ODELL, WILBARGER COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1918.

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR

See "Over The Top"

We read and hear a great deal about "OVER THE TOP". So we will show next Saturday July 13th. at Chillicothe, Matinee and night, that great 9 reel feature "Over The Top". This is said to be one of the greatest war pictures that has ever been shown. It shows how our boys in France go over the top and we can never understand just how this is done until we see this great picture. Don't fail to see it. MAJESTIC THEATER

Reporter Equipment And Subscription List Sold to Vernon Record

After this month you will not receive The Odell Reporter any more, as its equipment and subscription list has been sold to the Vernon Record. This action was taken by the Reporter publisher for several reasons. First and most important, a continue advance in price of most everything used in a printing office versus the lack of advertising patronage, makes it necessary that we make a change. Another reason we had for selling the Reporter is, that we need a short rest from newspaper work. For nearly seven years we have been almost continuously on the job and the work that necessary follows in keeping a newspaper going in a small place like Odell, is more tiresome and tedious than most people imagine.

The Vernon Record in taking over the Reporter's mailing list, will only carry out the subscription contract of the Reporter's unexpired subscribers. All subscribers of the Reporter whose subscription has expired and who know themselves indebted to the Reporter will be dropped from the list. We will carefully check our mailing list and if you are found to be paid up with the Reporter, three months, six months or a year from the first of August, you will receive the Vernon Record that long. And in case you are a subscriber of both papers, which is true in a number of instances, your subscription to the Vernon Record will be extended the number of weeks you were to receive the Reporter.

It is not necessary for us to tell you what the Vernon Record is as a newspaper, as most of you know it enjoys the reputation of being one of the best county newspapers in the state. It is the intention of the publishers of the Vernon Record to maintain a news correspondent at Odell and devote a portion of their paper each week to Odell and community.

In doing that, the publishers of the Record will naturally look to the merchants of Odell for some patronage, and in this connection we urge you to stand by them, as in that way you will still have a publicity medium for Odell.

In quitting newspaper business at Odell, we are not quitting the newspaper work, for we like it. And after a brief rest from its duties it is now our intention to locate in a better field.

During our newspaper experience in Odell, which will soon be seven years, each succeeding year seems to have drawn us closer to the people of Odell and the country surrounding. And we say this with all sincerity, there is not a person in this community, who regrets to see the Reporter stop, more than its editor regrets to end its career.

Most of our subscribers in this community have been prompt in keeping their subscriptions paid up, and wish to assure each of you, your patronage has been appreciated and that you have by your loyalty won a place in our confidence that would be hard to forget. And to the business men of Odell who have faithfully patronized the Reporter, you too, will always be remembered by us.

We will have charge of the Reporter the balance of the month and during which time, we urge all who know themselves indebted to the Reporter either by subscription or otherwise to please call and settle. We know these newspaper subscription debts are just a small item in your expenses and are often overlooked by many honest people, but a number of such debts when collected, often means a great help to the newspaper man.

Training for War.
If Englishmen considered the football field as the place to win their battles, Prussians have always held that the best way to prepare for victory is by training their young officers in the hunting field, notes a writer. Since medieval times the chase, especially on the continent of Europe, has been advocated by the school of warriors. In the old days, when men were only interested in fighting, and when there weren't really enough wars to keep a healthy feudal nobleman continuously occupied and happy, warring upon wild animals was discovered to be the next best thing to warring on humans.

Officers Ignored Orders.
Early in the war when Field Marshal John French and General Joffre were straining every nerve to hold back the German advance which they did finally at the Marne a French general, so the story goes, refused to open orders sent by an officer who had been promoted over his head. The message, like the dispatch in the Franco-Prussian war, was "lost" and a division, which was left without support, was almost annihilated. The story goes that the general was ordered shot.

Marriages in England.
The war has resulted in 200,000 English people being married between August, 1914, and June, 1917, who in the ordinary course would not have married. The marriage rate for 1917 was the highest recorded, 19.4. These figures are given out by Sir Bernard Mallet, registrar general of births, deaths and marriages in England.

LAKE YIELDS TONS OF SALT

Natural Phenomenon in South Australia Constant Source of Revenue to Its Owner.

On Yorks peninsula, in South Australia, says a writer in the Wide World, is a wonderful lake of pure salt. It is a huge depression in the earth which fills up in the winter months. In the hot summer sun the water quickly evaporates, leaving a thick deposit of almost pure salt. Seen from a distance the surface of the lake has all the appearance of being covered with a sheet of ice. That salt crust is so thick and strong that men and even carts and plows can traverse it with perfect safety. Yet below the crust there is a considerable body of sluggish water.

After the rays of the summer sun have played their part, the salt is gathered. It is just raked into heaps, and these pyramids of salt are a striking feature of the landscape. The salt is now shoveled into carts and conveyed to various works on the seaboard, to undergo the process of refining. Gathering the salt is trying work on account of the great heat and the dazzling reflection. Often it is necessary for the men to wear colored glasses to protect the eyes. After the loose salt has been collected from the surface a special kind of plow is run over it, when another harvest of the valuable material can be reaped. The yield of salt from this strange lake amounts to several thousand tons a year, and it is among the finest obtainable. The lake is several square miles in area and is naturally a very valuable property.

WILL SPLIT BIGGEST ROCKS

Seemingly Nothing in Nature is Able to Withstand Expansive Force of Tree's Roots.

This might very well be considered a nature puzzle. Why should any sensible tree apparently select a dry rock for a home when there is plenty of good soil all about in which to grow? As a matter of fact there is so little rainfall where one tree grows, in New Mexico, that it is something of a wonder to an eastern traveler how any tree, even with its roots spreading through the soil in every direction, can stand the long drought of months' duration. When a cedar tree, however, is seen to be growing out of a crack in a rock in an almost desert region the matter becomes a veritable mystery. Even under such adverse conditions, trees will split the hardest of rock. No rock can withstand the expansive force of a growing tree. Sometimes the rock is cracked off in pieces gradually, but oftentimes a big rock is split fairly in two, the tree roots relentlessly forcing their way downward. Time is no consideration to the tree and every spring it returns to the attack, as the new sap invigorates its roots and trunk, never giving a fraction of an inch of what it has once gained. The fight is a slow but entirely one-sided affair.

Give Your Child His Own Room.

In Farm and Fireside, a woman writing about children says:

"The craving for companionship is a powerful factor in the life of every boy or girl, but a certain amount of privacy and wholesome quiet is just as necessary to the child's development and happiness. I have known families where life was made miserable for everyone because of the constant bickering and quarrelling among the children. When the house was enlarged so that each one could have his own room, they suddenly lost their fretful ways, and improved rapidly in disposition. "It means a great deal to a boy or girl to know that his small possessions are sacred from the unsympathetic eyes and hands of the grown folks. I have always trained my children to respect each other's rights. Even if he hasn't a room to himself, each child has certain shelves, drawers and books sacred to his own use."

Sensible Table Discussed.

Speaking of autobiographic recipes for domestic use, there's nothing better than Benjamin Franklin's description of how the table was managed by his father when he was a boy. "At this table he took care to have some sensible friend to converse with and he always started a useful topic of discourse which might improve the minds of his children. By this means he turned our attention to the proper conduct of life and no critical notice was ever taken of the victuals on the table—whether they were cooked well or ill, whether they were in season or out of season. Thus I was brought up to be quite indifferent as to the kind of food that was set before me and to this day if I am asked after dinner to tell what I have dined upon I am scarce able to tell."

DO NOT APPEAL TO VISITOR

Writer Frankly Expresses Feeling of Disappointment at Sight of Buildings Within Kremlin Walls.

To me none of the ten churches within the Kremlin walls is impressive. Ivan Veliki towers the highest, but it is far from imposing, writes Maynard Owen Williams in the Christian Herald. From one side it resembles a tower rather than a church, yet it has no such quiet dignity as one finds in the Kutah Minar, near Delhi, or the towering dome of St. Sophia with its flanking needle minarets. The other cathedrals are dropped around with careless abandon and a nice disregard for the cost of gold leaf, but none of them dominates a vista or gathers about itself the other masses in pleasing array. The Kremlin is a mighty whole, composed of many unimposing parts. Its long red walls and splendid gates produce an effect of simple strength which cannot be found within their portals.

The interiors are as disappointing as are the groups of domes which distinguish the exteriors. None is large, none is truly intimate. The effect is of surplus gilt and multiplicity of saints which remind one of the gopurams of India. Spindle-shanked saints, whose emaciated figures seem too weak to support their gilt halos, alternate with knights in armor.

PRIMITIVE WAYS IN ARABIA

Mode of Life Differs Little From What it Was in the Time of Abraham.

It appears that in certain parts of the Arabian desert life is as primitive as in Abraham's time. Sheep are still slain to seal a vow. The salt or bread covenant is observed and when a man dies his tent is torn down and destroyed.

Old names like Joseph, Moses, Alexander, etc., are still in common use among Arabs, although pronounced "Yusuf," "Musa" and "Skandar." To divorce his wife a man may repeat the formula "Ent telek" three times; usually uttering it once makes the woman behave and the repetition is not necessary. The evil eye superstition is common, and the first injunction given a foreigner by experienced Arabian travelers is that he must not point at animals or persons in Arab settlements.

Arabs say that a man possessed of this malign power can look at a bird flying in the air and it will drop dead; that if he chooses to cast his wicked spell on a camel it may go lame, or a child may be struck blind. None of the lower class can read or write, but the Arab is noted for his ready wit and his habit of speaking in allegory.

"Swat the Rat!"

Since the introduction of the house rat in the United States they have become extremely abundant and widely distributed throughout the country, where they destroy annually many millions of dollars' worth of food products and crops. These losses occur alike in cities, villages and farmsteads. Their inroads upon food products occur in freight departments of railroads and steamboat lines, storage places of grain and food dealers, commission houses, wholesale drug houses, candy shops, bakeries, flour mills, cold-storage houses, city and country dwellings, granaries, fields and poultry yards. The loss of food and other products in the United States from this source amounts to not less than $200,000,000 annually, which amount does not include indirect losses occasioned by human disease disseminated by rats and the necessary expenditures in combating them.

Are The Packers Profiteers?

Plain Facts About The Meat Business.

The Federal Trade Commission in its recent report on war profits, stated that the five large meat packers have been profiteering and that they have a monopoly of the market.

The conclusions, if fair and just, are matters of serious concern not only to those engaged in the meat packing business but to every other citizen of our country.

The figures given on profits are misleading and the statement that the packers have a monopoly is unsupported by the facts.

The packers mentioned in the report stand ready to prove their profits reasonable and necessary.

* * * *

The meat business is one of the largest American industries. Any citizen who would familiarize himself with its details must be prepared for large totals.

The report states that the aggregate profits of four large packers were $140,000,000 for the three war years.

This sum is compared with $19,000,000 as the average annual profits before the war, making it appear that the war profit was $121,000,000 greater than the pre-war profit.

This compares a three year profit with a one-year profit—a manifestly unfair method of comparison. It is not only misleading, but the federal Trade Commission apparently has made a mistake in the figures themselves.

* * * *

The aggregate three-year profit of $140,000,000 was earned on sales of over four and a half billion dollars. It means about three cents on each dollar of sales—or a mere fraction of a cent a pound of product.

Packers' profits are a negligible factor in prices of live stock and meats. No other large business is conducted upon such small margins of profit.

* * * *

Furthermore—and this is very important—only a small portion of this profit has been paid in dividends. The balance has been put back into the business. It had to be, as you realize when you consider the problems the packers have had to solve—and solve quickly—during these war years.

To conduct this business in war times, with higher costs and the necessity of paying two or three times the former prices for live stock, has required the use of two or three times the ordinary amount of working capital. The additional profit makes only a fair return on this, and as has been stated, the larger portion of the profits earned has been used to finance huge stocks of goods and to provide additions and improvements made necessary by the enormous demands of our army and navy and the Allies.

If you are a business man you will appreciate the significance of these facts. If you are unacquainted with business, talk this matter over with some business acquaintance—with your banker, say,—and ask him to compare profits of the packing industry with those of any other large industry at the present time.

No evidence is offered by the Federal Trade Commission in support of the statement that the large packers have a monopoly. The Commission's own report shows the large number and importance of other packers.

The packers mentioned in the statement, stand ready to prove to any fair minded person that they are in keen competition with each other, and that they have no power to manipulate prices.

If this were not true they would not dare to make this positive statement.

Furthermore, government figures show that the five large packers mentioned in the report account for only about one-third of the meat business of the country.

They wish it were possible to interest you in the details of their business. Of how, for instance, they can sell dressed beef for less than the cost of the live animal, owing to utilization of by products, and of the wonderful story of the methods of distribution throughout this broad land, as well as in other countries.

The five packers mentioned feel justified in co-operating with each other to the extent of together presenting this public statement.

They have been able to do a big job for your government in its time of need; they have met all war time demands promptly and completely and they are willing to trust their case to the American people with the facts before them.
