should be planned following such practices as brush control and seeding.
A growing season deferment or "rest" following brush control is well worthwhile. Once the brush is removed the native grasses no longer have to compete for moisture and nutrients. This rest period gives them a chance to get a fast start, get roots down and become established before the brush begins regrowth.
Newly seeded areas should be followed by a complete growing season deferment. The area should be deferred beginning at seed germination for the growing season. It is good planning to include a rest during the spring of the second year after seedling and at least 90 days during the growing season once every third year.

Following adverse conditions such as fire, drought or continued heavy grazing, native grasses should be favored by a full growing season's deferment.
Deferred grazing when periodically carried out is good management. It indicates that the landowner has a definite plan for managing his grasses.
Crop Residues Will Conserve Moisture, Soil
By Gary T. Grogan
Rising Star SCS Staff
A good definition of crop residue use is: Utilizing plant residues left in cultivated fields by incorporating them into the soil or leaving them on the surface during that part of the year when critical erosion (water or wind) periods usually occur.
The main purposes of crop residue left on or near the soil surface are:
(1) To conserve moisture. This is accomplished by reducing the temperature of the soil under the residue. The residue will also increase the amount of water infiltrated into the soil. The soil temperature will be about 20 to 50 degrees under the residue during the summer and in the winter the soil will stay warmer under the residue.
(2) Reduce soil losses. Reducing soil loss is a must if a farmer plans to keep his farm in top production. The soil lost from wind erosion is the "cream of the soil." Some of this can be replaced by fertilizer but if wind erosion is continued year after year, crops will not pay off. Through research it has been determined that on "sandy soils" you need at least 1,750 pounds of residue per acre if the residue is from a drilled crop and 2,500 pounds if the op is in rows. ethallivrs; If crop is in rows, to protect the soil from wind erosion. On clay soils the amount of residue would be 750 pounds, drilled, and 1,000 pounds if the crop is in rows. But if protection is needed for water erosion then 2,000 pounds of residue is needed on clay soil. The critical period for wind erosion occurs from September through October and February through April.
A quick and easy way to estimate the amount of crop residue left on the land after the harvest is:
Maize — First 10, bushels, 3,600 pounds of residue. Over 10 bushel yield add 80 pounds for each bushel.
Oats — First 20 bushels of yield, 3,600 pounds residue. Add 80 pounds for each two bushels of yield over 20 per acre.
If you want to get a closer estimate you can use one of the following methods:
For drilled crops — Take a tape measure and measure out to 3 feet 8 1/2 inches. With a pin through the end of the tape inserted in the ground, mark out a circle with the free end of the tape. Weigh the residue in the circle and multiply by 1,000. The answer will be the number of pounds per acre.
If the crop is planted in 36-inch rows, measure 15 feet and five inches of row length and clip and weigh in pounds. Then multiply by 1,000 and your result will be in pounds per acre.
Keeping crop residue on the soil surface if no cover crop is planted, is a must if you want to protect your farm from wind and water erosion. Conservation pays, both to the individual and the community.
Weldon Hill, Frank Gray and Eddie Joe Henry of the Rising Star schools are working on courses at Howard Payne College, Brownwood, this summer. Pat Howard, who teaches at Spearman in the Texas Panhandle, is also taking a summer course at Howard Payne.

Modern Drugs MEAN Lower Death Rates

With the advent of modern drugs, many serious and previously fatal diseases have been brought under control. Prescribed by physicians and dispensed by pharmacists, these drugs are serving mankind in every field of medicine.

Any results can be measured with considerable accuracy in the lowered statistical death rates of such diseases as pneumonia, tuberculosis, mastoiditis, septicemia, syphilis and many other infectious conditions; in the leveling off and, in some cases, the decline of admissions to our mental institutions as well as tuberculosis hospitals, and, in the corresponding increase of the human life span in our United States.

Whereas, in 1900, a newborn infant had a life expectancy of 40 years, today the newborn can expect to reach the ripe age of 70.

If there had been but a few ounces of sulfa drug in existence in 1923, Calvin Coolidge's son need not have died of septicemia. If, in 1790, they had known of streptomycin or isoniazid, or para-amino-salicylic acid, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart might have lived beyond his brief thirty-five years to enrich mankind with even greater contributions of his genius. If there had been only a half-dozen doses of penicillin available in 1863, President Lincoln's son, Willy, need not have died of pneumonia.

Many of the drugs which we take for granted today just did not exist twenty-five years ago; some of them were unknown as recently as FIVE years ago.

Our pharmacy and your physician are dedicated to your welfare. In keeping with the high standards of pharmacy, we maintain a comprehensive supply of these modern drugs of many brands, so that your prescription may be filled promptly and in accordance with your physician's specification whenever the need arises.

YOU'RE IN GOOD COMPANY WHEN YOU BORROW AT THE BANK

Neighbors in America enjoy many things in common — and very often that includes the use of bank credit.

For example, the man pictured above financed his backyard patio with a bank home improvement loan. The man next door bought his new car with the help of a bank auto loan. The wife of the neighbor across the street looks and acts her pretty and peppy best because bank-financed kitchen and laundry appliances have cut down the burden of her housekeeping. The cost of straightening the little girl's teeth was met with bank credit.

Within the last century, bank credit has become the stepping stone to a richer, fuller life for the individual and his family.

Browsing With Bev

Many homemakers put green tomatoes on a sunny window sill to ripen. They shouldn't. Too much sunlight prevents development of normal, even color. Immature green tomatoes won't ripen in the sun and are likely to rot if kept there too long. The best way to ripen picked tomatoes is in the cellar or garage — some place where the temperature is from 60 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Light is not needed to produce good red coloring in underripe tomatoes.

If you're having trouble using spray starches, here are some helpful hints:

Shake the can vigorously before each use.

Protect the ironing board cover and nearby furniture. It's difficult to keep the spray in a small area.

If the can has been standing without use for more than a day, spray the first burst of starch into the sink.

Clean the soleplate of your iron often so the starch will not scorch on the iron.

When cooking cheese, keep the heat low. Cheese needs just enough heat to melt and blend with other ingredients. High heat or overcooking will make cheese tough and stringy.

Whole - meal sandwiches are quickies for lunch. Cheese is a sandwich favorite that combines with so many foods for interesting combinations. Try this triple - decker open - face: Toast one side of bread, spread untoasted side with butter. Add a spoonful of baked beans, cover with a slice of cheddar cheese and top with Bermuda or sweet onion sliced thin. Place sandwich under the broiler until the cheese melts.
