As It Looks From Here

By Omar Burleson, M. C. 17th Texas District

Washington, D. C. — Nathan Hale did not say: "Me spy on the British? Are you trying to be funny? Do you know what they do to spies they catch? I will give you a news flash, chum. They hang them."

Paul Revere did not say: "What do you mean, me ride through every Middlesex village and town, and in the middle of the night too? Why pick on me? Am I the only man in Boston with a horse?"

Patrick Henry did not say: "Sure I'm for liberty. First, last and always, I'm for liberty. But we have got to be realistic. We are a pretty small outfit. If we start pushing the British around, someone is likely to get hurt."

George Washington did not say: "Gentlemen, I am honored and appreciate your confidence, but I just have too much to do. I am just starting to get things in shape out at Mount Vernon."

Since these heroes did not say these things, they would be considered "squares" nowadays.

This word "square" according to Mr. Charles H. Brower, originated with convicts. To them, a square was an inmate who would not conform to the convict code. From this, the sophisticated have applied it to the man who never learned to get away with wrongdoing. To them, he is a Joe who volunteers when he does not have to. He is a guy who gets his kicks from trying to do something better than anyone else can. He is a boob who gets so lost in his work that he has to be reminded to go home. He is a slob who still gets choked up when the band plays "America The Beautiful."

The square does not fit too well into many current groups of angle players, corner cutters, sharp shooters and goof offs. He does not even like to open packages before Christmas. He does not want to fly now, pay later. He is burdened down with old fashioned ideas or honesty, loyalty, courage and thrift. In fact, he may be on his way to complete extinction.

In Mark Twain's day, the word "Square" was pretty wholesome and one of the finest. At that time you gave a man a square deal if you were honest. You gave him a square meal if he was hungry. You stood four-square for the rights as you saw it, and square against everything else. When you got out of debt you were square with the world. And that was when you could look your fellow man square in the eye.

Of course, we know that times change. With changes come different expressions, just as we hear new tunes and have new dances. Sometimes some of these things sound somewhat foreign. It causes one to wonder if we are importing ideas, rather than exporting them.

It has been pointed out that the famous quotes from Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and others have been practically dropped from all textbooks. In nine of the new texts, the reply of John Paul Jones to the British demand for surrender, "I have no yet begun to fight," does not even appear.

Today we have a new set of heroes. Their names are Glenn and Grissom, Shepard, Carpenter, Shirra and Cooper. These heroes are from nice, small towns with names like Sparta, Boulder, East Derry, Mitchell and Shawnee. Maybe these men are squares and maybe the reason is they have lived too far from sophisticated influences to keep from becoming squares. For who but a square would volunteer his life for his country's good? This would be the opinion of some of those who want to make fun of a square, but not these squares. We can be thankful there are still some, and hope there will be a great deal more.

The Yardener

Everyone's Fun

Yardening can be fun for everyone in the family, both large and small.

While you work on the bigger projects around the home, don't leave the children out of the fun. The solitary pit from a date will make a plant resembling a florist's palm.

Plant it in dirt, using a large container because the date roots need lots of room. Then, let the children take it from there.

It's the Law in Texas

CHILDREN IN CAMP

It's a good idea to give written consent for necessary medical care if your child leaves home for a visit or a camping trip, or if you plan to be away for any length of time.

For example, a summer camp nurse may bring a boy into a hospital with an acute case of appendicitis. But the doctor may well hesitate to go ahead and operate without the parent's consent.

Is the doctor arbitrary, and is such permission just a legal technicality? No, he is well within his rights, though he may give first aid—but only for emergency treatment where a child's health or life may be at stake. He is likely to put off follow-up care until he can reach the child's parents. A relative or baby sitter generally cannot grant consent for a child's treatment.

Even an adult must request treatment and grant consent to medical care on his own before a doctor can give it to him. Children cannot do this. By going to your doctor you show your willingness and consent to accept his treatment. Your consent is assumed also when you ask for a house call by the doctor, or if as a result of an accident you come to a hospital for emergency treatment. If you are unconscious, the doctor may well give you emergency care, yet later he should get your consent to further treatment.

Minors cannot consent to medical treatment, and except in dire emergencies their parents or guardians must give it for them.

The consent should not be broadly or loosely phrased, but should be specific as circumstances permit.

The principal reason for having the consent in writing is to avoid later misunderstandings. It is a protection both to the patient and physician.

(This newsfeature prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)

You Said It

"Down to brass tacks"

The expression means getting at the actual fact. It started in sailing. Hulls of ships were cleaned so thoroughly that the brass-colored bolts on the bottom were exposed.

Why should you buy U.S. Savings Bonds when there are so many other good investments?

To help your country is one answer—and a good one.

But Bonds have other advantages that make them worth your consideration.

For instance, they offer you just about the easiest way to save money: the Payroll Savings Plan. You just ask your employer to put part of your wages aside towards a Bond. Savings come automatically. Almost painlessly.

Another unique advantage of U.S. Savings Bonds is the way they stick with you. You can get your money any time. But if you're like most people, you'll hang onto your Savings Bonds for the big things you want in your future.

And, of course, Bonds are a safe investment—as long as there's a United States of America.

Which brings us back to your country again. Bonds help defend freedom at a time when the enemies of freedom are stronger than ever.

Buy Savings Bonds. The banks and savings institutions that sell them don't charge you a penny for the service.

Important facts about U.S. Savings Bonds

- You get $4 for every $3 at maturity
- Your Bonds are replaced free if stolen, lost or destroyed

Austin—Measles is almost as much an accepted part of childhood as bumps, bruises and abrasions. Over 90 percent of children will at some time have clinically evident measles. Although the national death rate for measles in the U. S. is relatively low, its after effects in deafness and mental crippling can be serious.

In many parts of the world measles poses a major threat. In Africa and South America the death rate among children may be as high as 25 percent.

An average of 50,626 cases of measles were reported per year in Texas during the last six years. Thousands of cases occur annually with minor epidemics appearing every other year. The epidemic pattern is based upon a new group of susceptible children capable of supporting an epidemic.

Scientists made a break through several years ago in research on the measles virus. A strain of virus was isolated in 1954. Work continued, and in the spring of this year two types of measles vaccines were licensed for manufacture. The two type vaccines—one prepared with live but greatly weakened virus, and one made with a chemically killed virus—may be administered separately or in a combination.

The live vaccine induces active immunity following a single dose and produces a mild noncommunicable measles infection. Some fever and a measles-like rash usually occur about six days after vaccination, lasting from two to five days. Clinical reactions are reduced sharply if standardized Measles Immune Globulin is given along with the attenuated vaccine but a different site and with a separate syringe. It is hoped that this vaccine will react much as an actual case of measles might. However, this is a question researcher have yet to answer.

Reactions are infrequent when the inactive vaccine is administered, ordinarily in three monthly doses. The protective effects beyond six months, however, are unknown.

Another method is to administer live vaccine from one to three months after one or two doses of inactive vaccine has been given. In this case, clinical reactions are sharply reduced and protection is increased over that of the inactivated vaccine alone.

Immunization is particularly recommended for children and those especially prone to develop serious complications.

Many questions are still to be answered in the next few years. For the present, however, vaccine is available for those who need it. Your physician can recommend the type and time for immunization.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks West and son, David, visited in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. West during the week-end.
