Murder suspects remain in Hunt County jail

Garza, 37, of Quinlan remain in the Hunt County Detention Center since the offense occurred in Hunt County.

According to the online Hunt County Jail Inmate list, Garza was booked into the jail, Sept. 11, with a bond amount of $1 million for an alleged offense of murder.

Ms. Poynter was booked into the jail, Sept. 10, with a bond amount of $500K for the alleged offense of conspiracy to commit murder. It is unknown at this time whether the two jailed suspects have writs of Habeas Corpus. As of Tues. Sept. 20, the Hunt County District Attorney's office was closed and staff members were unavailable to verify whether complaints have been filed against the suspects.

At about 10:40 p.m. on Sept. 9 the Royse City Police Department received a call that a female was attempting to stop a vehicle on roadway at FM 35 near Hunt County Country Road 2595, according to a Sept. 10 news release from Stapleton. When officers arrived, the female reported that her husband had been shot and was lying in a vehicle down the nearby dirt road. When officers arrived at the scene, they found the victim dead from a single gunshot wound. In a news release issued by Stapleton on Sept. 11, the victim was identified as Robert Poynter, a captain with the University of Texas Department since 1997.

Due to suspicious and conflicting information as the investigation progressed, a warrant for Conspiracy to Commit Murder was issued by the Royse City Police Department for the female suspect, as Poynter's wife, Chacey Tyler Poynter. Her bond was set at $500,000.

After processing information from Chacey Poynter, law enforcement officials determined identified a second suspect in the killing. He was identified as Michael Glen Garza. A search warrant was obtained, according to the second news release, and Garza's home was searched.

An arrest warrant for Garza was issued by the RCPD and the Hunt County Sheriff's Office. His bond was set at $1 million. After the murder, multiple law enforcement agencies including the RCPD, the Rockwall County Sheriff's Office, the Hunt County Sheriff's Office and the Texas Department of Public Safety were on the case. A large presence of law enforcement worked the area, searching the wooded area of the shooting in an attempt to locate the murder weapon. A helicopter also was brought in to assist with the search, according to reports.

Chancy Poynter told investigators that she and her 47-year-old husband were getting a divorce, but Stapleton said officials were not sure if either of the parties had filed. The couple lived in the Creek Phase 2 and had a 6-year-old daughter.

Stapleton confirmed that law enforcement officials are not looking for any other suspects at this time.

"This is a very active investigation and investigators are working to process many elements of this crime," the police chief said. The Chief did not indicate whether the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Department of Homeland Security was involved in the investigation.

On God's Word

by Timothy W. Burnett
Joseph and Mary as parents ...

How do we know Joseph and Mary taught Jesus the right way? Look at the 12 year-old Jesus' answer to his parents after he came up missing for three days.

According to Luke 2:42-51, they began their journey home after spending time in Jerusalem for a special holy day. During the trip back, Joseph and Mary discovered that Jesus was missing. This grieved them greatly, as they sought him out for nearly three days.

When they returned to Jerusalem, they found Jesus in the Temple sitting with the Rabbis (teachers) listening and asking questions. It helps to remember that as a first-born child, Jesus would have been presented to the Lord as a student in the Temple.

Jesus' parents found Him and said, "Son, why have you dealt with us in this way? behold, your father and I have sought you sorrowing."

The young Jesus confidently answered, "How is it that you sought me? Didn't you know that I must be about my Father's business?"

As a child, he was under total control of Joseph and his mother Mary. Here, Jesus was beginning his transition to adulthood, and was asserting himself as the young man that he was growing into.

God knew Joseph and Mary would be the perfect candidates for raising his son Jesus. And they plunged forward in their marriage against all forms of resistance, criticism, and scorn from others.

They trusted God to protect and provide for them along the way. And God lovingly and powerfully did just that -- guarded and protected them as the apple of His eye.

In Luke 1:28-39, we learn about a meek young woman who became the mother of our Lord Jesus.

She had not been with a man, and was engaged to be married to a just and meek grown man named Joseph.

The angel Gabriel came to Mary announcing that a child would be conceived in her by God in heaven. This was no doubt news to Mary, especially considering she was engaged to marry.

Notice her response. First she asked a reasonable question, "How shall this be, seeing I know not a man" (Luke 1:34). She was asking how she could have a baby without having been with a man.

The angel finished his answer by saying, "For with God nothing shall be impossible." A more accurate translation might read, "For with God no word shall be void of power."

Mary meekly responded, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word" (verse 38).

Now compare Mary's response to the angel with her first-born son's prayer to his Father during the most agonizing time of his life.

Jesus said, "Father, if you are willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but yours, be done" (Luke 22:42). Please notice that Jesus had his own will for his Father to remove the cup. But he meekly finished with, "not my will, but yours, be done."

He connects each of the attributes to neuroscience so that people can get "inside the brain" of their followers. Roberts has collaborated with some of the best and brightest leaders in the country and has included their contributions in his personal stories from his own journey in the NFL and from leading in all levels of education. Roberts prays that his words can help his readers to navigate as they set sail on their own journey to becoming a leader of significance, believing that God desires them to dream his dreams, explore his will and discover his purpose for their voyage.

The Full Metal Jacket robotics team The Chairman's Award, Dallas Regional. According to the release, the award honors the team that, in the judges estimation, best represents a model for other teams to emulate, and which embodies the goals and purpose of FIRST Robotics Competitions.

This is the most prestigious award a team can receive, and in doing so our team advanced to the Competition in St. Louis in April where we made it to the semifinals.

The team won the championship at the Texas Robot Invitational held in Houston during June. The invitation only competition routinely features some of the best robotic teams in the world. The championship banner now hangs at Rockwall High School.

The robotics team was finalist in the Texas Robo Rebot contest. Competing against top-tier programs such as the one sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) team made it to the finals and narrowly missed a victory in the third match in a best of three.

Full Metal Jacket placed second at the Texas State UIL Championship. The TRR competition served as the first ever Texas State UIL competition.

Results from the 2016 Post-Libertarianism Conservatism Debate Survey

Continued from the September 15, 2016 edition of the Rockwall County News

Daily Ekins Institute

The Cato Institute and Heritage Foundation recently co-hosted a debate in which interns from both organizations debated whether post-libertarianism is the better philosophy. At the conclusion of the debate, the Cato Institute conducted a post-debate survey of attendees finding important similarities between millennial conservative and libertarian attendees on skepticism toward government economic intervention and business regulation, but also differences in attitudes toward immigration, LGBT issues, security, privacy, foreign policy, and perceptions of bias in the justice system.

What Are Their Priority Issues?

The survey asked conservative and libertarian attendees to rate on a scale of 1 to 5 how concerned they were about nineteen different issues.

- Government spending and debt
- Taxes
- Economy/jobs
- Criminal Justice, the Police, and BlackLivesMatter

Conservative and libertarian millennial attendees tend to have different views on criminal justice reforms. However, libertarian millennial attendees tend to be more sympathetic of charges of racial bias in the justice system.

A bounding majority of libertarian millennial attendees (84%) and a majority of conservative attendees (52%) believe that other minorities do not receive equal treatment as whites in the criminal justice system.

However, they diverge considerably in whether or not they support the goals of the #BlackLivesMatter movement. A strong majority of libertarian attendees say they support the goals of BLM; in fact, 76% of conservative attendees say they oppose. Different opinions about what the BlackLivesMatter movement's goals are give these disparate views.

Majorities of both conservative attendees (55%) but far more libertarians (89%) say that "local police departments using drones, weapons, and armored vehicles" are not "necessary for law enforcement purposes" but rather are "going too far." Another 43% of conservatives say that military weapons are necessary for law enforcement, compared to 8% of libertarians. Similarly, majorities of both support eliminating mandatory minimum prison sentences for people convicted of selling or possessing drugs (59% and 76% respectively).

Build the Wall?

Majorities of both conservatives (57%) but far more libertarians (94%) say we should make it "easier" for people to immigrate to the United States. Forty-percent (40%) of conservatives oppose easing immigration restrictions and 40% also say it bothers them when they come into contact with people who speak little or no English, compared to 5% and 19% of libertarians respectively.

However, conservative and libertarian attendees diverge in how to handle illegal immigration. A majority—56%—of conservatives favor building a large wall along the border with Mexico compared to 11% of libertarians. Majorities of both conservatives (54%) and libertarians (90%) support offering some sort of legal status to illegal immigrants, however, 74% of libertarians favor offering a pathway to citizenship compared to 25% of conservatives. Forty-three (43%) of conservatives say illegal immigrants should be required to leave the country as do 8% of libertarians.

Last December, Republican nominee Donald Trump called for a temporary ban on Muslims entering the US from other countries. However, majorities of both millennial conservative and libertarian attendees oppose such a proposal, but libertarians are far more opposed by a margin of 93% to 59%. In fact, 70% of libertarians "strongly oppose" the proposal compared to 37% of conservatives.

Foreign Policy

Conservatives and libertarian attendees have disparate visions about what role the U.S. military should have in the world. While 82% of libertarian millennials want to decrease U.S. military presence around the world, only 24% of conservatives agree. Instead, 25% of conservative attendees think the United States ought to increase its global military presence and 48% would keep it at present levels.

When it comes to dealing with ISIS, conservatives want the US to take a more proactive approach. Three-fourths (77%) of conservative attendees favor sending ground troops to participate in a campaign against ISIS while instead 70% of libertarian millennial attendees oppose this action. However, these positions are not rock solid. Thirty-seven percent (37%) of conservatives say they "somewhat" support sending ground troops and 36% of libertarians "somewhat" oppose doing so.

Different visions of the US's role in the world likely explains why 88% of libertarians also favor cutting defense spending, while only 33% of conservatives agree. Instead 64% millennial conservatives oppose cutting defense spending.

While 96% of conservative attendees and 90% of libertarian attendees agree that "military service is an honorable thing to do" libertarians are about half as likely (49%) to "strongly agree" compared to conservatives (87%).

National Security and Surveillance

An overwhelming majority (85%) of libertarian attendees oppose government's "collection of telephone and internet data as part of anti-terrorism efforts,"—including 60% who strongly oppose. However, a slim majority (53%) of conservative attendees instead support such collection, while 44% oppose. Conservative support is tenuous, with only 13% who strongly support the program.

Conservative and libertarian attendees make the trade-off between freedom and security differently, explaining some of these results. While 80% of conservative millennials would "give up some personal freedom and privacy for the sake of national security" 70% of libertarian attendees would not.

Don't Tread on the Economy

While libertarians take more "liberal" positions than conservatives on a variety of issues, they are similar to conservatives on government intervention in the economy.

Both libertarians and conservatives overwhelmingly endorse the idea that government regulation of business too often does more harm than good (97% and 96%). Furthermore, 96-98% of both groups prefer a "smaller government" that offers fewer services and low taxes over a "larger government" that offers more services with high taxes.

While national polls find that about 6 in 10 Americans favor raising taxes on households making over $250,000 a year, fully 9 in 10 libertarian (89%) and conservative (91%) attendees oppose such an action, including 6 in 10 who "strongly oppose."

Free Traders?

Despite vocal criticism of free trade from major presidential candidates this election cycle, overwhelming majorities of both conservative (79%) and libertarian (97%) attendees agree that free trade must be allowed, even if domestic industries are hurt by foreign competition. Nineteen percent (19%) of conservatives and 2% of libertarians say that trade restrictions are necessary to protect domestic companies.

Should Every Kid Get a Trophy?

Belief in free market competition is underscored by the overwhelming majority of libertarians and conservatives who think that not all kids who play sports should receive trophies but only the winning players (91% and 95%, respectively). While a majority of Americans nationally agree that only the winners should get trophies, libertarian and conservative attendees are about 30 points more likely to think so.

Republican, Democrat, or neither?

At first glance, conservative millennial attendees appear much more Republican than the libertarian millennial attendees. When first asked, 80% of conservatives identify with the Republican Party, compared to 11% of libertarians. However, once independents were probed, 64% of libertarians revealed they lean Republican, while 9% are Democrats, and 95% of conservatives are Republican, while 1% are Democrats. Nevertheless, a quarter of libertarian attendees (26%) say they are completely independent of either party, compared to 4% of conservatives.

For Trump or Never Trump?

Although the conservative attendees are overwhelmingly Republican, less than half (47%) say they plan to vote for the Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump in November. Instead, nearly a quarter (21%) of conservatives say they'd vote for Libertarian presidential candidate Gary Johnson, 3% say they'll vote for Clinton, and 14% will vote for some other candidate or 15% won't vote. Libertarian attendees are far more keen on Johnson with 84% who say they'll vote for him, while only 7% plan to vote for Trump and 3% say they'll vote for Clinton, and 5% who will vote for someone else or won't vote.

Implications

Since these attendees are politically engaged and tend to lean Republican, their agreements and conflicts may portend future debates the GOP may have to confront in the future.

If these results have any external validity for party insiders in the future, the GOP will find itself largely in agreement around limiting government intervention in the economy. However, the GOP will have to contend with significant disagreements over the future of American foreign policy, balancing freedom and national security, the influence of religion on politics, its approach toward immigration and immigrants—legal or not, whether it will make concerted efforts to include LGBT people and understand the experiences of minorities in the country.

Who Won the Debate Depends on Whom You Ask

Among libertarian millennial attendees, 80% said the libertarian team won and 18% said the conservative team won.

Among conservative millennial attendees, 88% said the conservative team won and 11% said the libertarian team won.

If you combine the libertarian and conservative attendees 50% said the libertarian team won, and 47% said the conservative team won.

Among the remaining moderate, liberal, and progressive attendees, 60% said the libertarian team won and 32% said the conservative team won.

"Silent Partners" starts fund raising project for Rockwall Police Department

A crowd gathered recently on the San Jacinto Plaza to learn more about a new way to donate money to the Rockwall Police Department.

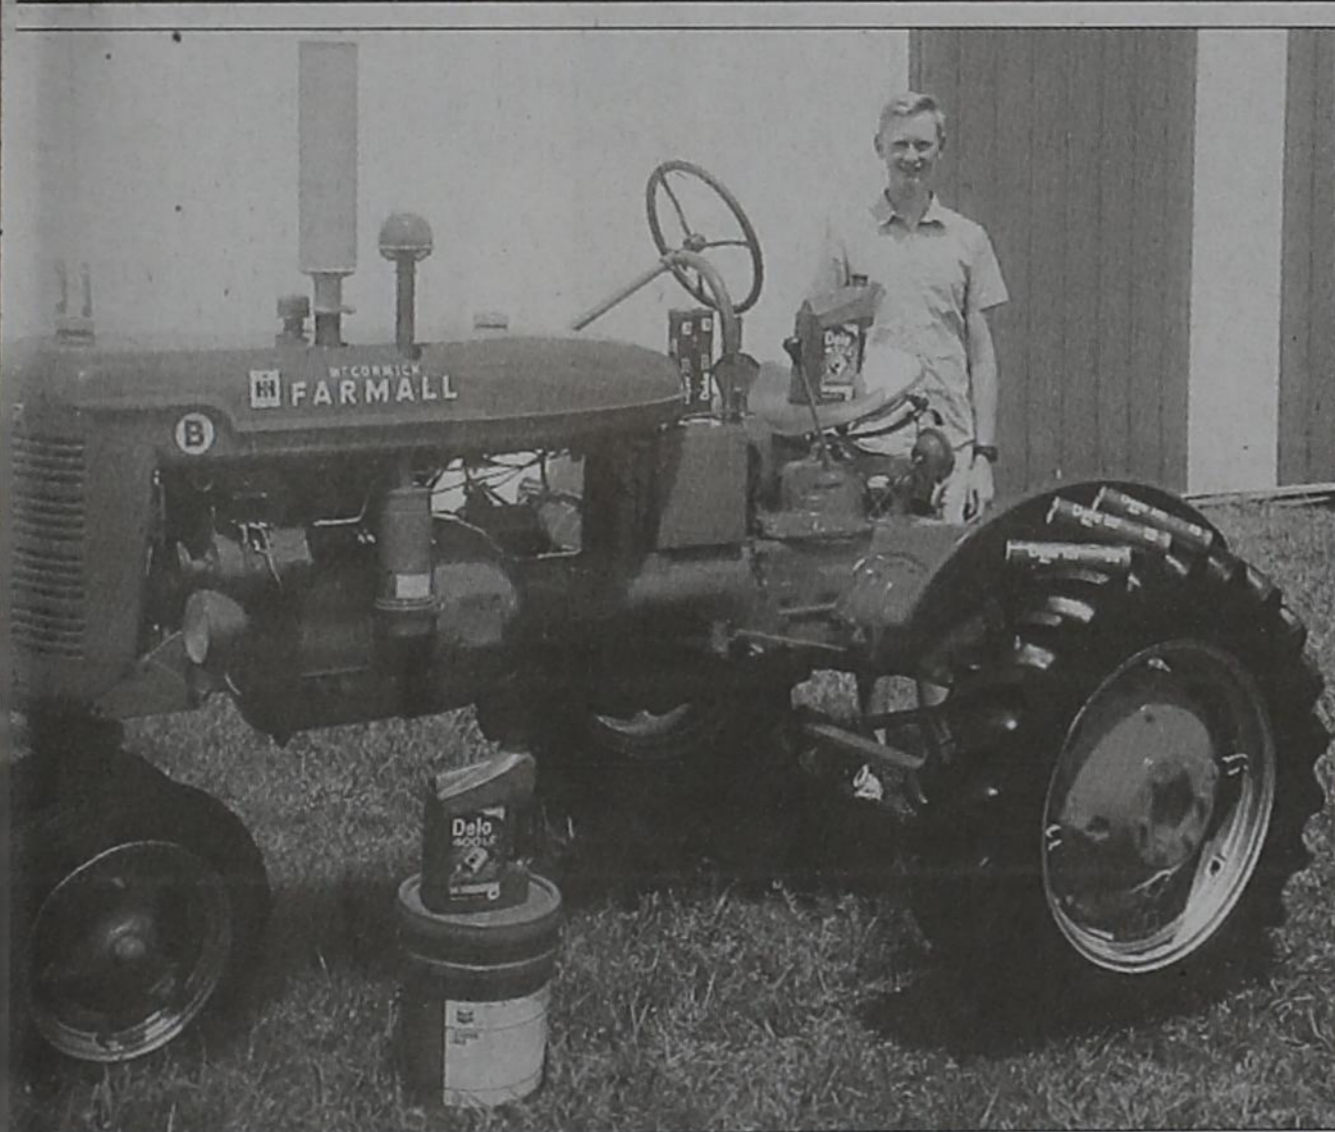

Rockwall Mayor Jim Pruitt and Police Chief Kirk Riggs spoke about the new Silent Partners initiative, a project started by a group of philanthropic residents who wanted to anonymously donate funds to support the Rockwall Police Department.

The campaign started with a couple of residents discussing the tragic attack on police in Dallas in July.

The funds received will directly benefit officers of the Rockwall Police Department for things such as assisting the families of fallen officers in Rockwall County, sending representatives to fallen officers' funerals, and supporting local non-profit organizations and college scholarships.

Contributions may be sent directly to the Rockwall Police Department at 205 W. Rusk St., Rockwall, TX 75087; specify "Silent Partners" on the check.
