Randy Melton Wins at Houston Show

Randy Melton of Ropesville, was one of 15 lucky boys to be a winner in the calf scramble at the Feb. 23rd matinee performance of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

Randy received a $225 certificate from Wallace Wilson of Wilson Industries to be used toward the purchase of a registered calf of his own choosing. Under the supervision of James Morris, Ag Teacher, he will feed, raise, and care for the calf until next year's show, when he will return it for judging in the calf scramble division and the junior breeding division.

To encourage and further educate 4-H and FFA boys in the raising, feeding, and breeding of high quality Texas cattle, the calf scramble was started in 1942. Since its beginning, the calf scramble has paid boys well over $1 million to buy more than 7,000 calves to feed and develop. Only half of the 388 boys taking part in this year's scramble will win in the contest.

Ropes FFA Chapter Rated Superior in Competation

Mr. Walter Labay, Vocational Agriculture Supervisor of Area I, has notified the Ropes Chapter of Future Farmers of America that the chapter has been rated superior for the school year of 1972-73. This award is given on the basis of achievements of the chapter and its members for any given school year. Completion and participation in many areas are rated and the superior rating is given to those who achieve certain goals.

The Ropes Chapter was started in 1935 and has progressed to its present level over the years. It was inactive for two years during World War II when no teacher was available. It has been active the rest of the time.

Chapter members have gone on to become professionals in many fields, not the least of these being that of successful farmers. The goals and objectives have changed with the times and adjusted to the most pressing needs of the young men who are the chapter members. The chief goals have not changed, that of teaching citizenship, leadership, cooperation, and patriotism.

South Plains Museum in Levelland is Open to Visitors Every Afternoon

The South Plains Museum, located on the west side of the square in Levelland, is a veritable storehouse of memories of the early days on the plains. Visitors are welcome to come at anytime. The museum is open from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. Tuesday thru Saturday. Classes or other groups should make prior arrangements by calling Mrs. Mary Crabtree, 894-4075, or the museum.

Prominently displayed at the front of the museum is the first printing press used in Hockley County. This press was used to print the county's first newspaper, The Ropesville Leader. Ropesville has the honor of having printed the county's first newspaper.

The South Plains Museum has collections of many early day items. These include the dental office of John Roberson, D.D.S., Cowboy relics of Wadkie Fowler, early day foreman of the Mallet Ranch; Indian artifacts, early day plow, tools, and farm machinery, carpentry tools, and musical instruments.

Other items, long gone from the local scene, include early business machines, a corn sheller, a froe used to split shingles, a Jay-eye-see bit, used for curbing the power of vicious horses, and listed in the Sears catalogue of 1905 for 15 cents.

Also, a wagon jack, greenbone cutter, home generator, gasoline iron as well as a wind powered iron, and many other interesting items from the early days.

The wild animal collection of Ray Watson, Levelland's former big game hunter, who lost his life in a plane crash, is on display in the museum. This is one of the finest animal collections in the Southwest. Included is a Kodiak bear.

Early day medical instruments, pioneer carpentry tools, and antique farm tools and machinery can also be seen.

The South Plains Museum is one of the state's best small town museums. It is your museum, and you are welcome to visit. Mrs. Mary Crabtree, receptionist, Dr. Bob Roberson, Museum president, and Mrs. Pat Grope, museum board member, are making major changes in the museum at this time, which will make it a very interesting place to visit.

WASHINGTON AND SMALL BUSINESS

AS HEARD BY HEARD

When Is The Top Reached?

With the Arabian oil producing nations raising the price of their products, there is a great deal of speculation, rumor, fact, and fancy over the rationale for these moves.

There are Washington bureaucrats who are really fuming over the matter, as well as some of the European nations.

While it perhaps is never safe to go to the bank on a single statement by any Arab leader, perhaps more attention should be paid to the statement by one of them that if the western nations reduce the prices of what they sell to the Mideast, the price of crude oil can be adjusted downward.

For years the members of the National Federation of Independent Business have voiced a viewpoint that unless there is a stop to the loading on of costs to American goods through increasing payroll taxes, and labor featherbedding, eventually this nation would reach an economic Armageddon.

Perhaps that Armageddon is here. In other words, as the United States moves more into the welfare state, loading costs onto the price of products through all manners of political schemes, the nation is pricing itself out of the market.

To some degree it probably could be argued that the Arab oil producing nations are working something akin to the American farm price parity program.

© National Federation of Independent Business

These parity programs were designed, without too much success, it is true, to assure the producers of food and fiber that they would receive supported prices that would be somewhat comparable to the prices they must pay for the goods they buy at prices inflated by increasing Social Security taxes, unemployment taxes, labor practices, and a host of other items loaded on.

So perhaps the Arab leaders, who really don't have any welfare systems in their nations, have been reasoning along the following lines. "Why should we pay through the nose for U.S. manufactured goods to support that nation's welfare system and sell our major product to them at bargain prices not weighted by the costs of a welfare system?"

While there may have grown in the U.S. a feeling that because the Arabs dress differently and have a different attitude toward monogamy, they are kind of stupid when it comes to figures, one thing is perhaps sadly overlooked.

That fact is that all over the world Arabic numerals are used in figuring. So perhaps it is rather stupid to assume that the people who developed the figures that are universally used, don't understand how to use them to figure out things for themselves. And they may be figuring when they buy U.S. goods, the price figures are too heavily weighted with the costs of American welfare programs.

Area Students Make Dean's List

Thirty-two students from the Lubbock area are among the 232 students at South Plains College to be named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the fall of 1973.

Students must have a grade point average of 3.25 and carry an academic load of at least 12 hours, said Nathan Tubb, academic dean at SPC.

A total of 54 students earned a grade point average of 4.00 or all

A's last semester at the college, he added.

Area students on the list include Robert Gonzales and Billy Odom from Ropesville; Tina Brooke of Wolfforth; Dillene Cox of Shallowater; and Enequina Oliver from Reese Air Force Base.

The Plus Years Are Good Years
People react differently to the term "senior citizen." Usually persons over 50 don't like the term. If under 40, it may be something of a joke.

Several suggestions for changing this term include "the ageless, the Social Security generation, retirees, and Golden Agers."

However, each creates objections by some group. No label fits every person over 60 or 65. Like teenagers, older citizens want to be treated as individuals, with dignity and respect.

But just as a younger person must act responsibly to deserve respect, the aged must be proud of their years, if they expect others to have pride in them.

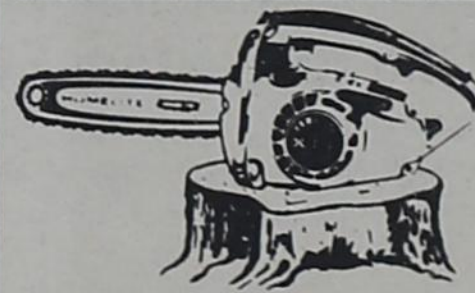

Persons older than 60 have much to be proud of as a result of their "plus years", including knowledge, experience and skills.

At the same time, they should remember that charity begins at home—and think, act and speak respectfully of others.

When oldsters treat each other with respect, younger people may

Majority Approve Present Schedule

On February 12, 1974, a survey in the form of a questionnaire was given to students in grades 8-12 and to faculty members. The purpose of the survey was to assess the opinions of students and teachers about the existing schedule and to identify possible needs that should be met with next years schedule.

We also asked for specific suggestions about how to improve the schedule next year. The results of the survey showed 65% favor the existing schedule and 82% favor an "open" campus for all high school students during the lunch hour. Also important is that 75% felt there was a need for a summer recreation program.

Although the survey was conducted on a day when we had an excessive amount of absenteeism because of the flu, 79% of the total enrollment in grades 8-12 responded to the questionnaire.

Seventh Graders First in Numbers Sense Contest

Eight of Shallowaters seventh graders went to Stanford Feb. 23 and came home as the Number One Sense champs.

The seventh graders and Mr. Duncan left at four o'clock in the morning and returned that night. The people placing were Paul Thompson, first; Tim Sinclair, third; A. Blackmon, fourth. In the competition also were Lane Giles, Kenneth Young, Dawn Hutching, and Melissa Epperson. Cheri Massey took third in Sliderule competition.

No Band Hall

Due to the lack of money the new band hall will not be built and the dressing rooms might be constructed of metal. The process of building the new school is on a slow downhill grade.

Mr. McCreary says that the bond election was successful, but the money received by the bond election will not cover expenses. He said the order of demand was first. Classrooms first, dressing rooms second and the band hall third.

Mr. McCreary also said that the classrooms would be ready by September.

Career Days Held

Seniors should be aware of a variety of interesting activities that are being planned for them at area colleges and universities.

Seniors interested in Petroleum Engineering were invited to a Career Day at Texas Tech last Saturday. Among planned activities was a tour of the campus, information about scholarships and summer employment, and a free lunch.

Seniors of Mexican-American descent are being invited to West Texas State University in Canyon on Sat., March 9. This event is being sponsored by El Chicano and will include a tour of the campus, facts on campus life and financial aid and a free banquet and dance.

Juniors and Seniors of Mexican-American descent were also invited to South Plains College on Friday, March 1. This event was sponsored by Los Tejanos and included a Queen Contest and an Oratory Contest. Students received much useful information about South Plains, plus a free dinner and dance.

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

..... by Vern Sanford

When you lose a lure while casting, or lose a fish when reeling in, you'll usually discover the end of your line is curled.

This means that your line was not knotted securely. And the weight of the lure or the fish caused the knot to untie.

Lesson learned is to test the holding power of your line by exerting a strong pull on the line as soon as you tie on a lure.

A hefty tug on the line will serve to test holding power as well as line strength. That's the time to also learn whether the line is frayed or weakened by previous use or age.

It's not only surprising, but downright disgusting, for any fisherman to cast out then watch the lure sail over the water disconnected from the line. Sure is an "empty" feeling. Makes you feel kinda silly, too.

Only consolation is it has happened to nearly every angler some time in his fishing experience. So, don't think you're alone in this unhappy experience.

Same goes for the Izaak Walton leaguer who locates the fish, sets the hook, then to his disgust reels in nothing but a bare line with a corkscrew shaped end.

Here are some tips that may help you be sure of a secure tie, especially when using monofilament line.

Most popular knot today is the "cinch knot." It is started by running about eight inches of the line through the eye of the lure (or the hook, if bait fishing). Take two turns if you'd like some added strength. Now take about six or eight turns of the short end of the line around the main line.

Next, run the end of the line through the loop formed at the end when the wrap-around procedure was started.

This next move is one often overlooked, but very important.

You've just made a big loop extending from the last turn around the line to the hook eye.

Now—run the end of the line through this big loop!

Then, while you hold the tag end of the line firmly in one hand (some anglers hold it with their teeth) pull slowly but firmly on the main line. The knot begins to take form in front of the eye of the lure. The stronger you pull . . . the tighter becomes the knot.

If you've wrapped the monofilament line about itself too loosely, you can help the knot form by pushing it together with the fingernails.

When the knot appears to be securely tied, nip off excess line with fingernail clippers (or cut with knife). We find the clipper mighty handy . . . especially when suspended from a belt loop.

Leave about an inch of excess line on the end.

If you want to add some insurance to the knot, and you're using monofilament line, burn the end of the line slightly. The flame will immediately cause the mono to "ball up" at the tip of the line.

Be careful here that none of the hot mono drips onto ANYTHING—especially you or your clothes. It gets boiling hot and sticky, quickly. The droppings are like liquid fire. If they fall on you once, you'll never let it happen again. The hot mono will adhere to the skin or clothes and leave a bad burn.

So, blow out the flaming match or lighter as quickly as the ball begins to form. Once the mono cools, the ball hardens. But don't touch it until it has had plenty of time to cool. If you're in a hurry (which all of us seem to be) dip it in water or cool with saliva.

This hard ball will prevent the line from slipping through the knot . . . and eliminate the possibility of an untie.

We've experimented with mono and find that if you'll burn a ball on the end of your line, FIRST OF ALL, before you start the tying process, you can handle the line easier. This since you have the little solid ball to work with rather than a limber line that's sometimes hard to control in the wind.

Also, it's safer to burn at the start rather than the end of the tying process.

With a little practice, you will have just enough of the line protruding from the knot . . . and a second burning is unnecessary. This eliminates the cutting or nipping of the end of the line and further burning.

Try this trick next time you want to tie on a lure, swivel, or hook.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

The taste of defeat, no matter how it is sugarcoated, is bitter. No one is more aware of that than Texas Tech's basketball squad. They came so close to the golden ring and then fell short on the last day of the season. And yet this team that nearly did what few teams in the Southwest Conference can do, win back-to-back championships, had a fine season. They fell short, but they didn't quit, ever.

A playoff between SMU and Texas would have been interesting, and I'm not sure which would have won. My guess is that the Ponies would have beaten the Horns. We'll never know.

Certainly the SMU team that played here last Saturday was an excellent one. The Ponies showed good shooting, strong rebounding, tight defense, good movement of the ball. They were opportunistic. It was a good ball club that beat the desperately trying Raiders.

"We peaked too soon," George Davidson, the able assistant coach, remarked after the game.

I think he's right. Earlier in the league race, Tech was a pretty smooth outfit. They drove for the basket. They had an excellent shooting percentage. They played good defense.

There were indications of trouble ahead, if one had only stopped to consider, such as the number of turnovers, the inexperienced bench. The lack of height if Rick Bullock or William Johnson got in foul trouble.

The early peak began to show in the last half of the race, after Tech had gone 6-1, then 8-1 early in the last half, to go two games up and apparently have the championship clinched.

Then the gremlins went to work, and probably the pivotal game was the double overtime loss to A&M. Tech came from far behind to force an overtime, had two chances to win on last second shots and finally went down to defeat. They didn't really recover.

The loss to Texas here was a bitter blow, yes, but the Aggie defeat still was the key, in my thinking.

Tech battled flu and injury in the last five games. And they began to look a little lethargic. That wasn't the case. They were trying, but things just didn't go right.

"We had to play our worst game, probably, of the season," one man said at the half of the SMU game. That wasn't true. The Raiders were in the game all the way. Had they been able to control the tempo, as Coach Myers said, they would have won, in all probability.

It wasn't until the closing minutes, when the outcome really wasn't in doubt, that the Raiders began moving the way they did at the start of the season. They cut the lead, but the drive came too late.

Ira Terrell and Zack Thiel scored the points and Oscar Roan teamed with Terrell to do a job on Bullock, but to me, Rusty Bourquein was the biggest difference. While he scored some timely points, it was his rebounding and defensive work that was impressive.

There's no point in looking back and, right now, it's too early to look ahead. No one was more disappointed than the players and coaches, who came so close, only to fall.

My hat's off to the coaches and players for a fine season, a season with thrills and excitement, good, sound basketball and a winning record. As Johnson's girl friend said after the game, "We'll win it next year."

Texas will make a good league representative to the NCAA playoffs. It wouldn't surprise me to see the Horns beat Creighton and go the finals of the regional tournament.

They have Larry Robinson and Harry Larrabee, two outstanding players, and the type of bench that a champion needs. The Horns may not be the strongest on defense, but they score well and often—and they generally are a sound basketball team.

Texas really isn't the surprise you might think. As I said after the Cotton Bowl, Texas assistant sports information director Bill Little said that "the funny thing is, we could be 11-1 just as easily as we're 1-11. There's only one game we really should have lost."

Too, the Horns shrugged off losses to Tech and SMU at home to wind up on top. Either or both losses should have done in the Orange. They didn't and they came back. I would rather see Tech win, but I give credit to Leon Black and to his team for fighting back.

From Lubbock south to Fredericksburg everyone is complaining about the drought. And, despite some scattered glowing reports from many lakes, the fishing apparently is not all that hot yet.

In Mason the other day I asked a young fellow how the fishing was and his reply didn't make me rush for a rod. He said that the tanks were in bad shape and it wasn't worth going out.

But, in the Abilene area, I heard reports of a bass angler who pulled in 42 pounds, 11 ounces, from seven bass at Santa Anna and, at Lake Fort Phantom, another bass fisherman picked up one of 7-14 and another of 6-4.

The consensus is that it will be the last week in March before the bass start spawning. Some females are being caught with immature roe showing, so just be patient.

Bass still, apparently, are in deep water, despite the heat of the past several days. After all, it take a heap of hot sun to warm deep waters, although the surface may be warm. Still, you might want to try to use jigs, while Hawaiian Wigglers are working.

In a future column, word about the Texas Tech campus at Junction, a place that brings back more memories for Aggies than Techsans, probably. This was where Bear Bryant molded his Aggie Teams.

Today, the same location is Tech's and we ran into four professors from our big school here, led by Dr. John Brand, who used to be on the athletic council and with whom we made several trips. But one of the most interesting men was Dick Mattox, most knowledgeable on baseball, because he used to be a pitcher.

Maybe, I'm just a lover of excellence in sports, but I've admired UCLA basketball because John Wooden has been, and is, a fine coach and his teams play great basketball.

Many are counting the Bruins out because of their defeats (maybe there's a parallel with Tech in their play), but I think they are in a better position, fighting for their lives, than when they were leading the nation. Their game with USC Saturday night ought to be a classic. Fortunately, we'll be able to see it on Channel 11.

Shallowater Rites Read for Mrs. Aileen C. Alexander

Mrs. Aileen C. Alexander, 70, a retired City of Lubbock Library employee, died about 11 p.m. Monday in a Hereford nursing home following an illness. She had lived in Shallowater since 1951.

Working for the city 15 years, Mrs. Alexander retired in 1969. She worked as a book repairer for the library.

First a Lubbock area resident in 1921, she moved to New Mexico in 1924. She returned to Shallowater in 1951, where her home was at 1004 14th St. She was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Services were held Thursday in W.W. Rix Chapel, with the Rev. J.M. Washington, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial was in City of Lubbock Cemetery.

Survivors are a son, James of Bountiful, Utah; two sisters, Mrs. Julia K. Genry of Shallowater, an Mrs. Wendell J. Capp of Whippany, N.J., two grandchildren and a great grandchild.

Services Held for Bobby Puryear

Bobby Leallen Puryear, 4 month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Puryear of Shallowater, died about 4 a.m. Saturday at his home. Death resulted from natural causes, Justice of the Peace Jessie Lee Vance ruled.

The child was born Oct. 23 last year in Lubbock.

Services were held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Sanders Memorial Chapel, with the Rev. Gene Hawkins, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in Lubbock, officiating and assisted by the Rev. Allan Cartrite, pastor of First Baptist Church in Shallowater.

Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Survivors include his parents; two brothers, Randy Lynn and Ross, both of the home; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Lottie Puryear of Lubbock and maternal grandfather, Franklin E. Ross of Boone, Iowa.

Dwayne Hickman Stars in New Hayloft Dinner Theater Production in Lubbock

Dwayne Hickman enjoys laughter, for himself and others. He spent nine straight years on TV creating laughter for an average of 30 million viewers each week and loved every minute of it.

Dwayne started in show business at the age of eleven, mainly at the insistence of his brother who had been an actor from the age of six. He has appeared in several movies, but is most remembered for his rolls as Chuck in "The Bob Cummings Show" that ran for five years, and as "Dobie Gilles" for four years.

Dwayne gave up show business some years ago to accept an executive position with the Howard Hughes Hotels in Las Vegas. He was appointed director of advertising and promotion at the Landmark, where he spent two years.

Following this, Dwayne decided to go on his own in business. After a year, however, he decided he would rather be back in show business and that is where he is now.

Dwayne Hickman is currently appearing in the Hayloft Dinner Theater's production of "Sunday In New York", a comedy about a small town girl who heads for the big city to catch a man. His co-stars are Paula Key and John Perryman, both experienced actors from California, and Phil Weyland, Richard Maggi and Anne Lousteau Geary, all familiar to Lubbock theater audiences.

The Hayloft Dinner Theater is located 2 miles west of Lubbock on the Brownfield Highway. Make your plans now to attend "Sunday In New York".

1,213 adult leaders are members of the Caprock Council which is supported by federated and nonfederated campaigns through-out the Council.

The annual cookie sale, just concluded, provides proceeds for camp maintenance and development, camp equipment, programs. The Council has two camps, Camp Rio Blanco near Crosbyton and Camp Haynes near Silverton, and summer day camping is offered at 17 sites in the Council.

Miss Pat Harris is executive director of the Caprock Council which covers 40,704 square miles. Assisting her is a director of program services, four field directors, a registrar-bookkeeper, and a secretary.

Each of the seven days of Girl Scout Week are service days and have a special meaning for Girl Scouts. The days are observed in various ways by girls and troops. Girl Scout Sunday, March 10, girls are encouraged to attend the church of their choice, in uniform.

change their somewhat negative attitudes about aging.

It's an important step in helping some people stop seeing "over 60" as something to joke about or fear.

While these added years are to enjoy and cherish, no man is an island. Older persons don't live in a vacuum unless they've been written off either by themselves or others.

Families and communities sometimes do this simply by excluding the older adult from family plans, organizations and public planning.

To avoid this, make sure they're included in all community activities from improvement projects to civic drives. Older adults are a valuable asset that's often overlooked.

On Grandpa's Farm

Scott Hafen, 5, is usually on the serious side. But he brightens visibly when he visits his grandparents' farm near his home in Las Vegas, Nev. It's not too surprising that Scott is often less cheery than in these photographs.

Born with severe birth defects, he is partially paralyzed and has had to undergo several operations for open spine and hydrocephalus.

Still, life's not so bad after all, when he can look out on the world from a tall haystack, kid around with big sister, Sondra, and feed a thirsty calf.

Scott, 1974 March of Dimes National Poster Child, represents some 250,000 children born every year in the United States with birth defects.
